'Murder,' She Cries, Seek British Earl

LONDON (UPI)— Scotland Yard issued a nationwide alert Saturday for the seventh Earl of Lucan in the fatal bludgeoning of his children's nurse and the beating of his estranged wife.

Detectives theorized the death of nurse Sandra Rivett, 29, may have come about through mistaken identity. In the dark or from the back, her killer may have believed he was attacking Lady Lucan, 35. The two women resembled each other in looks, height and weight.

Police questioned the pretty countess Saturday but released no details. She was in St George's hospital with head injuries. Her condition was described as satisfactory.

Scotland ard still said only that they wanted to find Lord Lucan, 39, to tell him about the case. But they issued his description to all police stations, airports and seaports.

Lord Lucan, nicknamed "Lucky" Lucan for his exploits at the gaming table, is a dashing member of one of Britain's most aritocratic families. He once was considered for the part of secret agent James Bond in a film.

He and his wife have been separated for more than a year.

The earl is the great-grandson of the third Lord Lucan, who led the storied charge of the Light Brigade into the "Valley of Death" at the Battle of Balaclava in the Crimean War.

LORD AND LADY LUCAN (UPI)

Police said Lucan disappeared from his usual haunts the night of the killIng, He failed to show up at a dinner date after reserving a table for four at the Clermont gaming club in Berkeley Square.

About 10:30 p.m. Thursday night Lady Lucan staggered into a pub near her home in the fashionable Belgravia section of London. Blood was streaming from her head.

She cried out. "Murder, murder...my children...my nanny's been murdered ...he's in the house."

In a back room of Lady Lucan's home police constables found the horribly battered body of the nurse stuffed into a canvas tent bag. She had been hired only a few weeks earlier to look after the Lucan's three children, Lady Frances, 10, Lord Bingham, 7, and Lady Camilla, 4.

Police said the children apparently slept on unaware upstairs while the killer beat Mrs. Rivett to death with a lead pipe and turned on their mother.

Trying To Beat Tuesday Deadline

Progress in Coal Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Negotiators for a new nationwide contract for more than 100,000 soft-coal miners made progress Saturday toward agreement on a new pact, but both union and industry officials agreed there were "some knotty problems to be resolved" before Tuesday's strike deadline.

After two sessions Saturday, the bargainers recessed talks until 9:30 a.m. EST today.

"We're moving," said United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller after the sessions, adding that both sides were drafting language for consideration at today's sessions.

"We still have the economic package andone or two other serious items," Miller said.

The current three-year contract expires at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday. A strike would affect miners in 25 states.

A union spokesman later, however, warned against over optimism about a quick settlement.

"We're still not hovering on the brink of settlement, but we're making progress," he said. "We're not drafting language on the nitty-gritty."

Miller has indicated that a strike of at least two weeks is almost certain because, for the first time in its history, the union's rank-and-file must ratify the agreement and the UMW has a long-standing tradition of "no contract, no work."

Guy Farmer, chief spokesman for the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, said the negotiators "still have some knotty problems to be resolved."

Farmer said an agreement before tonight was "not very likely," but that he is still hoping for settlement before the contract expires.

Neither Miller nor Farmer anticipated any breakoff in talks.

Farmer said the negotiators had reached tentative agreement on a number of issues, includinf a cost of living clause, but added "we have a long way to go" to complete a contract.

He said that details of the escalator clause, one of the major union demands, have not yet been worked out.

While the group was in session, several hundred demonstrators from a group called "Workers Action Movement" marched a block away from the hotel, chanting "Smash the bosses and their greed, coal miners take the lead." The group, marching to the White House ato demonstrate for a 30-hour work week, did not include UMW miners.

About 2,000 miners have already left their jobs, primarily in eastern Ohio and West Virginia, but their action was unofficial.

Although both sides have indicated progress in the talks, the virtual certainty of a shortterm walkout has brought the likelihood of resultant layoffs in related industries.

A strike was expected to lead to almost immediate layoffs in the railroad industry which hauls most of the nation's coal. Coal accounts for about 25 per cent of all rail tonnage and about 10 per cent of its revenue.

Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton has forecast "potential problems of supply" of coal for energy and heating for some hospitals, schools and state institutions even in a strike of only two weeks to one month duration.

Woodstock Rejects Sewers In Referendum Balloting

By WADE BURKHART

WOODSTOCK

Town of Woodstock property owners, by an overwhelming margin of nearly three to one, have turned thumbs down on proceeding with a $2.5 million plan to solve Woodstock's sewage problems, in an advisory referendum concluded Saturday.

According to the ground rules for the referendum, only property owners in the town, the people who would have to pay for the plan if it were to go through, could vote: 1,199 of them voted, and 875 of them were against it. Only 324 voted to have the board authorize completion of a final report on the project.

The referendum was only advisory, and does not bind the town board. However, the enormity of the opposition that surfaced in the referendum may have killed the plan.

Speaking of the plan, Councilwoman Val Cadden said, "I don't see how we can go ahead now."

The plan referendum voters rejected would have called for a single large sewage treatment plant, with the initial area serviced to be the town's central area, the one most overburdened by wastes.

The project's estimated $2.5 million cost would have been spread over 40 years, and counting interest that would have soared to $8 million, a figure opponents of the plan strongly objected to.

Both proponents and opponents of the plan agree that Woodstock has a sewage problem of major proportions. The town's sewage is now handled solely by privately-owned septic tanks With the years and with growth, many of those tanks and their leach fields have been overburdened, with bad smells and polluted waterways the result.

Dr. Bartholmew B. Dutto, commissioner of the Ulster County Health Department, has raised the spectre of closed businesses and evacuated homes if diseases are spread from the improperly treated wastes.

The town board's problem now is to decide what solution to select for the sewage problem, with their first choice so heartily disliked by the people. Supervisor Verner L. May said the board would be analyzing the figures before deciding that.

Saying the number of people participating in the referendum constituted a "significant vote," May said Saturday, "It definitely means the people do not want that plan, or don't want ot spend the money for it."

Asked what the vote meant to her, Ms. Cadden said, "It tells me we have to get out and clean up the prolems on an individual basis." May said "going out against the individual offenders" seemed to be the town's next best choice, but the procedures for that had to be reviewed before any decisions were made.

Before the vote,which was conducted Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, there was much opposition to the plan from residents of the town's outlying areas, who said they were going to have to pay for something that would benefit the central area and not them.

That point of view was clearly demonstrated in the referendum, when the "upper district" vote—that of the outlying areas—went against the plan solidly, with only 63 in its favor, and 371 against. Zena voted 77 for to 196 against, and the center of town was 184 for to 308 against.

The majority of those who voted in the referendum waited until Saturday to do so. Only 200 voted Thursday, and another 396 voted Friday. Saturday's vote totalled 603.

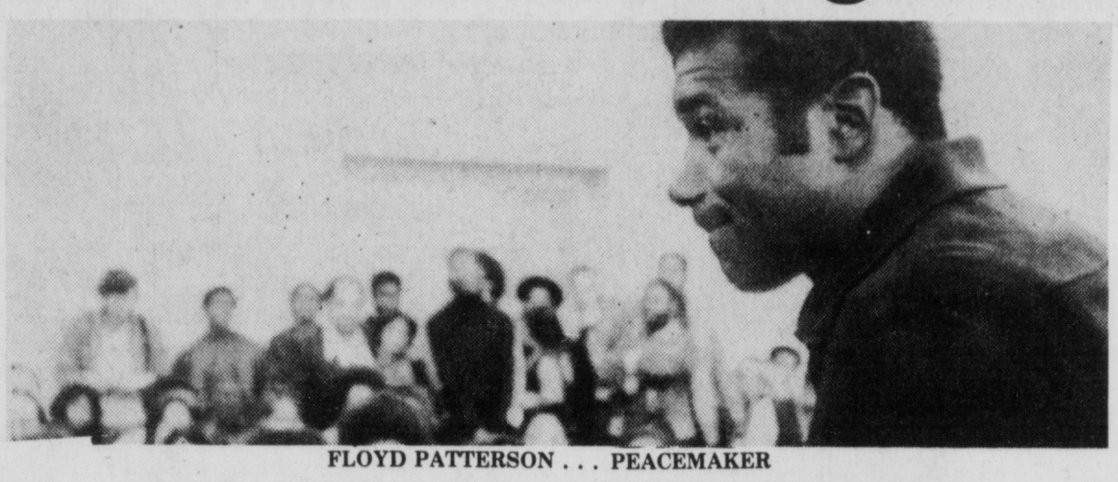
Patterson Eases Newburgh Tensions

NEWBURGH

Apparent tranquility returned to Newburgh Saturday after racial disturbances since Monday night prompted city officials to impose an 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew.

Former heavyweight boxing champion Floyd Patterson of New Paltz met with about 100 black teenagers and community leaders Friday night and an aggreement with city officials was reached allowing black and Puerto Rican youths wearing white armbands to patrol their own neighborhoods and maintain order.

The Newburgh City Council is scheduled for a decision-making meeting today to deal with the possible continuation of the curfew, imposed Thursday night after several persons were reported injured in the city's predominantly black northeast section.



FLOYD PATTERSON . . . PEACEMAKER

At Friday's meeting, many persons charged the local school board with racism and demanded the hiring of more black and Spanish-speaking persons by the city police force.

There is now one black policeman on the 70-man force; minorities are judged to constitute roughly half of the city's 26,000 population. At least two blacks and four persons with Spanish surnames were among 39 applicants who took a three-hour examination for prospective policemen at the high school Saturday.

One opinion from a black community leader was quoted by UPI: "The curfew is an affront to the black community We don't appreciate cops carrying shotguns and tear gas telling us to go indoors when nobody is doing anything."

Police said Saturday night that there has been no new arrests or disturbances since Thursday night. "It's very quiet now," a police lieutenant told The Freeman. "We have been getting good cooperation on the curfew from almost everyone."

The problems have stemmed from a fight Monday night between black and white teenagers at a rock "battle of the bands" contest at Newburgh Free Academy, when whites reportedly protested the awarding of first prize to a black band.

Further violence Wednesday night and Thursday caused the city fathers to impose the ban on travel in the city that reduced streets to an eerie silence with nearly 100 riot police, including city police and sheriff's deputies, arresting 13 persons for curfew violations.

Since the trouble began, at least 23 persons have been injured, none seriously, and about 25 have been arrested on a variety of charges.

Watergate Doctors to Examine Nixon

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Richard Nixon Saturday continued his slow recovery from surgery, partial lung tissue collapse and a bout with pneumonia.

The next medical statement on the former President's condition was scheduled for Monday morning.

His personal physician, Dr. John C. Lungren, said the former President was well enough to begin receiving anticoagulant treatment this weekend for the first time since his surgery 11 days ago.

Nixon's daughter, Tricia Cox, attending the Harvard-Princeton football game Saturday at Princeton, N.J. with her husband, Edward, was asked about her father's condition.

"We almost lost him," she said, her voice starting to break.

She said her father should be moving about more in a week or so and perhaps discharged from the hospital in two weeks. She said she believed he would need six months to recuperate.

Nixon had been subpoenaed by both prosecution and defense in the trial in Washington. But his lawyers hve asked that he be excused saying his physical condition was too poor to allow him even to give a written deposition for at least two or three months.

Lungren, made no immediate comment on Sirica's action, but had said in the past there was no need for outside doctors to check his prognosis and recommendation that Nixon not testify for several months.

A single word — "Gemstone" — could play a pivotal role next week in the Watergate cover-up trial.

The question is whether former White House Chief of Staff H.R. "Bob" Haldeman spoke that crucial word during a conversation with Nixon in the Oval Office the morning of June 23, 1972—just six days after the original Watergate arrests.

If jury members determine that he did, they might conclude he knew about the bugging operation, was part of a criminal conspiracy to hush it up and should go to jail.

Katrine Campout Ends in Tragedy For Area Youth

LAKE KATRINE

Four teenage boys camping out in their homemade fort in the woods. It sounded like fun, but ended in a tragic death for one and injury for another.

The body of Randy I. France, 17, of 5005, Route 9W, Saugerties, was recovered from the burned out shack in Lake Katrine Saturday after an early morning fire destroyed the wooden building and took his life.

According to state police, who investigated the tragedy, France and three other boys had gone to sleep in the hut on property owned by Michael Sabino of Box 168, Lake Katrine.

Calvin J. Plummer, 17, of Lake Katrine, had hurt his foot that night while camping, and left the shack to go home at about 1:30 a.m.

At about 4 a.m., 15-year -old Roert Scully of Lake Katrine awoke when he felt ill, and saw the wooden wall adjacent to a 55-gallon drum "fireplace" alive with flames.

Police said he immediately left the shack and began shouting for the others to get out. Patrick Bridges, 14, of Route 3, Saugerties, heard the commotion and got out. France did not.

Connie Francis Attacked

Nassau County police have arrested a man identified by singer Connie Francis as being the one who entered her Jericho, L.I. motel room Friday, ripping off her nightgown at knifepoint and raping her. Police did not reveal the man's identity. The 35-year-old pop singer, whose million sellers were heard primarily in the 1950s and 1960s, was reportedly bound and covered with a mattress. The assailant fled with a $6,000 mink coat and jewelry. (UPI)

Veterans Day . . . Return to Traditional Ceremony

KINGSTON — By changing one word in a 28-year-old resolution, the United States Congress in 1954 re-named the day this nation had traditionally set aside for honoring its war veterans.

On June 1, 1954, Congress, acting on a proposal made by Representative Edwin K. Rees of Kansas, changed Armistice Day to Veterans Day.

And here in Kingston, the traditional ceremony marking Veterans Day will be observed during the 11 a.m. rites held in front of the Old City Hall on Broadway, near the war memorials.

Donald G. Moore, state veteran counselor of the New York State Division of Veterans Affairs, located at 300 Flatbush Avenue, reports that additional significance was added to Veterans Day in 1958 when two more unidentified American war dead were brought to Arlington Cemetery from overseas and interred beside the World War I soldier.

One was killed in World War II, the other in Korea. To honor the three, symbolic of all Americans who gave their lives, a U. S. Army honor guard—the first Battalion, Third Infantry (Old Guard) — keeps day and night vigil. The tribute honors U. S. wars.

Fighting in World War I had ended at 11 a.m. on Nov. 11 1918. Two years later, France and England chose Nov. 11, then known as Armistice Day, as the time for placing an unknown soldier of that war in each nations highest place of honor. France chose the Arch de Triumph. England selected Westminster Abbey. The following year on Nov. 11, 1921, an American soldier whose name was "known only to God" was buried at Arlington Cemetery.

In 1926, Armistice Day was made the official name for Nov. 11. Twelve years later, 1938, another Congressional resolution made the date a national holiday.

If the idealistic hope had been realized that World War I was "The War to End All Wars," Nov. 11 might still be called Armistice Day. But only two years after the holiday was proclaimed, World War II broke out in Europe and shattered the dream. Sixteen and one-half million Americans took part. Four hundred and six thousand died. The families and friends of those dead longed for a way to honor their memory. The resolution introduced by Congressman Rees provided the answer.

When President Eisenhowe signed the bill proclaiming Nov 11, Veterans Day, he called for Americans everywhere to rededicate themselves to the cause of peace. He proclaimed the day an occasion for honoring veterans of all wars, a group that numbers more than 39 million of whome more than 29 million are still alive. Living veterans and their families, plus the living dependents of deceased veterans, make up about one-half the population of the United States.

Focal point for Veterans Day observance continues to be the Arlington Memorial Amphitheater built around the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington National Cemetery. The site, established in 1864 and now operated by the Department of Defense, lies on property that once belonged to General Robert E. Lee.

At 11 a.m. on Veteran's Day, a combined color guard representing all military services, presents arms at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in his honor. The nation's tribute to its war dead is symbolized by the laying of a Presidential wreath. The bugler sounds "Taps." The balance of the ceremony, which includes a brief address, takes place at the Amphitheater.

Veterans Day ceremonies at Arlington and elsewhere in the nation are coordinated by the President's Veterans Day National Committee. Chaired by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs — the group has an executive committee which includes representative of 10 national veterans organizations.

The Governor of each State appoints a Veterans Day chairman who works in cooperation with the National Committee in planning and projecting appropriate ceremonies within his State.

In New York State, Governor Malcolm Wilson, has designated State Director of Veterans' Affairs, Frank V. Votto, as chairman.

County Conducting Extensive Renovation

By LYNN MULVANEY

KINGSTON — Preliminary drawings for the renovation of the old County Jail behind the Court House on Wall Street in Kingston will be unveiled Tuesday.

The facility is to be used for an additional two to three court rooms, a new court library, a waiting room and deliberation room for jurors, chambers for judges and offices for judiciary staff.

The basement area will be utilized and a corridor to connect the two buildings is planned.

The renovation, which is estimated to run in the neighborhood of $600,000 to $700,000, will provide the county with much needed court room and other space, bringing the total number of court rooms to five or six. There are presently three in use.

Overcrowding continues to exist in most areas for various county buildings but steps have been and are continuing to be taken to alleviate the situation.

The crux of the problem is the Social Services Department which is ever expanding to the point where it is anticipated that it will either require the entire six floors of the County Office Building or the entire department will have to be moved elsewhere.

The Surrogate offices, County Clerk and Probation Departments are also reportedly in dire need of additional room.

Meanwhile, a number of changes in department locations have been in progress throughout the year with an eye toward more efficient operation of county government.

The Highway Department has been at work consolidating its operation at one site at the Quarry off Hurley Avenue. New garages have been built in order to get all the equipment under roofs. A new administration building is also planned for the future. The majority of the construction is being carried out by employes of the Highway Department.

In the interim, the Data Processing Department has moved from the County Office Building basement to the Manor Avenue Garage which had been occupied by the Highway Department.

It is also anticipated that the Real Property Tax Service Agency will utilize some storage space for its records at the Manor Avenue building.

The Buildings Committee has also unanimously recommended that the Flatbush Avenue Building (the former infirmary) be renovated to house the entire Health Department. Such a move is subject to legislative approval.

Earlier this year a number of departments formerly located in the County Office Building were moved to the Flatbush Avenue site including: Civil Defense, Veteran's Service Agency, Manpower Council, the Environmental Sanitation Department of the Health Department and the Vocational Rehabilitation Office (a state agency).

The move was made to allow more space for the welfare, and probation offices and chambers and court room for Ulster County's new Family Court Judge.

The committee, of which Robert H. Kuhlmann (R-Dist. 8) is chairman, has requested the Social Services Department and its legislative committee to make recommendations on how "to provide quarters to house their department, which will be adequate for the next ten to 20 years."

It is also expected that the committee will consider moving the Chest Clinic from Golden Hill to the Flatbush Building.

Surplus Cited, Tax Cut Asked

TOWN OF ULSTER — Based on the current county surplus, two officers of the Town of Ulster Democratic Committee, have called for a county tax cut in 1975.

In reviewing the background for their request Kenneth Dargis Chairman, and Janet Yallum, Vice-Chairman of the Town of Ulster Democratic Committee, stated "about a year ago it became clear that if the Republicans retained their majority in the County Legislature they planned a major tax increase. This was surprising since at that time there was about 4 million dollars of surplus funds in the county treasury. It should be remembered that just before the 1973 elections Dargis, a candidate for the legislature, circulated a "Position Paper" warning the county taxpayers of a possible tax increase.

What happened last year is now history. The Republicans retained their majority and then proceeded to raise taxes even though it was public knowledge that there was over $4 million dollars in surplus funds."

Yallum and Dargis concuded by saying; "Although it is difficult to understand why the Republicans passed a tax increase it is not too hard to accept the fact that the taxpayer is overburdened. It is time therefore, that the Republican majority accept their responsibility to the people by admitting their mistake by including a tax cut in this year's budget."

Lt. Calley Now a Free Man

COLUMBUS, GA. (UPI) — Less than four years after he was sentenced to life imprisonment for murdering 22 civilians at My Lai, former Army Lt. William L. Calley Jr. walked out of court Saturday a free man and fervently acknowledged well wishers with, "Thank you, thank you."

The 31-year-old soldier, the only U.S. officer convicted for the 1968 slaughter in which as many as 500 South Vietnamese civilians lost their lives, eventually won his freedom through the civilian courts after the military had rejected his appeals.

U.S. District Judge J. Robert Elliott released the baby-faced former infantryman under a $1,000 personal recognizance bond that amounted to little more than a formality.

The Army, less that 24 hours before, had announced it was granting Calley a parole, effective Nov. 19, no matter what the courts did. Army attorneys thus did not contest the setting of bond Saturday.

"I'm going to relax and do what free people do," Calley said through his attorneys when asked about his future plans. He said he would attend a Methodist Church today, but refused to say which of the 25 Methodist churches in the Columbus area it would be.

Calley's attorneys refused to let him speak directly to newsmen in fear something he said might possibily be used against him at a future date, but said he planned to make his home in the Columbus area and would "seek gainful employment." There have been reports he might go into the construction business.

Calley contended throughout that he was guilty of no wrongdoing at My Lai —that the Vietnamese village had been pinpointed as a Viet Cong stronghold and that he was merely carrying out the orders of his superiors when he led an infantry platoon on a sweep through the hamlet. The exact number killed in the action has never been firmly established, but estimates have ranged up to 500.

The former lieutenant was convicted and on March 29, 1971, and drew a life term. This sentence was cut to 20 years and finally to 10 years under the military appeals process. But there the Army's leniency ended.

Calley then turned to the civilian courts and to Judge Elliott.

At one point while Elliott had the case under consideration, he set Calley free on bail, but the Army went into appeals court and succeeded in getting the bail revoked. Calley, who had been confined in his bachelor officer quarters here at Ft. Benning for almost three years, was then taken to the military prison at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan., to finish serving his term.

On Sept. 25 Elliott overturned Calley's court-martial conviction on grounds that massive publicity in the case had prevented him from receiving a fair trial. Elliott again ordered Calley freed by the Army again filed an appeal with 5th U.S. Circuit Court of appeals in New Orleans.

Friday, the appeals court agreed Calley should be released on bond. He was then fown to Columbus from Leavenworth in the middle of the night so he could be on hand for a hearing Saturday before Elliott.

The session lasted only 16 minutes and Elliott wryly commented on how history was repeatng itself.

"We've come full circle so here this court sits to do exactly what this court did last February (grant bond)," Elliott said.

He also noted the Army had ordered Calley paroled and said: "That's, to me an interesting thought, because it's directly contrary to what the Army has been telling the Circuit Court of Appeals. The Army's been telling the Circuit Court that my freeing Mr. Calley from Leavenworth would wreck the Army, destroy the nation."

Pope Cautions Against Birth Control

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI told industrialized nations at the World Food Conference Saturday that imposing birth control on poor nations to solve hunger problems would be a new form of warfare.

"The threat of hunger and the burden of malnutrition are not an inevitable destiny," the Roman Catholic leader said and appealed for cuts in armaments budgets and the savings channeled into food aid.

"No more war, war never again! No more hunger, hunger never again!" the 77-year-old Pope exhorted the 2,000 delegates, observers and their families.

"It is inadmissible that those who have control of the wealth and resources of mankind should try to resolve the problem of hunger by forbidding the poor to be born or by leaving to die of hunger children whose parents do not fit into the framework of theoretical plans based on pure hypotheses about mankind's future.

"In times gone by, nations used to make war to seize their neighbors' riches.

"But is it not a new form of warfare to impose a restrictive demographic policy on nations to ensure they will not claim their just share of the earth's goods?"

The pontiff joined China and the Soviet Union in attacking what he called "an irrational and one-sided campaign against demographic growth" as an alleged primary cause of the global food crsis.

He did not name any countries, but in the past has been critical of U.S. policies aimed at getting developing countries to control their birth rates.

Speaking in French from a throne-like armchair in the Vatican's modernistic audience hall, the Pope blamed increased prices of foodstuffs and production materials as a chief cause of the present crisis and criticized profit motives.

Kissinger to Brief Ford Today

MADRID (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger flew home Saturday from an 18day, 18-country, 26,880-mile mission which may stimulate new Middle East talks and U.S.-Soviet arms negotiations, diplomatic officials said.

Kissinger took off from the U.S. Air Force base at Torrejon near Madrid after a short talk with Spanish Foreign Minister Pedro Cortina. He was expected to brief President Ford today at Camp David on the results of his trip.

Officials accompanying Kissinger said the Moscow visit of Oct. 23-27, which began the odyssey, may be the most vital because there is a "50-50 chance" that it laid the basis for a new U.S.-Soviet strategic arms agreement.

They were also optimistic about the Middle East, indicating that a period of "secret diplomacy" will probably now begin.

But the officials acknowledged that the Middle East situation remained extremely delicate, especially in view of the hard line Arab summit conference in Rabat late last month.

The biggest disappointment of the journey, one official said, was Kissinger's inability to conclude a painstakingly negotiated package of proposals with Turkey for moving the Cyprus conflict toward a peaceful solution.

It was understood that the proposals, which Kissinger had previously worked out between Turkish Foreign Minister Turan Gunes and Greek Foreign Minister George Mavros at the United Nations last month, included a withdrawal of some Turkish troops from Cyprus and a resumption of talks on Cyprus between Greece and Turkey.

Kissinger, however, was forced to cancel his trip to Ankara scheduled for Friday and Saturday because of internal Turkish cabinet difficulties.

His Oct. 27-30 visit to India was seen as putting U.S. Indian relations on the firmest basis since the 1971 Indo-Pakistan war, during which America had "tilted" toward Pakistan.

True to form, Kissinger will have very little rest after he gets home. He leaves Washington a week from today with President Ford for Japan, South Korea and a summit meeting with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev Nov. 23-24 near the Soviet Pacific port of Vladivostok.

Kissinger will almost certainly break away from these talks to fly to Peking for conferences with Chinese leaders.

In all, Kissinger averaged a country a day on his whirlwind 18-day tour, staying as long as four days in the Soviet Union and just long enough in Denmark for his plane to be refueled.

The 18 countries he visited during his whirlwind voyage: Denmark, the Soviet Union, India, Bangladesh, Pakistan, Afghanistan, Iran, Romania, Yugoslavia, Italy, the Vatican, Saudi Arabia, Jordan, Israel, Egypt, Syria, Tunisia and Spain.

Carey's Daughter Engaged

Governor-elect Hugh L. Carey announced Saturday the engagement of his daughter Alexandria to Hank McManus, assistant commissioner and director of community services for the New York City Department of Sanitation. Miss Carey, shown in a recent photo, formerly worked in the publicity department of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington. Most recently, she worked full time for her father's gubernatorial campaign which ended with his landslide victory over incumbent Gov. Malcolm Wilson. (UPI)

John Connally 'Bug' Revealed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — FBI agents bugging telephones to gather foreign intelligence information once eavesdropped on a conversation that included former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally, according to Special Watergate Prosecutor Henry B. Ruth Jr.

Ruth revealed few details other than to say Connally was overheard by the FBI, that the tap was approved by the attorney general, and that Connally was not the specific target of any wiretapping or bugging.

Connally, a former governor of Texas and the only Democratic member of Richard Nixon's Cabinet, was indicted on July 29 for perjury, conspiracy and bribery. He is charged with accepting $10,000 from Jake Jacobsen, a representative of Associated Milk Producers Inc., as a payoff for getting the Nixon administration to increase price supports for raw milk on March 23, 1971. He is also charged with lying about it to a Senate committee and a grand jury.

One of Connally's pretrial motions asked whether he had been the subject of any wiretapping. Ruth replied that government agencies had been asked, with this result: "The defendant was overheard in one instance during the course of an electronic surveillance authorized by the attorney general, acting for the President, to gather foreign intelligence information."

The date was not given.

Connally had asked if he had been bugged because information obtained from an illegal surveillance cannot be used as evidence in court. Ruth, arguing the tap was legal, filed details "in camera," meaning that only U.S District Judge George L. Hart Jr. would have access to them.

Hart scheduled oral arguments on Nov. 22. Prosecutor Frank M. Tuerkheimer, who has been heading the milk investigation, estimated the trial would last three weeks.

Ruth's 19-page memo also opposed Connally's attempts to dismiss parts of the indictment although he said the two sides had reached an agreement — to be disclosed at oral arguments —on a motion to dismiss the two counts charging Connally with receiving $5,000 on two occasions.

Ruth also opposed Connally's motion to move the trial to San Antonio, Tex., where the AMPI is headquartered. That motion was based on pretrial publicity.

"Since defendant is a thrice elected governor of Texas and presumably a popular figure in the state," Ruth said, "transfer of this case to San Antonio, therefore, would be less likely to afford defendant a relief from the publicity of which he seemingly complains than it would be to insure him of constant publicity."

AMA May Endorse Health Insurance

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American Medical Association, faced with the loss of at least 54 congressional supporters, may switch sides and endorse compulsory health insurance.

"We would be foolish not to consider mandated coverage," the association's chief health insurance spokesman said in an interview.

The AMA has supported an alternative "Medicredit" proposal which would provide voluntary coverage in the form of income tax credits for the poor.

But 38 Medicredit supporters in Congress were defeated in Tuesday's elections, five lost out in primaries, eight retired and three left to run for other offices.

That's 54, and two other supporters could be lost if Rep. Peter Kyros, D-Maine, and Sen. Milton R. Young R-N.D., are defeated in elections that are still in doubt.

"I still think the tax credit approach is certainly an acceptable way," said Dr. Russell B. Roth, the AMA's last president.

"But we are now persuaded that may not sell, and we would be foolish not to consider mandated coverage."

About 180 congressman had supported Medicredit.

Among those who won't be back next year are Rep. Joel Broyhill, R-Va., the staunchest supporter of the plan on the House Ways and Means Committee, two other Ways and Means members, and Sen. Peter Dominick, R-Colo.

Labor spokesmen cheered the election results.

"A majority of the new Congress has pledged to support national health insurance as part of the Social Security system," said United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock.

Woodcock's Committee for National Health Insurance supports compulsory cradle-to-grave insurance coverage for all Americans, financed through the Social Security system.

The Ford administration supports a plan under which employers would have to offer insurance to their workers, who would be free to accept or reject it.

A move by AMA toward either of those plans could break a stalemate in health insurance legislation and even increase chances for passage of a bill during the lame duck session of Congress, which convenes Nov. 18.

Roth said the AMA strategy shift was tentative and still needs approval by the 247-member AMA House of Delegates, which meets in Portland, Ore., Nov. 30-Dec. 3.

But the shift to support for compulsory coverage already has been approved by the AMA'S 12-member board of trustees.

Khfar Lasuria greets well wishers at her 140th birthday party at the village of Kutol in Russian Georgia. She is joined by her son, Tarkuk. He's 100. Khfar has worked hard in the tea plantations and citrus orchards surrounding her village and has never been seriously ill and has never visited a doctor. Russian officials did not comment on how many cigarettes a day she smokes. Not far away, in the village of Tikyaband, lives 139-year old Medzhidng Oruzhogil Agayev. Medzid, born in 1835, according to the Russian News Agency Tass, owes his longevity to his life as a shepherd, "laboring in the pure mountain air" near the Caspian Sea. He has a family of 151 members including his second wife, a sprightly 83. (UPI Telephoto)

Legislators to Hear Score of Area Topics

KINGSTON — Nutrition, pigeons, jury duty and welfare will be among a score of topics to be broached to the Ulster County Legislature by four speakers who have requested permission to appear before the board at its Nov. 14 afternoon session in the County Office Building beginning at 4.

Nancy Ogden of Ulster County Community Action will speak concerning nutrition programs for the elderly.

Harry M. Thayer, local radio executive, will address the board with regard to the problems of pigeons and jurors and Sylvester Walker, executive secretary of New York State Supervisors and County Legislators Association, will orient the board on legislative matters pertaining to counties.

A request for additional funds for Ulster County Welfare Department will be made by Social Services Commissioner Bernhardt S. Kramer.

At the 8 p.m. session of the board the Legislature will vote on an increase of $550,000 in the medical assistance appropriation and $700,000 in the aid to dependent children budget. There will also be a request that state and federal aid be increased proportionately.

A 'Field Day' for Wednesday Morning Quarterbacks

City Beat

By HUGH REYNOLDS
Freeman City Hall Reporter

101 FIGURFD—"I still can't understand why Clark Bell lost," lamented a young Republican friend of ours as we stood in front of the Post Office on Main Street discussing the debacle in the 101st Assembly District.

"I mean. gosh, Clark did so much for Ulster County up in Albany. He was such a hard worker."

Our young Republican friend was reflecting the views of a good many other Republicans as they tried to figure out the answers to what will be our favorite topic on this weekend's cocktail circuit . . . "what happened to Clark Bell?"

The returns shed little light on what has become a most perplexing question. One thing is clear, however, Maurice Hinchey, though he emerged with a comfortable 2,400 vote margin didn't "really" win the election. Clark Bell lost it.

MOST PEOPLE who have even passing interest in the Bell-Hinchey story know the two faced each other in 1972 with Bell coming out on top by some 9,700 votes. Hinchey made quite a point at the time about the fact that he had cut into Bell's plurality from 1970 by some 6,000 votes. Nobody really paid too much attention to that or the fact that Hinchey in a landslide Republican year took 43 per cent of the vote. Maybe they should have.

Tuesday night, Hinchey picked up 748 votes more than than he had in 1972. Tuesday night Bell LOST 11,000 votes off his 1972 total. Tuesday night Hinchey was elected the county's first Democratic Assemblyman since 1897.

The fact that Bell lost it rather than Hinchey winning—and this is no means a criticism of Hinchey, a man who put on a tremendous campaign—leads to the questions of why Bell lost it.

WE DON'T MEAN to be uncharitable to H. Clark, but we think his reasons cited election night can be pretty well discounted. Bell, in effect, blamed everybody but Bell for losing. There was Wilson, there was Rocky, there was Ford, there was Nixon, there was inflation and there was recession but there was, in Bell's eyes, no way that one H. Clark Bell had anything to do with H. Clark Bell dropping 11,000 votes in two years. And if you really want to go back, 17,000 votes in four years.

The most plausible excuse, at the time Bell was offering reasons for why he "might" lose (around 10 p.m. election night) was that Wilson was losing Ulster County. Wilson didn't lose Ulster County. Neither did Ham Fish or Dick Schermerhorn or Ed Mason or Tommy Mayone or Ben Gilman.

In fact, if Bell had run as well as Wilson in Ulster County he would have defeated Hinchey by about 3,000 votes which is the way most people figured Bell's race to go in in first place.

The fact of the matter is that only two Republicans lost in Ulster County; Bell and Alfred Libous, the mayor of Binghamton who might have made one trip "back east" that's us).

There is little doubt that the economy was a major factor and that Rockefeller's gifts, Nixon's Watergate and Ford's pardon, didn't help matters, but again Bell might have negated those factors somewhat simply by adressing himself to them.

WILSON, for instance, insisted at the beginning of his campaign that Watergate (which a great many people look at in terms of political morality) wasn't a "state issue."

By the time Wilson yanked his head out of the sand the Carey parade and his career in government were long gone.

Anyway, let's get back to our young Republican friend back at the post office.

"Maybe it wasn't so much what Bell did in Albany as what he did in Ulster County," we suggested.

"You mean politics?" our friend asked.

If the scuttlebut we picked up election night at the county office building is any indicator, what happened to Clark Bell was simply this: His political chickens came home to roost at the worst possible time.

Bell's differences with County Legislature Chairman Pete Savago are legend. In fact, anyone who claims any political expertise about Ulster County has to take the "Bell-Savago thing" into account for almost everything that happens in Republican circles. Savago holds sway over a large chunk of central-southern Ulster County. Bell lost New Paltz in '72 by 21 votes. He lost it this year by 200.

BELL'S differences with Hamilton Fish Jr. have been less publicized but there are deep divisions, caused by reapportionment two years ago. The attempt to censure Fish for his vote against Nixon last summer was cooked up by the usual "people close to" Bell in the Town of Ulster. Bell lost in the town of Ulster by 289 votes Tuesday night. Fish ran some 900 votes ahead of Bell's total.

Bell could have gotten elected without the Fish and Savage forces against him, or if you want to be political, without their wholehearted support, but the thing that did it was Bill Martin.

Bell, simply put, tried to jam Bill Martin down the throat of the GOP, first at the convention last summer and later during the campaign. Republicans, badly divided, were faced with yet another choice they didn't need. A good many simply threw their hands up and said the hell with it all.

The Mayone-Martin thing hurt Bell the most in Saugerties where he had trounced hometown boy Hinchey in '72 only to see the vote reversed this year. The fact that Hinchey zeroed in on Saugerties was only half the reason.

Kingston was something else. There it was a case of Hinchey's concentration on the city with the sure knowledge that if he didn't reverse his 1,700 vote loss of 1972 he could never hope to offset Bell's county plurality.

Hinchey didn't quite reverse the total as he had in Saugerties, but as it turned out, it wasn't really necessary. That Republican majority in the county simply did not materialize.

FOOTNOTE—One thing Bell and Hinchey have in common, although both would be loath to admit any common ground . . . both face perhaps the most difficult times in their political careers. Hinchey has to hold his newly won power. Bell has to regain it. It won't be easy in either case.

John Connally 'Bug' Revealed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — FBI agents bugging telephones to gather foreign intelligence information once eavesdropped on a conversation that included former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally, according to Special Watergate Prosecutor Henry B. Ruth Jr.

Ruth revealed few details other than to say Connally was overheard by the FBI, that the tap was approved by the attorney general, and that Connally was not the specific target of any wiretapping or bugging.

Connally, a former governor of Texas and the only Democratic member of Richard Nixon's Cabinet, was indicted on July 29 for perjury, conspiracy and bribery. Ruth also opposed Connally's motion to move the trial to San Antonio, Tex., where the AMPI is headquartered. That motion was based on pretrial publicity.

"Since defendant is a thrice elected governor of Texas and presumably a popular figure in the state," Ruth said, "transfer of this case to San Antonio, therefore, would be less likely to afford defendant a relief from the publicity of which he seemingly complains than it wou'd be to insure him of constant publicity."

Bell, simply put, tried to jam Bill Martin down the throat of the GOP, first at the convention last summer and later during the campaign. Republicans, badly divided, were faced with yet another choice they didn't need. A good many simply threw their hands up and said the hell with it all.

The Mayone-Martin thing hurt Bell the most in Saugerties where he had trounced hometown boy Hinchey in '72 only to see the vote reversed this year. The fact that Hinchey zeroed in on Saugerties was only half the reason.

Kingston was something else. There it was a case of Hinchey's concentration on the city with the sure knowledge that if he didn't reverse his 1,700 vote loss of 1972 he could never hope to offset Bell's county plurality.

Hinchey didn't quite reverse the total as he had in Saugerties, but as it turned out, it wasn't really necessary. That Republican majority in the county simply did not materialize.

FOOTNOTE—One thing Bell and Hinchey have in common, although both would be loath to admit any common ground . . . both face perhaps the most difficult times in their political careers. Hinchey has to hold his newly won power. Bell has to regain it. It won't be easy in either case.

Democrats Get the Ball

The Democrats have won a great victory at the polls. It is a victory that confronts them with challenges and burdens them with responsibilities. The party's response to those challenges and responsibilities will have much to do with determining its political fortunes in the 1976 election.

There is no doubt that the present outcome has given the Democrats a leg up. By the same token, President Ford and his bruised cohorts have a much tougher job on their hands than before the balloting. Mr. Ford's prestige has been diminished by the defeat of candidates he campaigned for, and he will find it hard to advance his programs in a Congress so heavily dominated by the opposition.

In saying this we do not, however, subscribe to the notion so freely bruited about before the elections—that with a "veto-proof" Congress the Democrats would be able to do just about whatever they pleased during the final two years of President Ford's term. That is simply not the case; for practical purposes there is no such thing as a veto-proof Congress. Few important matters are decided along strict party lines.

The advantages do not all lie with the Democrats. If the President comes to Congress with a genuine show of compromise for the sake of getting action on vital issues, as he says he intends, then the burden will in large measure shift to the controlling party. It will be up to the Democrats, having won this control at the polls, to formulate programs rather than simply find fault with those offered by the White House.

If they are not able to do this, and to take effective action dealing with the nation's economic ills, their victory may backfire. For should serious economic problems still plague us two years hence—after two years with the Democrats very firmly in the congressional saddle—then the voters may attach much of the blame to them rather than to the administration.

Helping Fishermen

Congress should give serious consideration to a pending bill establishing a 200-mile coastal limit as an economic measure that could be a boon to the northeast's fishing industry.

And even though it would be desirable for the 200-mile limit to be produced through the United Nations, the countries making up the UN have been unable to agree on such a treaty.

The United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea which ended last month in Caracas, Venezuela, met for 10 weeks without coming up with a treaty on the 200-mile limit. Some 5,000 representatives from 148 countries attended the conference. It is now hoped that such a treaty will be approved when the conference resumes next spring in Geneva.

However, officials say that it will be a tremendous task to get so many countries to agree on the vast number of issues that have to be resolved.

Establishment of a 200-mile limit is necessary if fishing stocks off the coast of the New England states are to be restored to former levels.

It is estimated that foreign fishing fleets are catching 75 per cent of the fish off New England and they are doing this with disregard for the depletion of fishing supplies. Local fisherman cannot compete with the large foreign fleets which in many cases are government subsidized.

There is no reason for the United States Congress to wait for an international treaty. The slow rate of progress shown so far by the UN conference has dimmed hopes that a treaty including the 200-mile limit will be agreed upon at the next meeting.

New England fishermen have made it clear that the industry is facing collapse and they cannot wait for a worldwide treaty. This is a clear indication that Congress must take the necessary action to protect our fishing industry.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

It Pays to Say the Right Thing

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — A top government scientist got a $300,000 grant after he testified falsely for his boss in a controversial sex discrimination case.

The grant was awarded the day after the scientist left the government, but both the scientist and his boss deny any impropriety.

The scientist is Harvard-educated Dr. Peter Steinglass, who until June 9 was a $30,000-a-year program chief at the National Institute for Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.

In October, 1972, his boss, Dr. Maurice Chafetz, was on the skillet. A ranking scientist, Dr. Nancy Mello, charged that Chafetz demoted her because she was a woman, and the case came before a Civil Service hearing examiner.

Called to testify, Steinglass swore that Dr. Mello had never really been his boss. This supported Chafetz's contention that she had always been short on authority.

But the hearing examiner, citing signed statements, found "a serious question" as to Steinglass's credibility. The examiner said he would "give no consideration" to Steinglass's testimony and ruled against Chafetz.

A few months later, Steinglass decided to look for new work. After considerable hunting, he filed an application on Feb. 1, 1974, for a massive grant from the same Institute where he worked.

Chafetz, supported by independent reviewing authorities, hastily approved the grant. The final okay came only one day after Steinglass had formally quit the Institute.

The grant runs three years, totals some $300,000 and allows Steinglass more than $75,000 as the chief investigator for a study of alcoholism in families.

Footnote: Chafetz said he had "absolutely" no intention to pay back Steinglass for his testimony. The Alcohol Abuse chief said he couldn't even recall whether he knew Steinglass was getting the $300,000 contract.

Steinglass gave us a two-page statement declaring "categorically and unequivocally" that there was "no connection whatsoever between any testimony . . . and my receiving a competitively awarded research grant." He would gross less from the contract, he said, than he formerly earned from a private practice as a psychiatrist.

WATCH ON WASTE: Some 3,000 members of the American Nursing Home Association have flown off to Hawaii for five-day seminars in the sun. Their expenses are expected to be reimbursed out of federal medicare and medicaid money that otherwise would be spent to help the sick and the elderly.

Here's how the vacationing nursing home operators work it. Nursing homes that handle medicare patients are permitted to collect expense money from the government for "reasonable staff and educational meetings."

To take advantage of this, the Nursing Home Association has set up a number of educational seminars as part of its convention in Hawaii. The operators can soak the taxpayers, therefore, for most of their Hawaiian vacation. The rest can be written off as a business expense.

A spokesman for the Nursing Home Association defended the practice, saying that the educational seminars aid in the treatment of elderly patients.

A Health, Education and Welfare Department spokesman said the government probably will reimburse the nursing home operators for their Hawaiian flying. "If they were meeting in Baltimore," he shrugged, "no one would come."

Because of President Ford's crackdown on government spending, meanwhile, some medicare patients are being turned away.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: The hoard of jewelry and other gifts to former President Nixon from foreign lands is now stored in 1,100 boxes in Washington. The State Department may soon release a list of the items, but not until the list has been purged of gifts that might prove embarrassing to the United States. The excuse for the censorship: "National security." . . . Last June, we reported that the budget boys had ordered the Treasury to transfer the Customs Bureau's antidrug watch along the Mexican border to the Immigration Service. The plan, we wrote, would cost the taxpayers $1.5 million. Now a confidential General Accounting Office (GAO) report states that the transfer "cannot be accomplished administratively and without statutory authorization." The GAO report points out that "INS officers . . . do not have authority to enforce the customs laws." . . . There has been some poignant human drama behind the scenes at the Watergate trial. David Bress, the attorney for defendant Robert Mardian, has been ordered into the hospital for an unexpected, serious operation after spending a year preparing for the trial. An appeal was made to Judge John Sirica to separate Mardian's case from the Watergate conspiracy trial. In the privacy of the judge's chambers, the prosecutors joined in the appeal. But Sirica overruled them, saying he had confidence Bress's assistant could handle the case . . . We have frequently written about junketeering Congressmen, so perhaps we should mention one who refused a junket. Rep. Peter Peyser, R-N.Y., could have joined congressional carousers on a seven-city African tour sponsored by the House Agriculture Committee. Instead, Peyser quietly turned down the trip as "inefficient and unproductive."

"Impossible Dreams, Okay! But This Is Ridiculous!"

The Proper Man

By WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY Jr.

Concerning the recent election, a few observations:

1. Although the trend in America continues left (Brown replaces Reagan in California, Carey replaces Wilson in New York), it isn't a pell-mell leftism, of the kind the McGovernites envisioned.

Consider, for instance, Ramsey Clark. He was, among those running for office, the most conspicuous leftist in America. As a matter of fact, he would be the most conspicuous leftist in the zoo, if he chose to live there, which by the way is not a bad idea since a) most zoos are socialized, b) there are no jails in zoos, and c) the animals would probably understand Clark's glossolalia better than the voters.

Mr. Clark's defeat has to be examined carefully lest the magnitude of it escape the attention of the psephologists. Clark was running on a poor-boy ticket, but he managed, just the same, to be all over the lot, on television, billboards, and advertisements; he even had Frank Sinatra singing for him — not bad for someone who limits any one contribution to $100 per person. He ran in a state whose registration is very heavily Democratic, and against a Republican opponent whose vote was sharply reduced by the candidacy of a third party Conservative. The man who ran for Governor was a traditionalist Democrat, and he defeated the Republican incumbent by a landslide (60 per cent of the vote).

In these circumstances, Clark ran less than 40 per cent, below what McGovern got in New York two years ago. By contrast, an utterly unknown Conservative candidate, the striking and intelligent Barbara Keating, got 16 per cent of the vote, with a mere $75,000 to spend. And, elsewhere, Gary Hart won in Colorado, but he was not recognizable as the Hart who programmed George McGovern to come out for capitulation abroad, and a greening insolvency at home. Come to think of it, from all reports George McGovern II, victor in South Dakota, ran on a fairly strong anti-McGovern I platform. So it is generally true that the hard left hasn't made much headway in two years.

On the other hand, 2). the Republican Party would appear to have made no headway at all. Now it is generally supposed that the principal causes of the Republican humiliation were Watergate, the pardon, and inflation. It is interesting, under the circumstances, to reflect on the findings of Mr. Richard Scammon, the talented political analyst who dismayed the whole gang over at the National Broadcasting Company by saying simply that he could have predicted 18 months ago, which is pretty much pre-Watergate, and certainly pre-Pardon, that the Republicans would do about as they did on this election day. He meant by this that the graph was pointing in that direction.

In other words, that there is public dissatisfaction with the Republican party unrelated to Watergate.

And why not? There is no reason to suppose that if Richard Nixon had occupied himself more on domestic matters than on frustrating the Justice Department's investigation of the Watergate, he'd have greatly increased his hold on the conservative voting community in America. There has been a weightlessness in Republicanism since the death of Robert A. Taft, and nobody, with the conspicuous exception of Barry Goldwater and Ronald Reagan, has done much about it.

Eighteen months ago we were coping with inflation by such voodoo as wage and price controls. Eighteen months ago Mr. Nixon was continuing to spend and spend, and to pile deficit on deficit; to promote Revenue Sharing, which is the greatest fiscal shell game since Lord Keynes' discovery that borrowing does not matter because we owe it to ourselves; and to yield to the Supreme Court whenever the Court decided to rewrite the Constitution so as, e.g., to encourage abortion, and discourage private schooling.

3) So the slide continues. Fewer Republicans, more Democrats. But also, more independents — and more conservatives. The bridge-building needed is from Constitutional theorists to the Republican bourgeoisie, to the blue-collar class. The ingredients are there. George Wallace is pivotal. What is missing is the top man. What becomes clearer and clearer is that Gerald Ford isn't that man. That means just what it says—nothing more. There may not be such a man; in which case the slide will simply continue.

Nicholas Von Hoffman:

TV's Economic Ignorance

WASHINGTON — The only light spot in the economic news these days is the way television covers it . . . when they bother to cover it.

Most of the problems of covering the economy for a visual medium are solved by avoiding the subject altogether. Inflation, however, is too big and painful to ignore, so TV tackles it by running the same story over and over again on days when they don't have anything else to fill up the network news shows. At CBS this repetition takes the form of sending correspondents to the supermarket every month, where they are photographed discovering what everybody else knows, namely that the prices have gone up.

The other two networks seem to favor the 38-second interviews with a farmer — cow or corn in the background — during which the reporter asks, "Would you please tell us why prices are going up?" The victim or interviewee then has a microphone shoved in his face as he explains that fuel and fertilizer cost him more this month than last. The viewer is left with the impression that prices go up because other prices go up in an endless, unexplainable, tautological spiral.

The third stock TV inflation story is the interview with the Jones family in suburban Memphis in which they tell us they're coping by doing with less, an item that hardly rates as news since the viewers are also coping by doing with less. That takes care of inflation and or unemployment, which gets handled the same way except, perhaps, for those occasional pieces that show a trading floor full of screaming, apparently insane brokers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Aside from 20-second bursts of government officials reading five lines from a press release, the only other information we get are occasional numbers read to us by various anchor men. The number they like best is the daily Dow Jones industrial average.

Why, of all the dozens of different kinds of stock market averages, this one should be played up and glamorized is seldom explained. For people with little knowledge of the stock market, this can be a highly misleading number, although stockbrokers may like it because it can give the impression that things are much better than they really are.

Another number they're fond of using is the Gross National Product. If it's up, it's good, and if it's down the Ted Baxters tell us that we're in a recession. In fact, the GNP is a tricky number, difficult to calculate in ordinary times and even more so in this period. Some of the key figures fed into the equation used to derive the GNP have been doing wild and strange things they've never done before.

The GNP could be larger or smaller than what is currently being advertised. This isn't any big, fresh news. Nobody's covering up. The gentleman in the Department of Commerce who puts all these data together is happy to explain the ranges of error he must work with just so that people won't be misled, but there is nothing he can do if the disseminators of news don't care to enlighten themselves.

Another number that's been getting a big play lately is the prime interest rate, which our Ted Baxters dutifully tell us is the rate of interest a bank's best corporate customers will have to pay for a loan. How many, if any, firms really to secure a loan at this rate is another matter which doesn't get aired when the anchorites announce in heavy-voiced words that the prime has been raised or lowered. Devices like compensating balances and commitment fees can make the real cost of money significantly different.

If you're in the business of broadcasting fictional numbers, there's no need to check them out and see if they correspond to anybody's actual behavior. The theory of fictional numbers permits you to accept the politically announced price of oil, not the one the commodity is actually being sold for. You can give out that the wholesale price level is such and such, and you don't have to say you're quoting list price, not necessarily market price.

Unhappily, all of this comes about not through the eastern media conspiracy, but the eastern media complacency. Dishonesty demands knowledge and understanding, but television's failures are due to ignorance, incompetence and indifference. The most powerfully informative medium we have doesn't know and doesn't care; and so the citizens of the largest, richest and most important capitalist nation on earth haven't the foggiest idea of how their own system works.

Rare Honor For Area Scout

SAUGERTIES

A rare and special honor was presented to a Saugerties youth when the National Court of Honor of the Boy Scouts of America presented Webelos Scout Steven Ross with a Medal and Certificate of Heroism in recognition for his action in saving the life of his brother, Michael Ross. It is rare that so young a scout is presented with this honor.

Steve, son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Ross, of 20 Birchwood Drive South in Saugerties, was presented with this honor by Richard D. Bergman, District Scout Executive, and John Gade, Assistant District Commissioner for the Mohican Trail District, at the monthly pack meeting of Cub Scout Pack 33, sponsored by the Saugerties Methodist Church.

In July, 1973 Steve and his brother were sailing with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Ward of Havertown, Pa., in a boat they chartered in Maine for their vacation. While their grandparents were below in the cabin, Mike and Steve were up on deck getting the rowboat ready for going ashore with the Ward couple. Mike, forgetting to put on his life jacket, accidentally fell overboard.

Knowing his brother couldn't swim, Steve Ross jumped into the water and held Mike until his grandfather could lift them out of the water.

Due to Steve's straight and quick thinking a real tragedy was averted and eventually won him the heroism award.

Letters to the Editor

THANK YOU

Editor, The Freeman:

I am writing to thank you for the editorial support of my candidacy for re-election to the New York State Assembly.

During my years in office I always worked as hard as I could to try to bring positive benefit programs to Ulster County to improve job opportunities and improve our quality of life. I think you pointed this up extremely well in your editorial endorsement.

Throughout my years in office the Daily Freeman has been an integral part of the public information program of my office. I have appreciated your cooperation and responsiveness in communicating issues of concern to our area to your readership.

I thank you deeply for the confidence that you placed in me and your willingness to express that confidence on the Editorial Pages of New York State's finest community service newspapers.

Very Truly yours,

Ali's the Greatest

Editor, The Freeman:

I would like to take issue with your Sports' Editor who helped introduce me to boxing, Charles Tiano, regarding his recent "Sportside" articles on the Muhammed Ali-George Foreman fight.

It's an old cliche — Ali is an unfavorable sports person and he has such a big mouth. "He should be retired to a long and rewarding career as a saver of souls."

Ali is a boxer's boxer — a scientific artisan and ring general who never stops thinking inside the squared circle. As many boxers will attest; the thinking boxer is the epitome of the "manly art of self-defense."

Ali accomplishes his task in the ring just as well as our best lawyers perform in the arena of the courtroom. What a man does outside his profession is his business, as long as he gets the job done.

It's high time Ali should be respected for what he is — one of the great professional sportsmen of our generation, or any generation. What he does privately or publicly is secondary to his skilled practice of the swat science.

Sacrifice

Editor, The Freeman:

I was appalled when I read the editorial "Pollution Control Costly" in the Sunday Freeman, November 3. It was stated that the standards as they exist now would needlessly impose billions of dollars on the consumer at a time when money is scarce and inflation is high. There will never be standards for clean air and water that are too high. The current standards are designed merely to prevent further pollution. We still have to clean up the pollution that already exists. Is it the opinion of the eidtor that we should only fight pollution when the economy is booming? Fighting pollution is a full time job that we can't take a vacation from whenever it becomes inconvenient to spend the necessary money.

Secondly, it was stated that the Federal Pollution Act of 1972 will add unnecessary billions of dollars to the cost of business operation. Keeping the air and water clean is not an unnecessary expense, but a moral responsibility. God gave us this good earth pollution free, and it is up to both business and the average citizen to keep it that way.

In looking at the current economic situation, I do agree we must make some alterations in our spending. However, in making these reductions, there are several areas that should be cut before ecology. For example, Welfare should be charged so that less money is budgeted towards it and only those that really need it should be allowed to receive it. Perhaps we should make minor cutbacks in foreign aid until our economy improves. But pollution control should remain high on our list of priorities.

It is an inevitable fact that any economy will have its ups and downs. We should all accept the fact that during difficult economic periods we will have to make sacrifices. This is the key to financial survival during times when money is tight. For example, walking, bicycling and joining car pools not only help our environment, but also save us a sizable amount of money. Energy saving measures save money, help our environment, and improve one's physical and mental well being at the same time. If one has the right attitude, these sacrifices can be a joy instead of an inconvenience.

Sincerely,
KIM PEARSON

Jim Norton: the man who runs Rondout

Rondout Savings Bank is directed in its operations by a Board of Trustees, of course, and is officered by a knowledgeable group of executives, but the man who really runs the bank on a day-to-day basis, is Jim Norton. He subscribes to the belief that a savings bank is run for the benefit of its depositors and the convenience of its customers. That's why Jim Norton is on deck every day, readily accessible to people who do business with Rondout.

More Cuts for Rochester

ACCORD

The Town of Rochester budge for 1975, already cut twice faces still further cuts before it comes up for final adoption on Nov. 15.

The originally announced $640,902, representing the sum of requests from all department heads, called for $484,310 to be raised by taxes. That figure had been cut to $414,954 by the time last Thursday night's public hearing began in the Town Hall before about 60 persons. More cuts were decided on during the meeting and the board is expected to cut it still more when it meets on Nov. 15, but they still have a long way to go to get it in the neighborhood of this year's $259,911.

Among the cuts decided on was a decision to hold salaries of the supervisor and board members at present levels. Supervisor Wilfred Neff also said that an anticipated $13,000 surplus from this year's budget would be applied toward lowering next year's taxes.

Questioned from the audience about the reasons for such a high budget, board members pointed out that an expensive move of the town landfill from its present location near the Town Hall to Airport Road would be made in 1975. Also, a loss of five points in the town's equalization rate will mean a substantial reduction in state aid revenue, they pointed out.

Two town officials are slated to be exceptions to the hold-the-line salary policy. The board approved a raise of $1,000 to $8,000 for Melvin Lesser, chairman of the Board of Assessors. Lesser was praised by former town councilman Charles Logan, who said Lesser has done "the best job I've seen anyone, Republican or Democrat, do in the town in the past 15 years." Logan also called for a change to the single, full-time appointed assessor system.

Highway Superintendent David Clark is slated for a $2,000 boost to $10,400. Board members praised him for a "seven day a week job" and said he had made many money-saving suggestions for his department.

The board also granted a $1,500 increase for the dog warden's department, noting that the new dog ordinance had resulted in a large increase of complaint calls and corresponding increases in costs for handling and destroying dogs.

In other action, the board:

- Voted to pay $1,239 still owed to ROA in a lump sum, a move that gives them possession of the base station as well as the highway department radios it has been purchasing one at a time.
- Directed Clark to advertise at once for bids on next year's oil for the highway department, a move Clark said would result in substantial savings.
- Voted to hold a special meeting with area insurance men to discuss the possibility of putting town insurance up for competitive bids.
- Voted to add a $4,000 contingency fund to the 1975 budget to take care of unexpected emergencies.
- Set regulations governing access to town records in compliance with the state's new Freedom of Information Law.

'A Small Increase'

MARBLETOWN

Marbletown taxpayers can expect a relatively "small" increase of $1.95 per thousand of assessed valuation, according to Supervisor Kenneth Smith, despite an increase of $32,328 in the general and highway department funds of 1974.

Smith said that a "fair crowd" turned out for a recent public hearing on the budget with most feeling it was a reasonable budget. He said that due to increased valuation of property in the town, a low tax rate is possible.

The preliminary budget calls for $56,059 in the general fund, an increase of $13,686 over 1974 and $219,054 in the highway department fund, an increase of $18,642 over 1974.

The $1.95 increase in the tax rate brings it up from $45.09 per thousand to $46.99 per thousand of assessed valuation.

Smith also announced the 1975 budgets for fire and light districts as follows: Fire Districts, Cottekill, $5,500; High Falls, $22,160; Stone Ridge, $12,283; Lomontville, $16,937; Kripplebush-Lyonsville, $7,038; Vly-Atwood, $5,500 and Marbletown, $2,989. Light districts, Stone Ridge, $1,685 and High Falls, $1,699.75.

It is expected that the town board will act on the new 1975 budget at its next meeting, Wednesday, Nov. 13 at Town Hall.

CLIENT IN KITCHEN OF HIS APARTMENT

Gateway Home Work

KINGSTON — The Domestic Science Department at Gateway Industries, Inc. is a homemaking unit simulating a home situation with a fully equipped kitchen and laundry plus a living room and bedroom.

Under the direction of Mrs. Elaine Armato, domestic science supervisor, Gateway clients learn basic cooking and sewing skills as well as ironing and cleaning much as one might encounter in a typical home situation. Planning and budgeting also is an important aspect in the training of clients in this department.

In addition plans, purchases and preparations are made for the food services for the employe-clients lunch room adjacent to the unit.

The Domestic Science Department serves as a training ground for kitchen help, counter service and short order cook type employment opportunities in competitive society. In addition potential laundry workers acquire experience at Gateway in completely equipped commercial laundry. Laundry equipment includes three commercial washers, four dryers and an ironer.

Mrs. Armato is a graduate of Bethlehem Central High School in Delmar where she was awarded a regent's diploma with honors and a Regents Scholarship. She completed a Bachelor of Science degree in Art Education at State University of New York at New Paltz and has completed 26 credits towards a Masters of Education. Mrs. Armato taught art for three years in the Kingston and Newburgh public schools. She worked with educable children in special classes in both systems in the kindergarten to grade six levels. During several summers, she volunteered her services in the summer camp program of the Association for Retarded Children, Ulster County Chapter.

As a member of the Gateway rehabilitation team, Mrs. Armato's responsibilities include instruction and supervision of clients in the homemaking unit and laundry—evaluating their skills and potential skills and holding regular discussions of the same with each client's personal adjustment counselor. She also is responsible for the supervision of the daily menu of the facility and the maintenance of the Gateway lunch room.

Other types of vocational training for the handicapped at Gateway Industries include: clerical, janitorial and maintenance, bench assembly and packaging and machine shop.

Honduras Aid From G-U Firm

ELMWOOD PARK, N.J. The Grand Union Company, the nation's ninth largest food chain, has donated more than 9,000 cases of its own brand "Big Dinner Mix" to help hurricane victims in Honduras.

"Big Dinner Mix" is a nutritious high-protein food mixture usually combined with ground beef. In view of the severe food shortage in Honduras, however, special instructions on how to prepare the dish without meat were relayed to the South American country through the Honduran Embassy in Washington.

The food donation, valued a more than $45,000, was shipped to Honduras from New York aboard the Jalapa of the Mexican Lines. It arrived in Honduras Oct. 25, and has been distributed to needy recipients through the various government and international social welfare agencies aiding hurricane victims.

Harold Bogert, merchandising vice-president in charge of Grand Union's Grocery Department, said the donation filled seven large tractor-trailers and was transported by the company to Brooklyn for shipment to Honduras.

Grand Union has been officially cited by the Honduran government for its part in the disaster relief effort.

PUMPKIN PICKERS—Children of the Peanut Gallery, a pre-school unit located at 209 Albany Avenue, had a great day recently picking pumpkins at an area pumpkin farm. With their pumpkins are Tom Colinkos (L), Tanya Speer, Pamela Swanson and Kate Fogarty. Details about the school may be obtained from Mrs. Elen Coutant at the school.

I'LL BE SEEING YOU—Eyeglass frame fronts are removed from sheets of plastic by Joseph Ferraro of Itek Corporation's Visual Optical Division frame plant in North Attleboro, Mass. The frames are punched in the hot zyl or plastic, allowed to cool and then removed from the sheets by hand. (UPI Telephoto)

Comment by Tom McInerney

Suppose a man who had much of his money invested in real estate or stocks and bonds -- shares of which were still of significance even in today's depressed market—suddenly died. If he did not leave adequate cash on hand, his executor would probably be forced to sell some of the investments to pay for expenses such as funeral and administrative and estate taxes.

In today's uncertain market, estate liquidity is more important than ever. Liquidity for an estate is defined as cash or quickly convertible assets on hand to make sure that an executor or beneficiary has enough money to pay the taxes and other expenses.

Life insurance is unique in providing liquidity . . . because death, which creates the need for cash, also creates the cash to meet the need. That's liquidity when needed the most.

Poughkeepsie Savings Hosts Group Meeting

POUGHKEEPSIE Thomas J. Norton, president of the Poughkeepsie Savings Bank, reports that the local savings institution was host of the Savings Bank Group III Meeting held Oct. 31 at the Dutchess Golf & Country Club.

BANKERS MEET—Howard C. St. John, president of Ulster Savings Bank (seated far right) is shown with some of the other bankers at recent session. Joseph Flora (L), president of Schenectady Savings and chairman of Group III; Hal Wood, head of the Administrations Procedures Committee and president of National Savings Bank of Albany; Vincent Crawford, president of Albany Savings and vice-president of the group, Charles Lacijon, Albany district representative of the FDIC and William Collins, supervisory examiner of Albany District of the New York State Banking Department.

Howard St. John, president of the Ulster Savings Bank of Kingston and secretary treasurer of Group III, opened the meeting with roll call. Joseph Flora, president of the Schenectady Savings Bank and Chairman of Group III, was moderator of the open discussion format.

The discussion dealing with current legislative proposals was headed by Lawrence Costiglio, senior vice-president of the Savings Bank Association of New York State.

Murson, director of Urban Affairs, led a discussion concerning the present mortgage situation. He spoke on the recently passed Federal Home Purchase Mortgage Act, which is designed to assit Savings Banks in making more money available to be channeled into the mortgage market.

Approximately 120 persons were in attendance. Representatives of all the banks in the Group III District were present.

Business News

Ira Scott, executive vice-president of the Savings Bank Association, introduced two new members. Guy Kappel, an assistant counsel of the Association soon to become the general counsel, led a discussion concerning the legal matters now being considered by the Association. Gary Mildred DeLong has been promoted to supervisor recording and manufacturing at Ferroxcube Corporation in Saugerties. Mrs. Delong joined Ferroxcube in May 1963 and has since held various positions in recording head manufacturing. In May 1966, she was appointed lead operator. Mrs. DeLong and her husband, Emil, and children reside in Mt. Marion.

Paul DeLisio of Woodstock, Wilfred G. Doolittle of Rosendale and Michael J. Giordano of Highland have qualified as members of the 1974 Star Club of New York Life Insurance Co. The Star Club is composed of New York Life agents who achieved significant sales records in 1973-74.

George S. Covel of Saugerties, an official court reporter with the State Supreme Court at Kingston, has been awarded the Certificate of Proficiency and the Certificate of Merit by the National Shorthand Reporters Association at its recent convention at Houston, Tex.

One of the few people to successfully pass both Proficiency and Merit certification requirements on the same day, Covel was required to write shorthand at speeds of 180 words per minute on a literary take, 200 words a minute on a jury charge take and 225 words per minute on two-voice testimony for five minutes with 95 per cent accuracy to pass the Certificate of Proficiency. His mark on this testing was 99.7293 per cent, with a 100 per cent accuracy on the 225 word-per minute portion of the test.

For the Certificate of Merit, the requirements were to pass with 95 per cent accuracy a 200 word-per-minute literary take, a 240 word-per-minute jury charge and a 260 word-per-minute two-voice testimony take. Covel's actual mark on these three portions was 99.2879 per cent.

A past president of the New York State Shorthand Reporters Association, Covel resides at Echo Hill, Saugerties, with his wife, Joan, and children. Prior to his appointment to the Supreme Court, he was an official reporter with the Court of Claims and also an English Language Reporter of Debates at the United Nations during the Congo Crisis.

Dr. Saul Schulich has announced the opening of his new office for the practice of general dentistry. His office is located in the newly refurbished "Reynold's House," 214 Meads Mountain Road, Woodstock.

Dr. Schulich earned his D.D.S. degree from N.Y.U. College of Dentistry in 1969, attended post graduate studies at U.C.L.A. and completed a dental externship program at Kings County Hospital. He has previously practiced in New York City, orienting his patients towards preventive dentistry.

Regular office hours will be by appointment Tuesday through Saturday.

Howard H. Baker has been appointed manager of the Albany branch of Litton Dental Products, Toledo, O., according to Richard A. Neely, vice-president of retail sales. The full service dental store, located at 10 Russell Road in Albany, serves dentists and dental laboratories in upstate New York. Baker joined Litton in 1971. He and his wife, Shirley, and their daughter live in the Albany area.

The recent assignment of Arthur F. Lamb to position of Trustee of Swayer Savings Bank in Saugerties has been announced by Henry S. Hartley, bank president.

The son of Arthur D. Lamb, past president of Sawyer Savings Bank, Lamb has been associated with his father in the hardward business for the past 35 years. A past master and member of the Ulster Lodge F. & A. M., Lamb also is a member of the fire department, the American Legion, the village plumbing board and the Saugerties cemetery association.

Born and raised in Saugerties, Lamb resides at 68 Ulster Avenue with his wife, the former Virginia Maines. They are the parents of a son, Arthur J. Lamb, and a daughter, Patricia Carey.

DEPRESSION ART "FOUND"

Public Offered 1937 U.S. Gov't Art Prints

Imagine, if you can, finding several thousand sets of antique prints of the world's greatest paintings that were lost for more than 35 years! It actually happened . . . and this is the true story of the discovery of that lost treasure.

Eleanor Roosevelt

Back in 1937, immediately following the depression years, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and a select group of a dozen nationally prominent people formed a voluntary national committee for art appreciation to create an art program that would give the public a well-needed moral lift. It was the committee's decision to select the world's most famous paintings from the 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, and 20th centuries—the best paintings of Matisse, Van Gogh, Renoir, Picasso, Gaugnin, Titian, etc., and to reproduce them in full color as perfectly as humanly possible and make them available to the public at a price within the reach of nearly everyone.

Abandoned in 1937

For some unknown reason, after a quantity of these beautiful reproductions were made, the entire project was abandoned and this collection of perfect reproductions was stored in a Brooklyn warehouse, where they remained undisturbed since 1937.

Through a series of rare coincidences, the lost collection was "rediscovered" and leading lithographers and art critics agreed that the subject matter and quality of detail and color reproduction was incredibly accurate. Over $500,000.00 was spent to make finely engraved glass printing plates. It would be impossible to reproduce prints such as these under existing methods, and for that reason these prints are literally collector's items. Once they have been sold, there will be no more available. A truly excellent art "investment" that makes a fabulous gift.

Available to Public

These authentic original 1937 prints have been appraised by the American Appraisers' Assoc. at $7.00 each print. Now, these full color 11"x14" prints are finally available to the public at $19.95 for a collection of 18 prints. Send cash, check or money order to: U.S. Surplus, Dept. RI7, P.O. Box 605, Tarzana, Calif. 91356. Fully GUARANTEED Certificate of authenticity given with each set. Mastercharge and Bankamericard OK (give card number).

CHOOSE WISELY—Carpet is the "slowiest" home furnishing you choose. Choose wisely. In order to get your money's worth in this major investment, you will want to know a few facts before you start shopping for carpet. Some helpful advice is available to the consumer from the Armstrong Cork Company.

Get Money's Worth With New Carpet

LANCASTER, PA.—Carpet is too big an investment to make without careful planning. It can represent as much as 20 per cent of your total furnishings budget for a given room.

With the myriad texture-fiber-color combinations available on today's market, it is no wonder that homemakers are confused when they begin to consider this important purchase.

To help you choose wisely, here are some clues to problem-free shopping.

First, make a plan by listing the rooms you want to carpet with approximate room sizes.

Then decide whether you want wall-to-wall, rooms size, or an area rug. Wall-to-wall carpeting provides a look of spaciousness; room-size rugs can be turned to equalize wear; area rugs provide drama—and, like room-size rugs, can be taken up when you move.

Wearability is what most people look for, and you should consider traffic in this case. Pile density is an important factor in durability. If the pile is thick, packed tightly, and resilient, chances are the carpet will wear well. Check the pile density by bending back a corner of the carpet. The old rule — the deeper, the denser, the better — will always apply.

Most carpet today is tufted. To put it simply, fiber is pushed through a backing to form little loops called tufts. The yarn that appears on the surface is either left as loops or is cut. There are many variations of cut and uncut pile carpets.

Level-loop 2-level-loop are exactly what their names imply. Shag and plush are two variations of cut pile, and there are even combinations of cut-and-loop pile for different visuals as in the hottest new "look" — sculptured shag.

As a general rule, shags provide a formal or informal look depending on the height and density of the pile. Plushes are decidely formal, and their tendency to show footprints like velvet is part of their appeal.

In high-traffic areas, level-loops work best (that's why this construction is used almost exclusively in commercial buildings). Level-loops now come in some very dramatic, colorful prints . . . ideal for family rooms or dens since pattern tends to mask fine dust and lint.

Versatility and beauty are not the only virtues of today's technological advances. Man made fibers developed for carpet manufacturer in special lengths, thicknesses, and colors have never been easier to care for. All man-made fibers have these qualities in common: They clean well, are mildew-proof, mothproof, and non-allergenic.

Most of the confusion in buying carpet lies in the identification of fiber. While the consumer is subjected to literally hundreds of fiber brand names, there are, in fact, only four basic man-made fiber types used in residential carpet today: nylon, acrylic, polyester, and polypropylene. Each of these fibers has its own specific properties.

Reputable manufacturers preselect the best fiber for the appearance and performance of the carpet, depending on its use.

Since padding is a must, get the best you can afford. Padding protects your investment by extending the life of your carpeting and rugs. It also adds comfort, absorbs shock, and insulates against noises, heat, and cold. Many fine-quality carpets have a built-in high-density rubber-cushioned backing which not only gives uniform support but cuts down on installation costs . . . a good way to get your money's worth."

To the average shopper, color is the most important consideration from a decorating standpoint. Once you've established where the carpet is to be used and have selected the most suitable construction, then the color of carpeting sets the whole scheme for a room. One of the biggest fashion trends today is pattern-dyed carpet with a range of textures and colorations you have to see to believe.

Where color is concerned, it's well to remember that no matter what the texture or pile height, solid colors (pale, medium, or dark) show more dirt than patterns. Widely spaced patterns show less than solids but more than smaller compact patterns. Multi-toned tweeds show less dirt more than any of the others.

Cortina Ski Valley Set for December Start

HAINES FALLS—Cortina Valley, the Northeast's newest and most glamorous ski area, is moving steadily ahead with plans to greet the first skiers of the season sometime in early December.

And perhaps the most important step toward that energetic goal was the recent installation of the ski area's mammoth 3,300-foot blue double chair lift.

To accomplish that herculean task Cortina Valley utilized the services of a Sikorsky S-61 helicopter, operated by Carson Helicopters, Inc. The powerful chopper hoisted the huge lift towers — ranging in weight from 2,500 to 7,000 pounds — like matchsticks, and then gently lowered them in steel-reinforced poured-concrete forms sunk eight feet into the side of the mountain.

Installation of the first lift began with the upper towers and then progressed down the mountain to the base. Each tower was individually harnessed, hoisted and flown to the pre-set concrete stanchions. There, a six-man ground crew aligned the framework and bolted the tower firmly in place.

The cable is expected to be strung, and the chairs added, shortly. The entire lift will then have to be tested, and must conform to rigid standards set by the New York State Department of Labor.

Area Business News

That, however, is only the beginning. A second, 2,600 foot double chair lift, as well as a 1,000 foot poma lift, will be added before the first snows dust Cortina Valley's carefully manicured slopes.

Also proceeding on schedule is construction of Cortina Valley's modern, multi-purpose lodge, which will include cafeteria, dining room, lounge, wine and cheese shop, discotheque and equipment repair and rental shop.

The one thing that most ski areas can't guarantee is snow, but Cortina Valley is an exception. The latest in snowmaking equipment is designed to blanket every inch of Cortina Valley's 40 acres of trails and slopes, virtually guaranteeing that there will be a place to ski in the Catskills this winter, regardless of whether Nature cooperates.

But it will be hard for natural snow not to find its way to Cortina Valley. With a base elevation of 1,925 feet on a Northern exposure, conditions are ideal for season-long skiing.

Cortina Valley's lifts will operate seven days a week from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., but again this area will offer a unique touch. The management has promised that lift tickets will be sold on a limited basis, thereby eliminating the long lines that plague most popular slopes. Even without the guarantee, the three Cortina Valley lifts will be able to accommodate 2,800 skiers an hour.

Although Cortina Valley touts its "Last Goodbye" slope as a challenge to an expert skier, the area is designed primarily for the beginner, novice and intermediate skier. "Mona Lisa," the mile-long novice trail, is one of the longest anywhere.

Family vacation packages, low rental and instruction rates, a fully-equipped nursery with full-time counselors and a wide variety of apres ski activities are just a few of the special attractions that Cortina Valley has planned for this its inaugural season.

Halloween Vandalism... Main Topic in Wawarsing

ELLENVILLE — Halloween vandalism and rowdyism in the Napanoch area was the main subject of discussion at last Thursday night's regular meeting of the Wawarsing Town Board.

About 30 Napanoch residents were on hand to issue strong complaints about the night of Oct. 31 where residents were pelted with eggs, rocks and "just about anything they could pick up," according to Town Clerk Kenneth Mitchell.

Town officials called in the law as soon as the situation became apparent Halloween night but according to town officials, the police were unequal to the task. "The Trooper cars and the sheriffs got hit too," said one town official, "and when they got out to chase the vandals, they just dispersed."

The culprits were idetified as "kids from about 16 to 22" and numbered anywhere from 100 to 150.

The town board pledged more effective preventive measures next year — "we just weren't ready for this," said one official — and forwarded petitions from the residents to State Police and the Sheriff's Department. "The kids down there (Napanoch) are just going wild," said Mitchell.

In other action, it was announced that steel beams for the construction of a new Clinton Avenue Bridge are now available and that bids for the job will be opened on Nov. 14 at 8 p.m. at the town hall.

Arthur August, chief of the Napanoch Fire Department, addressed the town board asking it to promulgate a fire protection code. The board suggested that August and the other members of the Wawarsing Fire Commission suggest a code for adoption and that the two bodies work out a final version.

Two bond resolutions were approved, one for $27,474 to pay for a used front end loader, the other for $4,268 for a new spreader body.

There will be a public hearing on Nov. 18 at 7:30 p.m. to discuss rfenewal of fire protection contracts for the town with its various fire comapnies.

It's working

Septic Tank — Cesspool Clogging Can Now Be Prevented!

Livingston, N. J. — An amazing bacterial discovery that prevents clogging of septic tanks and cesspools with but a single, safe and easy-to-use yearly treatment, has been developed by the FX-Lab Co., Livingston, N. J.

Sluggish systems and drainfields can also be restored to normal by fast acting bacterial cultures.

They are also recommended as a "starter" to seed newly cleaned out or newly installed septic tanks and cesspools.

These proven FX bacterial organisms, known as FX-4 for septic tanks, FX-7 for cesspools, and FX-11 for sluggish septic tanks and cesspools are available locally.

Available also, is a free booklet "The Story of Willie Bacteria, or How To Take Care of Your Septic Tank or Cesspool" from:

'She's No Spring Chicken Anymore'

NEW YORK (UPI) — How do you tell a once graceful, proud woman that she's past 40, slightly chunky by today's standards and no longer among the most fachionable in the world?

When she's the Empire State Building, maybe you don't have to.

H. Hamilton Weber leaned back in his large leather swivel chair and reached into the inside jacket pocket of his pinstriped gray flannel suit, pulling out three sheets of stiff white paper. Weber, a large man, laughed.

"I almost forgot about these," he said, not too convincingly. "These are three new leases we signed just this morning. Now what was that about the Empire State Building having hurt feelings?"

Hurt feelings or not, it is fact that the Empire State Building is no spring chicken. The 102-story mass of steel, concrete, granite, marble and limestone celebrated its 40th birthday three years ago.

What really smarts, though, are the dark twin towers of the World Trade Center, visible through the New York haze reaching skyward in lower Manhattan. Not to mention that upstart, the Sears Building, several states away in distant Chicago, a building whose corridors are so long, a computerized robot machine is employed to deliver office mail.

The Sears Building, at 1,454 feet, and the World Trade Center, at 1,350, now both top the Empire State's 1,250-foot height, snatching from the nation's once premier skyscraper the title of "tallest building in the world."

Tour guides in Chicago and downtown Manhattan make ample note of this point. But Weber and other spokesmen for the Empire State insist that neither they nor their building's 900 tenants give more than token thought to the "numbers game" and insist there are several other more important qualities that count.

"It wasn't too long ago," said Weber, a veteran building management specialist involved with the Empire State since its beginning, "that I received a curious letter from overseas. All it had on the envelope was a small American flag, my name and the notation 'Empire State.' That's all. And still it got here. All the way from the Far East. This is unquestionably the most famous address in the world."

The building's tenants apparently agree. During an economic crunch in which suites in many Manhattan skyscrapers remain empty, the Empire State is 97 per cent filled. "Many of our tenants have been here for three or more decades," Weber said.

As he spoke, a long line of visitors made its way toward a bank of elevators that would take them to the 86th floor and the lower of two observation decks.

Among them was Mrs. Sally Grant of Des Moines, Iowa, who had four young children in tow.

"We've been waiting and saving for this trip to New York for years," Mrs. Grant said, "and the one absolute thing we had to do was go to the top of the Empire State Building. The trip wouldn't be complete without it. So what if it's not the tallest any more?"

The observation deck lines form in the building's imposing lobby between 9:30 a.m. and midnight every day of the year. Visitors from other cities and nations, most clutching cameras and some holding maps, number between 1.5 million and 2 million each year. Building officials say there is no sign of a tapering off.

"We get a heck of a crowd all the time," Weber said. "It's always been that way and probably always will."

The Empire State reigned as the world's tallest for some 39 years, a white elephant of the depression years whose grandiose scale captured the imagination of the world.

An architectural firm two years ago revealed that it would be physically possible to add a dozen or so stories to the Empire State to permit the grand gray lady to reassert her world's tallest claim.

But, according to Daniel J. Howe Jr., Empire State public relations director, the mail was overwhelmingly opposed to the idea if the project would mean changing in any way the Empire State's now familiar profile.

At the moment, Howe said, the project is considered an active option, but there are no concrete plans in the works.

Architectural historians might chuckle over it all. As the archives tell it, the Empire State initially was to ascend only 85 stories, just four feet higher than New York's Chrysler building, also under construction at the time.

"We were afraid Walter Chrysler would pull a trick and at the last minute raise some kind of a rod," Weber recalled. So the Empire State builders added a 200-foot dirigible mast to the top of their structure to ensure supremacy. The dirigible mast was never used as such, but it raised the Empire State to its 1,250-foot height.

"It's a numbers game," Weber said. "A kind of talk that doesn't mean anything to us."

'Bad News Along the High Wire'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — No sooner did Vernon Woodrich get a telephone installed atop the flagpole where he has been perched for more than three weeks than it brought him bad news:

He may have to stay up there a lot longer than planned, or give up his claim to the official flagpole-sitting record.

Woodrich has been living in a pup tent on a 6-by-6-foot platform atop the 30-foot pole since Oct. 15, figuring he would break the record. He thought it was about 115-120 days.

He seemed somewhat stunned when a reporter, taking advantage of the telephone installed, told Woodrich the Guinness Book of World Records listed the record as eight months and four days, more than twice his estimate.

And he grew downright peevish when told that Guinness notes that in the fifth Century A.D., St. Simeon Stylites spent 33 years and three months on a stone pillar in the Syrian desert.

"That has never been authenticated," Woodrich snapped, obviously in no mood to contemplate matching the monk's asceticism.

He was also doubtful that Guinness' acceptance of the record set by Kenneth Gidge, an aotor from Dallas, in a hut atop a 30-foot pole at Peabody, Mass., in 1971.

"I don't count the Texas guy," he said. "His platform was fully glassed. All I have is a pup tent. I'm out in all the weather, and as far as I'm concerned, the record for that sort of thing was 115 days in the '30s."

Why flagpole sitting?

"Shipwreck Kelley has been my hero since he was a flagpole sitter in the 30s," Woodrich said. "But this also gave me a chance to get closer to God."

Also, he said, he wanted to prove he could do something. He never in his life has finished something he started out to do, he said, and this time, he will.

He may run into opposition from both the record books and his wife, Virginia, who was left alone to run their coffee shop, next to Woodrich's pole. The shop has no phone, so she has to use a public booth to ring him for his meal orders.

"I wish he'd come down," Mrs. Woodrich complained, hoisting him a tuna salad sandwich and a cup of coffee in a pulley-mounted bucket.

"We have two children and I have to do everything, keep the house and run the shop."

Asked about his sex life, Woodrich said, "I'm postponing it."

When Barbara Rawley, a shapely, female installer, appeared atop a truck hoist to put in his telephone, "He said it was the closest he had been to a girl in almost a month," she said.

St. Simeon had a similar complaint, but he blamed the devil.

Rotten Food at High Prices

NEW YORK (UPI) — Moldy cheese, tainted meat and rotten potato salad are among spoiled items being sold to middle income consumers at higher prices in major supermarkets throughout the city, officials have reported.

Holding up bags of black bananas, "disintegrated" matzo balls, and other rotten foods, New York Mayor Abraham Beame and Consumer Affairs Commissioner Elinor Guggenheimer announced plans to start a new program to protect the city's consumers from spoiled food.

Mrs. Guggenheimer, who grimaced as she smelled the spoiled packages, said that all of the food displayed at City Hall had been purchased within 24 hours at 96 foodstores throughout the city.

"This might surprise some people, but we found that the middle-income consumer is paying the highest price for the lowest quality food," she said.

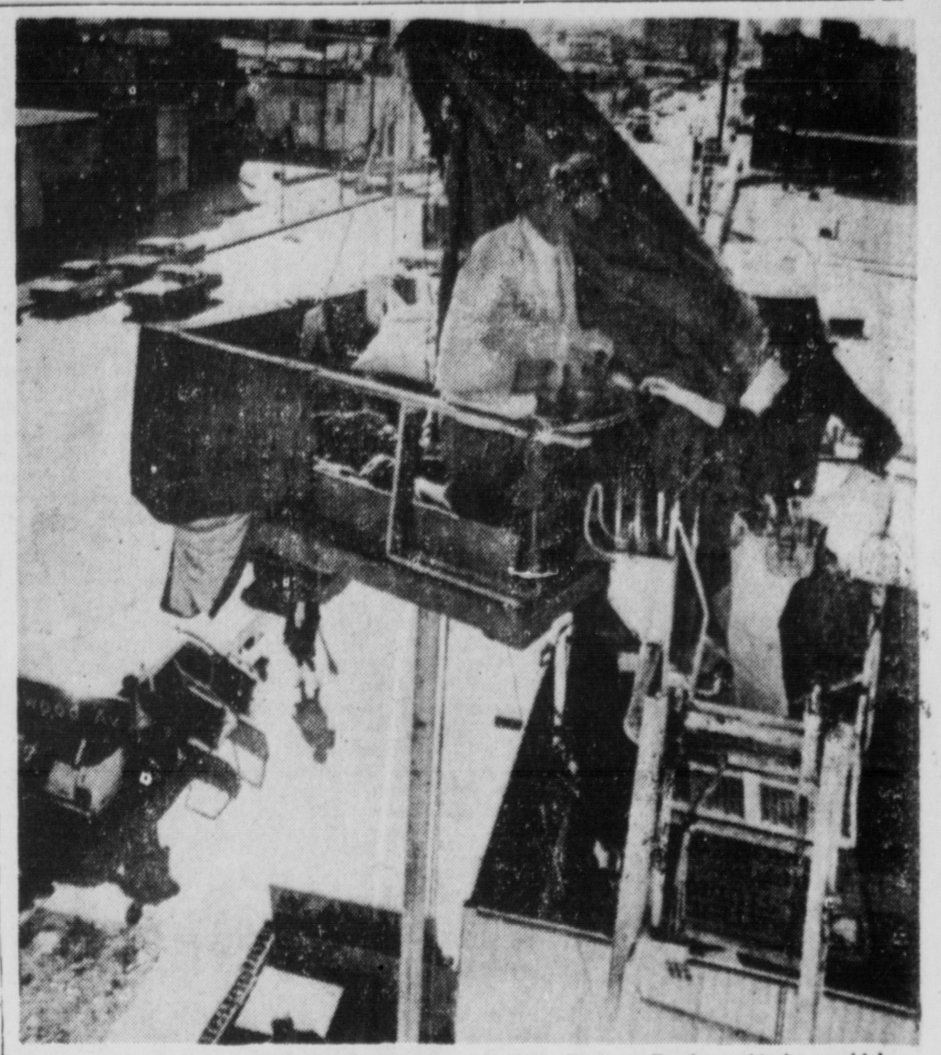
Mrs. Guggenheimer said that while the Department of Agriculture has guidelines on the quality of food that can be sold, she would like to see "resolutions passed that will allow us to get this food off the shelves of food stores."

She said that the very old, who have poor eyesight, the very young, who have been sent to do the family's shopping, and people in a hurry, might pick up food similar to that which was displayed today.

"All of this food was purchased at regular market price, with the exception of some cans that were so rusted or leaky that we felt they shouldn't have been sold at any price," she said.

Mrs. Guggenheimer said that while members of her department were spending some $250 on rotten food, not one grocery checkout worker tried to talk them out of making the purchases.

Beame said the city's Department of Consumer Affairs will propose a regulation which would prohibit merchants from selling food in leaky, rusting or bloated containers.



SURE, I'LL DO IT . . . When Pacific Telephone installer Barbara Rowley said she would be delighted to install a telephone for Vernon Woodridge, she didn't know what a challenge the job would pose. Woodridge is attempting to break the world's record for flagpole sitting and his temporary home is a 6-by-6 foot platform 30 feet above the ground. Woodridge has been perched atop the pole since October 15.

Colleges, Universities Asked to Trim Programs

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) Faced with predictions that student enrollments will drop sharply, all colleges and universities in the state have been asked to trim unnecessary programs and strictly limit new construction plans.

Education Commissioner Ewald B. Nyquist said recently that the institution had been asked to re-evaluate their goals in view of a Board of Regents study predicting that enrollments by 1990 may drop to 31 per cent below the level in 1973.

The Regents report, released last week warned that the decline, when coupled with inflation, "may well result in financial crises for many private institutions."

With the exception of cases where structures must be replaced, the board recommended curtailing new building plans because of the predictions and said that the schools should examine their faculty tenure policies.

Nyquist said institutions in both the private and public sector have been told to "re-examine whether they ought to extend admission policies . . . and to plan now for what they think their institutions' aim will be" in the future.

The detailed study predicted that enrollments would increase slightly until 1979 and then plunge by 15 per cent in 1985 and 31 per cent in 1990.

The board also told colleges and universities in the state to examine its graduate programs and do away with programs with low enrollments. It also reaffirmed an earlier policy statement that new institutions should not be allowed to offer master's programs unless "the circumstances are most unusual" or it was a cooperative effort with another school.

The study, a progress report on long-range master plans for higher education, said that by 1990 undergraduate enrollment alone could decline between 380,300 and 421,600 — to put it equal with 1969 figures.

The Regents recommended that the public and private colleges try to attract broader types of students, such as senior citizens, prisoners, and members of the armed forces. The body also suggested stronger efforts to attract veterans and women.

The board also said the institutions should "develop a rational and flexible tenure policy which contains provisions to deal with possible institutional enrollment declines."

The state's highest educational body also suggested placing more stress on attracting part-time students and said they should be included in the educational assistance programs offered by the state. The proposal has been presented before but was turned down by the state legislature.

Calling "institutional survival a top priority," the Regents said that while tuition costs should be kept near levels, "students should pay their fair share of the cost of education."

During a period of inflation, tuition levels would be expected to rise in relation to price increases in all sectors of higher education," the Regents said.

State's Commercial Banks Report On Student Loans

NEW YORK This Fall's migration of students to college campuses is over, but New York State's commercial banks report that despite tight money and rising college costs, student loans were readily available to young people intent on college or vocational educations.

Frederick K. Gardner, executive vice president of the New York State Bankers Association, said preliminary reports indicate slightly fewer students obtained loans for the 1974-1975 academic year, reflecting an apparent national drop in the college population. However, the total amount borrowed from member banks by the end of 1974 probably will exceed the record $290 million for 1973 because college education costs rose 9.8 per cent in the last year. He said that charges by private institutions for tuition, room and board now average $4,039 annually, while those for state-supported universities and colleges exceed $2,400.

The 267 member banks within the NYSBA, representing 98 per cent of the state's commercial banks, provide loans to students who have been state residents for one year for college or vocational education anywhere in the country. Loans are granted to students or to parents, and also to both students and parents who wish to share the increasing costs for higher education.

Especially popular are loans granted directly to the student and guaranteed by the New York Higher Education Assistance Corporation (NYHEAC), the state agency which administers the federally-insured tuition loan program. Recently, NYHEAC commended the state's full service banks for their leadership in extending financial assistance to students. At the present time, 390,297 students have loans outstanding under this program—and more have been assisted by NYSBA member banks than all the other state's financial institutions combined.

Under the NYHEAC program, students obtain loans at a seven per cent interest rate, and repayment does not begin until nine months after graduation, or if the student leaves school. All students whose families have adjusted income under $15,000 annually automatically qualify for such loans. Amounts loaned range from $1,500 for the freshman year to $2,000 each for the sophomore, junior and senior years, or a possible total of $7,500 for undergraduate education. Graduate students may borrow up to $2,500 each year, or a total of $10,000. Students may obtain up to $1,000 a year for vocational education.

Even if adjusted family income exceeds the $15,000 ceiling, the students may still apply for a guaranteed student loan. In such cases, however, the student is required to prepay the seven per cent yearly interest. However, repayment of the principal is deferred until nine months after completion of the course of study.

Gardner said many families continue to assume the complete financing costs for educating their children by obtaining direct loans from their neighborhood full service commercial bank. Such loans are customized to suit family circumstances, and interest rates vary, but in most cases up to $20,000 may be borrowed for education purposes. In other cases, the student obtains an NYHEAC loan and the parents another loan to make up for cost beyond NYHEAC levels.

ONE TO A CUSTOMER—Safeway Stores, Inc., in San Francisco, is asking its customers in 400 Northern California groceries to limit their purchases of sugar. The food chain posted signs asking customers to limit their purchases to one bag of sugar after a "rapid movement" of sugar was noticed when the Soviet Union ordered up to 500,000 tons of the sweetener on the open market. A worldwide shortage of raw sugar has caused the price of that commodity to jump by 400 per cent in a year. (UPI)

'Mercy Killing' Surgeon Tells All

DR. GEORGE MAIR

LONDON (UPI) — To the strains of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, Dr. George Mair held the hand of his middle-aged woman patient. Then he slipped a hypodermic needle into a vein and killed her.

Mair admits she was only one of the many patients he killed deliberately during his long career as a surgeon in hospitals throughout England and Scotland.

The 60-year-old retired physician made the disclosure about euthanasia — "mercy killing" — today in his autobiography, "Confessions of a Surgeon."

He said he knows he risks prosecution for murder even though such actions were always at the request of the patient.

Mair, a fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of Glasgow and Edinburgh, said he is retired from medicine and devotes his time to writing and lecturing.

He said he could not remember how many persons he killed for mercy, "but it is not a small number."

"I know many people will not agree and say it is murder," he said. "I do not regard it as such."

Mair said the mercy killings began soon after he became resident surgical officer at Warneford Hospital in the English Midlands in 1939.

"Death certificates were issued without question, and there seemed no problems with the coroner," he said. "The actual mercy killings went according to plan."

"It was, of course, completely illegal and totally unethical, but I still say it was merciful to the people concerned," he said, "It saved them weeks and months of pain, worry and possibly even fear."

He gave the following account of the Beethoven "mercy killing" of a woman in her middle 40s with only months to live:

"She explained that her house was now in order, her will organized and that she had seen her family with friends while she was still looking reasonably well —she had her hair dressed for the occasion.

"There was nothing left for her to do but die.

"She wished me to take her into a side room, lay on certain music from a favorite disc and then, when she gave me the signal, allow her to go out using a suitable injection.

"I did exactly as she wished, and she squeezed my hand while listening to the second movement of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. I then slipped the needle into a large vein and gave her an enormous dose of suitable drugs.

"She slept swiftly and died in less than an hour. Her last words were whispered, but clear: 'Thank you so very, very much.'"

State Suspends Pharmacy License

ALBANY — The New York State Regents, at their regular monthly meeting in October, suspended the pharmacists license of Ellenville pharmacist Martin E. Balotin for 15 months, with 12 months of that suspension stayed, and of the Paul R. Balotin Pharmacy, 136 Canal Street, Ellenville, for two months, with that stayed.

Balotin was charged with about 10 violations, dealing chiefly with improepr advertising, and the handling of controlled drug prescriptions. The violations were alleged to have taken place between February and May of 1973.

Civil Service Lists Examination Dates

KINGSTON — The Kingston Municipal Civil Service Commission announces open competitive examinations for garage manager (the uptown parking garage), custodian and account clerk.

The salary range of the garage manager is from $6,000 a year to $8,300. Candidates must have two years of "increasingly responsible experince" in the operation of a parking garage or a year of post high school education and a year of garage management or an equivalent combination of training and experience.

Candidates for account clerk must be graduates of a senior high school.

Salary range for the custodial position is from $6,680 per year to $7,580.

The last date for filing for the examination is Nov. 13. The exams will be given on Dec. 14. Further information is available from the Municipal Civil Service Commission, city hall, 1 Madow Street.

Town of Wawarsing Officially Recognized

WAWARISING — The Town of Wawarsing has been officially recognized as a Bicentennial Community by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration in Washington, D.C.

To be so recognized, the town had to have incorporated the three basic themes of the Bicentennial — Heritage '76, Festival USA, and Horizon '76 — into a workable program for the town.

Wawarsing will receive a certificate of recognition, the official bicentennial flag, and will be entitled to use the ARBA emblem.

High Falls Homemakers Elect New Officers

HIGH FALLS — The High Falls Happy Homemakers 4-H Club met recently at the High Falls Community Church with 38 girls present.

New officers elected included Lauren Reisenauer, president; Elise Reisenauer, vice president; Theresa Lendvay, secretary; and Lynn Schoonmaker, treasurer.

Wendy Snyder is the New Reporter, Carolyn Elmore the Refreshment Chairman, and Loretta Lendvay the Recreation Leader.

Plans were made for attending Achievement Night on Oct. 18 at the J. Watson Bailey Junior High School in Kingston. A work meeting for crafts was planned for Oct. 22 from 7-8:30 p.m. at High Falls Community Church, and a Halloween Party on Oct. 29.

School Drive Underway

RHINEBECK — Chancellor Livingston Elementary School and Bulkeley School are in the midst of a special collection drive aimed at obtaining audio-visual equipment for the school.

The program, "Labels for Education," is sponsored by the Campbell Soup Company. Between now and December 31 it is hoped to collect 2,600 labels to earn Califone Headphones and Headset Junction Boxes for classroom use.

Students are saving their labels from either Campbell Soup or Bean Products and bringing them to school. The Rhinebeck PTA asks its friends and neighbors will do the same.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGE . . . Vietnam vets sign postcard for President Ford prepared by Centralia College in Seattle and brought to University of Washington for additional signatures. (UPI)

'Miles and Miles of Travel'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Postal Service has figured out a new, billion dollar system that means a package going from El Paso to Midland, Tex., 301 miles away, will travel 1,794 miles.

Under the new National Bulk Mail System, a parcel mailed in Pensacola for Panama City, Fla., 103 miles away, will go through New Orleans, Memphis and Jacksonville.

The General Accounting Office questions the efficiency of such a system, expected to cost almost $1 billion for buildings and machinery.

It seeks to use more mechanized equipment for sorting parcels, catalogs, books, films, circulars, weekly papers, trade journals and "non-time value" magazines.

The system is under construction and should be operating by late 1975. It will use 21 bulk mail centers and 12 auxiliary facilities.

GAO said for most packages sent less than 600 miles — 58 per cent of those handled — the mail will actually be slower.

GAO questioned the claim that by 1984 the system will save $500 million a year, and said the standards the Postal Service is promising under NBMS fall short of the present delivery standards of its chief competitor.

Postmaster General Elmer T. Klassen, asked by GAO to respond, did not dispute the findings.

But, he said, "to most customers a one-day difference in delivery standards is not critical, so long as the service is consistent, packages are not damaged and the price is right."

Anyway, he said, the Postal Service had to do something about "outmoded facilities, inadequate mechanization and unsatisfactory processing methods" and it decided installing a new system was better than piecemeal solutions.

If the plan works to the service's satisfaction, it plans to invest $4 billion in similar mechanization for first class mail.

Seminar Planned On Shoplifting

KINGSTON — A combination of effort by various area business groups has resulted in an anti-shoplifting management seminar, to be held in the Governor Clinton Hotel in Kingston at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 19.

Spearheaded by the Uptown Kingston Businessmen's Association and coordinated by the Chamber of Commerce of Ulster County, the program is designed to alert retailers to methods of prevention and apprehension. The management division of the Small Business Administration, along with several area officials, will present films, demonstrations, information, and panel discussion.

The Chamber has included in its coordination efforts an invitation to members of its County Retail Council. Carl Rea, program chairman, noted that capacity was limited and advised those planning to attend to call the Chamber office at 338-5100 by Nov. 15. There is no fee for participants.

A "Thank You" From the Hincheys

Erika and I thank the friends throughout the county who helped me during the long months of this campaign. The victory is theirs as much as ours.

I thank the people of the 101st Assembly District for the opportunity to work for them as their full-time legislator. There are "promises to keep . . ."

Let ALL of us work together to post proof that government can be better, and that one man with the help and counsel of his constituents CAN make a diffedence.

Good News for Detective Fans

Rex Stout Preparing Another Nero Wolfe Story

BREWSTER, N.Y. (UPI) — Nero Wolfe fans, rejoice! Another story about America's biggest detective will get under way next month.

Rex Stout is nearing 90 but he is still writing stories about Nero Wolfe, the fat detective who weighs one-seventh of a ton and lives on West 35th street in New York City.

"I never write in the summer," Stout said in an interview at his home, which straddles the New York-Connecticut border. "I'll start one on November 19th at 4 o'clock. It'll probably be finished the middle of January. Come out in the middle of June, something like that. Provided I'm alive —I could die, good God, I'm 87 years old. In fact, if I didn't want more than my share, I'd have died quite a while long time ago."

Stout, who sports a beard once described as "a wishy-washy thing that looks as if he stole it off a billy-goat," said he wrote a new Nero Wolfe book each year.

"Well, that's what I did for 40 years, but I've slowed down a little."

The fictional Wolfe lives in a four-story brownstone. His assistant, Archie Goodwin, does his legwork, a chef cooks his meals and another assistant helps him tend to the 10,000 orchids he keeps in a rooftop greenhouse.

The stories have been so successful that other writers have written books about Stout's books. There is also the Nero Wolfe Cookbook. Stout said he has cooked all the dishes mentioned in the adventures "at least two or three times."

Some students of Nero Wolfe have argued that Wolfe is the illegitimate son of another fictional detective, Sherlock Holmes, since Wolfe was born in Montenegro about the time Holmes visited there in one of Arthur Conan Doyle's mysteries.

But the amiable Stout discounts that possibility as a coincidence.

"Oh, somebody's just having a lot of fun. If they think that's fun well, okay."

Wolfe is nothing like his creator. Wolfe hates exercise and has a hot temper; Stout is agile and affable. Wolfe likes gourmet cooking and insists on it; Stout, too, likes good food, but won't refuse a hot dog.

Wolfe said he could not explain Wolfe's origins.

"Alexander Woollcott claimed I created Nero Wolfe after him, for Christ's sake. Maybe because he's fat. I don't know. One policeman kept after me for hours to try to get me to tell him what policeman Nero Wolfe come from — now, what the hell's his name?; he's in politics now—Sandy Garelik."

"I honestly know nothing about where he came from. Listen, you know damn well in all fiction writing, dramatic, narrative — no matter what level of literature —all characters are of two kinds. They're all either created or contrived. In the created ones, the writer really has no idea where he came from or anything else. And the others, they're made up. And, boy, how you can tell 'em apart. In Dickens, for instance —Dickens is full of contrived characters — the minute one of 'em appears, you can spot him. Now as for created characters, they appear at all levels. Tarzan was one, for example. That's the two kinds. Now, Nero Wolfe and Archie Goodwin are the created kind. I don't have the faintest notion where they came from or any of that. I know nothing about it."

Only two of the Nero Wolfe books were made into movies. Walter Connolly starred as Nero Wolfe in "League of Frightened Men" in 1937. "Fer-de-Lance" became "Meet Nero Wolfe" as a film and starred Edward Arnold.

Stout explained why there haven't been others.

"I hate goddam movies and television, and I turn down all offers. I get about two a week. And I just say no to all of them."

Stout is also a reader of other mysteries.

He mentioned Josephine Tey's "Daughter of Time" as one of his favorites.

"In a way, it's the best tour de force in all detective writing. It's a high detective in Scotland Yard who's in the hospital in the bed, and the whole story is there in the hospital in the bed, looking into the murder of the princes in the tower about the time of Richard III, and deciding who did it. And that's all it is. My god, she makes a fascinating story."

Which of his own books does he like best?

"I have no idea. I really have no favorites." Stout claimed at first. But he talks fondly of "The Doorbell Rang," a mystery set in the mid 1960s in which Wolfe tangles with the FBI. Many critics believe it is Stout's best work.

"I once got a fan letter that said 'Dear Mr. Stout, I have read many of your Nero Wolfe mysteries and enjoyed them. I have now read The Doorbell Rang. Goodbye.' It was signed John Wayne."

Rex Todhunter Stout was born, one of nine children, in Noblesville, Ind., Dec. 1, 1886. He read the Bible twice before he was 3 and before he was 10 he read about 1,200 other volumes of biography, history, fiction, philosophy, science and poetry in the library of his father, John Wallace Stout, a Quaker and a teacher.

When he was one, the family moved to Kansas.

At 13 he was the state's champion speller. At 18, he joined the Navy, and eventually became a yeoman aboard the Mayflower, President Theodore Roosevelt's yacht.

After leaving the Navy in 1908, Stout roamed the country. He was a cigar salesman in Cleveland, a guide to the Indian pueblos near Santa Fe, a barker for a sightseeing bus in Colorado Springs, a bookstore salesman in Chicago, Indianapolis and Milwaukee, and a stablehand in New York.

He created the school banking system and installed it in 400 cities and towns throughout the country. In 1927, Stout retired from the world of finance and turned to writing. His first novel, "How Like a God," was published in 1929.

Stout does most of his writing at his home, called Big Meadow, which he built himself. He modeled it after the palace of the Bey of Tunis which he saw during a Mediterranean vacation. The result is a concrete U-shaped structure of 14 rooms built around an interior court.

"We didn't put in a eunch well," he says, "because there aren't enough eunuchs in this country to make it worthwhile."

Unpaid Mail Banned

WASHINGTON, D.C.

The Postal Service will discontinue delivery of unpaid mail, according to Postmaster General E. T. Klassen.

"It is unfair," Klassen said, "to burden the vast majority of mailers with costs created by the few who mail without prepayment of postage."

Postage-due delivery has also caused severe financial loss for utilities, banks, department stores, and other businesses whose volume of unpaid mail has been increasing, he said.

Postal Service officials estimate annual postage-due losses to recipients of unpaid mail and the additional losses to the Postal Service in the multi-million dollar range.

Effective Sunday, Nov. 17, all unpaid mail—mail without any postage — will be returned to the sender. Previously, unpaid mail was generally delivered postage due. Mail of any class will be endorsed "Returned for Postage" and returned to the sender with no attempt to collect postage due.

If the envelope does not contain a return address, it will be sent to the dead letter office for appropriate handling.

The new regulation does not affect business reply mail, federal government and free mail delivered to the blind, armed forces mail, or keys of identification devices returned to owners, Klassen noted.

Sawyers Beat KHS

By IRA FUSFELD

KINGSTON

"If we're gonna beat 'em, we're gonna do it with what we're capable of doing."

So Saugerties High School football coach Fred Seither told that to his troops and they listened ... well enough, in fact, to defeat Kingston High, 17-7, Saturday at Dietz Stadium and send an SRO Homecoming Day crowd away disappointed.

The script for this third annual battle between Ulster Country's representatives in the Dutchess County Scholastic League could have been written weeks in advance.

The Sawyers didn't try any funny stuff. They hit hard on defense, made the necessary holes on offense, and just plugged away on the ground, eating up time and yardage the way Saugerties football teams always do when they're playing well.

Kingston, on the other hand, played the way the 1974 version of the Maroons have been doing each week during this, a winless season. KHS gave 100 percent, make no mistake about that. But Coach Tony Badaltato's team continued to make the kind of errors that have done them in week after week. This time it was a fumble on the opening play and two major penalties late in the game allowing Sagerties to continue drives that proved the difference.

"If we had played all season like we played today we wouldn't be winless," Badalato said afterward." The kids came through for us but we got beat on penalties. Saugerties was a good football team, but we gave them alot."

The first give was on the first play. Bruce Churchwell, Kingston's fine junior halfback, got his singals crossed with quarterback Danny Brown and the result was a fumble recovered on the Maroon 20 yard line by the alert Tom Abate.

The miscue sufficiently deflated Kingston for most of the first quarter. Only when Bill Chaffin ran back a Sawyer kickoff 46 yards to set up the Maroons' touchdown did KHS again come alive. But by that time Saugerties had built an 11-0 advantage, one which KHS couldn't overcome.

The stunned Kingston team was no match for an explosive Saugerties line when the Sayers took possession following Churchwell's fumble. In three plays Mike Tiano was over to the go-ahead touchdown on a three-yard burst.

On the conversion play, kicker George Peterson picked up a mishandled sanp from center and scooted around right end for two points and Saugerties had an 8-0 lead less than two minutes into the contest.

It wasn't long before the Sawyers had three more points.

Kingston's first full offensive series went nowhere as Abate and Lars Hauck made key defensive plays to throw KHS back to its six. Joe Primo's fourth down punt was short and Saugerties had possession on the Maroon 33.

Again Seither's Sawyers went to the ground and again they ate up Dietz Stadium turf. The had reached the Kingston one and appeared to be ready to go over for the score when Maroon linebacker Steve Hannay stopped Tiano for a four-yard loss on third down and forced Saugerties into a field goal situation. Hannay later injured his ankle and sat out the second half.

The field goal was a 21-yeard boot by Abate with 2:48 left in the opening session giving Saugerties an 11-0 lead.

Rather than fold, Kingston regained its composure, in part due to Hannay's big play, and mostly because Chaffin took a handoff from Chris Zanos on the ensuing kickoff and reaced 46 yards to the Saugerties 44.

That put the zing back into Kingston and it put its best drive of the afternoon together.

Frequently moving out of a new double-slot formation, with a man in motion, Kingston got a big 26-yard pickup on a pass from Brown to Joe Pfeiffer and another 13 yard aerial from Brown to Steve Mehic putting the pigskin on the one. From there Brown plunged in for the TD. Jerry Hart kicked the extra point and it was 11-7.

The remainder of the first half was a comedy of fubmles, interceptions, and penalites, with neither team seriously threatening to score. The teams then traded the ball several times at the outset of the third period until Saugerties took over for what turned out to be the pivotal series of the game.

SHS		KHS

2	Fumbles Lost	3
55	Yards Penalized	65
1-37	Punts	5-33

Scores By Quarters

Saugerties	11	0	0	6	17
Kingston	0	7	0	0	7

The scoring: SHS: Tiano, 3 yd. run (Peterson run)
SHS: Abate, 21 yd. yd. field goal
KHS: Brown, 1 yd. run (Harf kick)
SHS: Malgieri, 1 yd. run (kick failed)

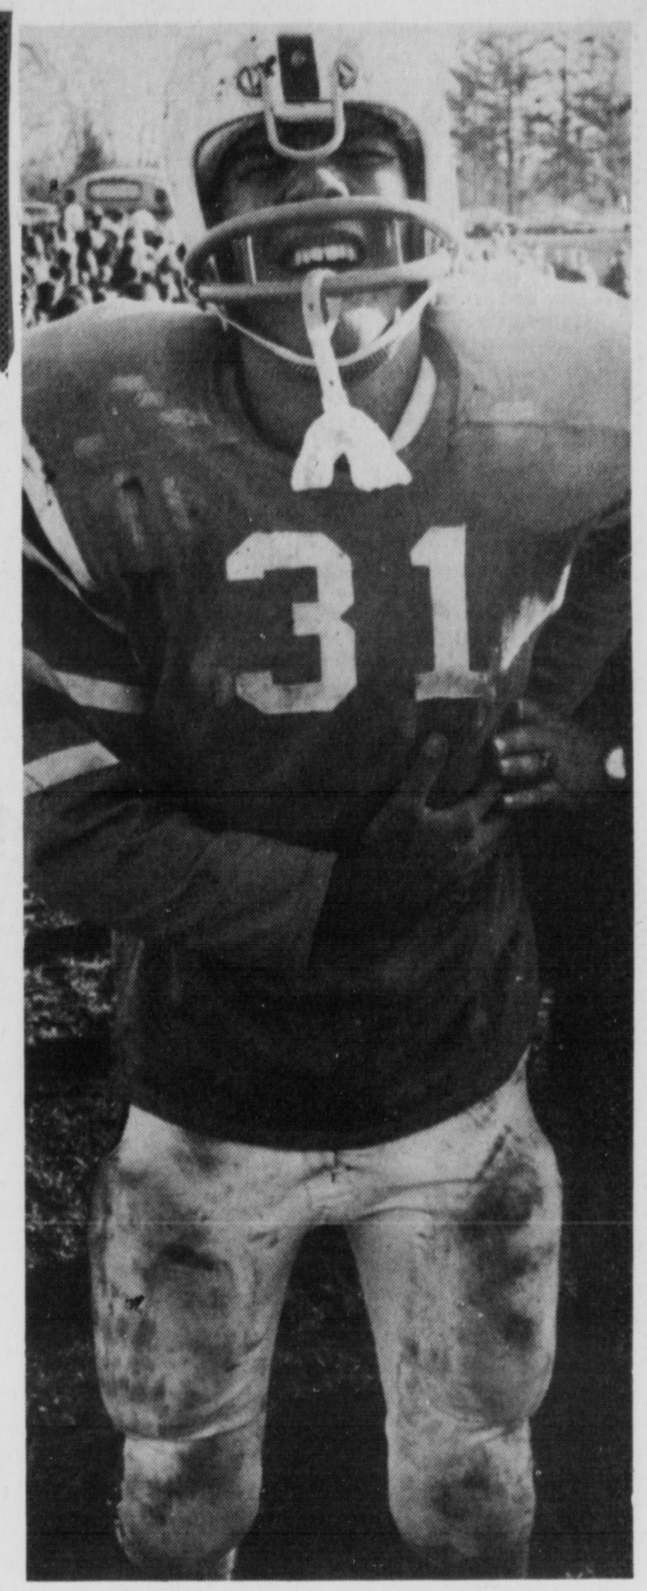
After Abate had sacked Brown on the Saugerties 32 forcing a change of possession on fourth down, the Sawyers went to work with their ground attack. Nine plays were run off by SHS until it had reached the Kingston 40 and the Maroons had held.

In came reserve punter Ron Ricketson (Peterson had suffered rib injuries moments earlier and was through for the day) and on his boot, four KHS players roughed the Saugerties kicker.

The 15-yard penalty enabled the Sawyers to keep their drive going and seven plays later Nick Malgieri made it over from the one for the final touchdown.

Later in the game, again with Saugties driving and killing off the clock, another 15-yard Kingston penalty allowed the Sawyers to maintain control of the ball.

Saugerties wound up hogging the pigskin the last 7:07 of the game. In all, the Sawyers ran off 52 offensive plays to Kingston's 29.



Oh, My Aching Ribs!

College Grid Shocker: MSU Over Ohio State

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI)—The upset of the season was also one of the wildest and most improbable games in Big Ten history.

The fact that Michigan State had downed unbeaten and No. 1 ranked Ohio State 16-13 wasn't even official until one hour after the game was over.

In a dispute over remaining time, both coaches, teams and 78,533 fans waited for discussions which ended with Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke announcing the final score stood.

It marked the third time in four seasons that the Spartans have beaten Ohio State, 4-1 in the conference now, second to Michigan with 5-0. Michigan State is 4-1-1.

The clincher was an 88-yard scoring run by fullback Levi Jackson with 3:17 to play, the second longest scoring run in Michigan State history.

But in the long run, an extra linebacker may have decided the battle.

Michigan State made a minor adjustment in its goal line defense this week to prepare for an awesome Ohio State offensive unit that had been averaging 491 yards and 45 points a game.

It payed off with three stunning goal line stands in the second half.

Ohio State, which entered the game a 26-point favorite, knocked three times on Michigan State's door in the final 30 minutes with first down and goal situations from inside the MSU 10-yard line.

The Bucks came away with just one field goal.

Michigan State pulled a defensive back and replaced him with a linebacker, Freshman Paul Rudzinski, thus countering Ohio State's awesome full house backfield.

"We picked it up on the films," Spartan Coach Denny Stolz said. "They tip off their plays when they line up in the fullhouse. So when they got near the goal line and sent in that extra running back, we sent in our linebacker.

"The three linebackers also gave us maximum lateral pursuit to cut off (tailback Archie) Griffin."

The final goal line stand came in the game's final minutes.

Michigan State had just capped a frantic two-touchdown rally in the game's final five and one-half minutes to take a 16-13 lead.

Quarterback Charlie Baggett hit end Mike Jones with a 44-yard touchdown pass with 9:30 gone in the final period to cut the Ohio State lead to 13-10.

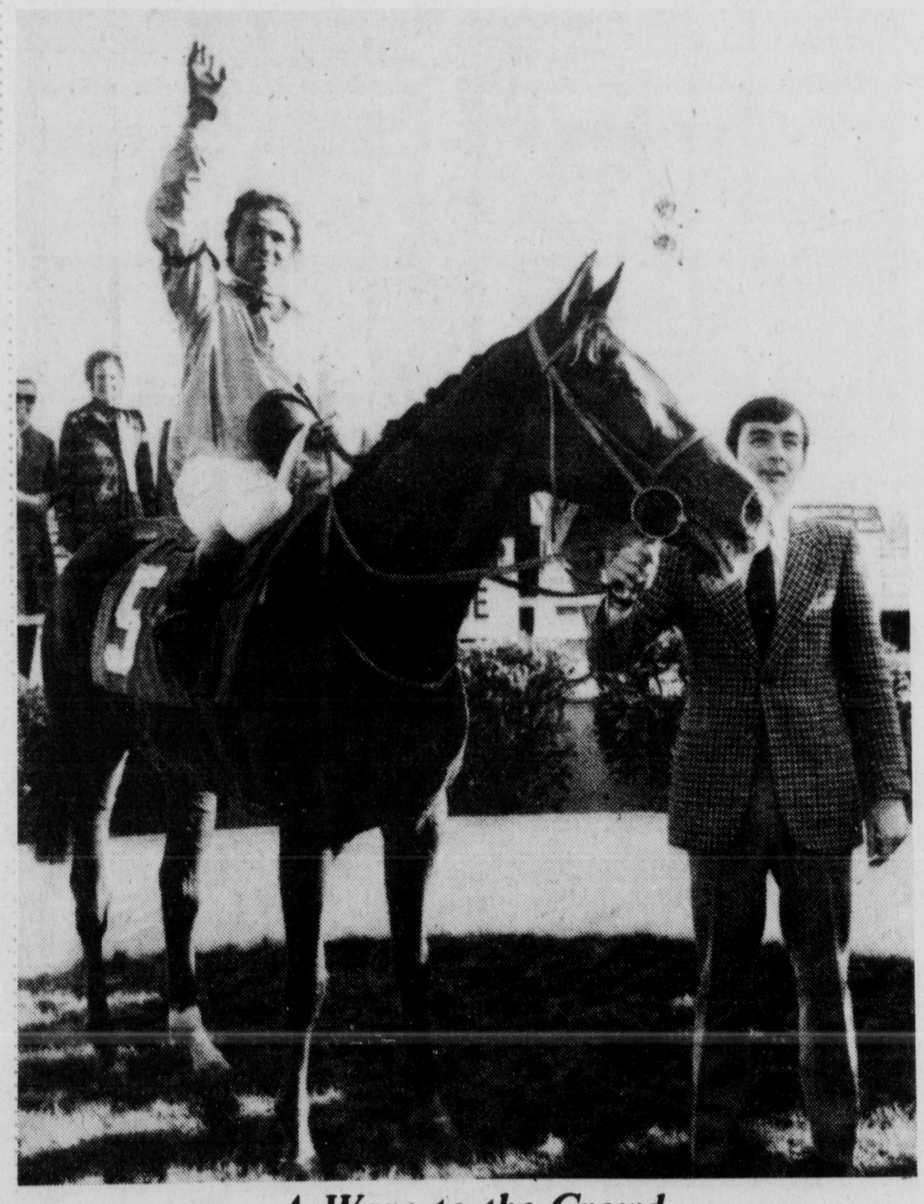
Then the Spartans stopped the Bucks on four plays—forcing a punt by Tom Skaldany. Tom Hunt took the 51-yard kick and returned it two yards to the Spartan 12. On the next play, Jackson rambled 88 yards down the sidelines, outrunning three Buckeye defensive backs along the way.

Ohio State took the ensuing kickoff with 3:11 left and drove 70 yards to the Spartan one. But with no time left on the clock, Champ Henson dived into the end zone for what looked like the winning touchdown.

One official raised his arms to signal the score—but the other five left the field maintaining the play began after time expired.

"Time had expired," Duke said. "Had time not expired, Ohio State would have been charged with a penalty for not being in a set position for a full second before the start of the play."

"There was no way they were going to take back that win from us," Stolz said.



A Wave to the Crowd

Jockey Maurice Philipperson gives a big wave as he sits atop Admetus of France in the winners' circle following his upset victory in D.C. International Saturday. Simon Weinstock, son of the owner of Admetus leads the way for the triumphant horse. (UPI)

Admetus Surprise Winner in D.C.

LAUREL. Md. (UPI) — Admetus, a lowly-regarded gelding from France, struck like a bolt of lightning at Laurel Saturday to win the $150,000 Washington D.C. International by three-quarters of a length to record the biggest upset in the history of the race.

With jockey Maurice Philipperon in the saddle, the chestnut gelding, a 31-1 longshot, outgained a pair of fillies in a furious finish to give his country its seventh victory in 23 runnings of the race.

Desert Vixen, the champion 3-year-old filly in the Unites States last year, was second in the mile and a half race, with Dahlia of France third, another three-quarters of a length farther back.

Dahlia had won the race last year. In her last two starts she won the Man O' War Stakes at Belmont Park and the Canadian International Championship at Woodbine. The International was to be the final jewel in her personal North American triple crown.

Although she gave everything she had and closed with a game rush on the outside, she just could not overtake the two horses in front of her.

Admetus was the longest shot ever to win. He paid $64.00 to win and that easily topped the $41.00 payoff recorded by El Chama of Venezuela in 1955.

The French gelding paid $22.20 to place and $6.40 to show. Desert Vixen, racing on grass and challenging colts for the first time, paid $7.80 and $3.80, while Dahlia returned $2.60.

Dahlia was the sixth odds-on favorite to start in the International and the fifth to fail. Run the Gantlet charged home victorious at 4-5 in 1971. Dahlia went off at 3-5.

Admetus was timed in 2:29 35 over a turf course that was firm for the first time for the race in five years. The final clocking was far slower than when the great Kelso charged home in 2:23 4-5 back in 1964. He, too, was a gelding.

Dahlia dropped far back as usual in the early stages of the race and jockey Lester Piggott placed her along the rail. There she stayed until the field reached the final turn and then Piggott had to take her to the outside. He had to swing very wide to find racing room, for the field was tightly bunched in front of him, with no cracks in the wall of horses.

Dahlia had no trouble reaching a favorable position, with nothing in her path for the length of the stretch. Desert Vixen and Admetus were in front of her, running side by side closer to the rail and the crowd roared in anticipation of Dahlia sprinting to the front with the famed closing charge that has stamped her one of the best horses in the world.

But Desert Vixen and Admetus kept right on going in a battle of their own and it wasn't until almost the very end that Admetus struggled ahead of Desert Vixen, who had taken the lead shortly after the start.

The victory was worth $100,000 to Admetus' owners, Sir Michael Sobell and Sir Arnold Weinstock, his son-inlaw.

The gelding is trained by Jack Cunnington, Jr., who saddled Vasco de Gama for a fourth place finish in 1966.

Desert Vixen earned $25,000, while Dahlia picked up only $10,000. It raised her earnings to $1,216,705 and hardly was a giant step forward in owner Nelson Bunker Hunt's ambition to have her eventually become the world's leading moneywinner. She now ranks seventh on the list and will continue racing next year in an attempt to top Kelso's $1,977,896.

Golden Don was fourth in the field of nine horses from five countries. Then came Margouillat, France's third starter, Coup de Feu of England, Big Spruce, America's principal hope who never got in the hunt, Mistigri of Ireland and Marduk of West Germany. Golden Don, Margouillat and Coup de Feu, who will stay in this country, each won $5,000.

Brawl Curtails UCCC Match

STONE RIDGE

The final soccer game of the regular season for Ulster County Community College was stopped with three minutes left to play here Saturday when the fight-marred contest with Bronx CC erupted in a brawl.

UCCC Athletic Director Al DiBernardo, who attended the game, leveled the brunt of the blame at the officials.

"They (the officials) turned their backs on the rough play. The kids got frustrated at the lack of calls, and when the fights started they didn't make any attempt to break them up."

Ulster's assistant coach, Dick Barnhart, agreed the officials lost control, but he also felt, "Bronx had an axe to grind. there was a lot of pushing and kicking to start, and after we scored a goal, things got worse."

Shortly before the end of the half with Ulster holding a 1-0 lead, the Senators' Kurt Nedrick was knocked down on the bronx side of the field. Nedrick was then hit again after a verbal exchange inspired two spectators to run on to the field after him.

Nedrick claimed he was hit with a rock, and DiBernardo concurred.

Fighting continued throughout the second half until the officials left the fiel with three minutes remaing.

"There were people running around with rocks and sticks," said Barnhart. "It was a free-for-all. We pulled our team into the locker room until the Bronx team left the campus."

If the game is discounted, Ulster will finish the year at 10-1-1. A decision on the matter is expected to be made at the Region XV tournament meeting which will be held today.

Bronx, which entered the contest with a 6-3-2 record, needed a good showing against Ulster to be considered for the tourney's eighth berth. Should the BCC squad be selected, there is a strong possibility Ulster and Bronx would meet in a first round game Tuesday.

Army Stuns Air Force

WEST POINT, N.Y. (UPI) — A 33-year yard field goal with the 17 seconds remaining by Mike Marquez, the first he ever attempted in an Army uniform, gave the Cadets a 17-16 upset victory over the Air Force Saturday before a near-record Michie Stadium crowd of 42,521.

Marquez' dramatic kick was set up when Army moved from their own 20 in the closing minutes with freshman quarterback Leamon Hall completing three passes in a row. Then a pass interference call set the Cadets up on the Air Force 19 with 21 seconds left.

Marquez' field goal erased a stunning performance by the Falcons Dave Lawson who kicked three field goals. His third from 20 yards out early in teh foourth period had given the Air Force what looked to be the winning 16-14 lead.

It was the first game Marquez had dressed for this year.

With the score 7-7 at halftime, Army could do nothing on their first two possessions of the third period. Lawson, on a 40-yard field goal then gave the Falcons a 10-7 lead and on the next series of downs, he was good from 42 yards out to give Air Force a 13-7 bulge.

Quarterback Scott Gillogly brought Army to life on two keeper plays and then sprung Marques Hardy on a 42-yard sprint to the Air Force three as the period ended. Willie Thigpen bolted over from the four and Marquez put Army ahead 14-13 with the extra point.

Army had drawn first blood driving 84 yards in 11 plays in the first period with Gillogly sneaking over from the one. Air Force took the ensuing kickof and tied the game on a 79-yard drive with Ken Wood doing most of the work and bulling in for the touchdown from the five.

Both teams lost players with injuries.

Mike Mark of the Air Force, a defensive back, fractured his right leg on the first series of plays and Army's place-kicking specialist Mike Castelli dislocated his ankle after kicking the extra point on Gillogly's TD. That enabled Marquez to make his stunning debut as the Army kicking specialist.

The victory brought Army's record to 3-6, while the Air Force dropped to 2-7. The defeat was particularly bitter for the Air Force since it deprived them of the opportunity to claim the Commander-inChief's Trophy and also sent them reeling toward their worst season ever.

Michigan State scored a disputed 16-13 victory over firstranked Ohio State in the biggest upset of a Saturday during which five teams in the top 10 and two unranked but bowl-bound teams were beaten.

Surviving the wreckage of the "Black Saturday" for many national college powers were Michigan and Alabama, tied for the No. 2 ranking, eighthranked Nebraska and ninthranked Auburn, all of whom won, and fifth-ranked Notre Dame which was idle.

But it was a day of broken dreams for other super powers as Southern Methodist defeated fourth-ranked Texas A&M 18-14, North Carolina State beat sixthranked Penn State 12-7, Georgia topped seventh-ranked Florida, 17-16, and Baylor downed 10thranked Texas 34-24.

Additionally, Kentucky defeated Peach Bowl boundVanderbilt 38-12 and Sun Bowlbound Mississippi State bowed to Auburn, 24-20.

Michigan and Alabama emerged as co-favorites for the No. 1 ranking as the Wolverines defeated Illinois 14-6 and the Crimson Tide routed Lousiana State 30-0. Eighth-ranked Nebraska downed Iowa State 23-13 and unbeaten, untied and unranked Oklahoma whipped Missouri 37-0.

Michigan, now 9-0 and No. 1 in the Big 10 if not in the country, made two first-half touchdowns stand up against Illinois. Gordon Bell scored Michigan's first touchdown on a nine-yard run in the first period and Dennis Franklin capped a 61-yard drive with a one-yard TD plunge in the second period. Illinois was scoreless until Mike Gow went 45 yards with a punt return with 2:10 left in the game.

Alabama, the defending UPI national champion, made an impressive bid for the No. 1 ranking with its 20th straight regular-season victory. Quarterback Richard Todd and running back Willie Shelbry led an offense which piled up 355 yards while the Alabama defense never let LSU inside the 30-yard line. Alabama announced after the game that it will meet Notre Dame in the Orange Bowl on New Year's Day.

Wayne Morris and Ricky Wesson led SMU to its triumph over Texas A&M which rallied from a 16-0 halftime deficit but couldn't pull out the victory; Stan Fritts ran for one touchdown and passed for another in North Carolina State's victory over Penn State; Horace King scored two touchdowns and Matt Robinson passed for a two-point conversion as Georgia upset Florida and Neal Jeffrey directed Baylor to three second-half touchdowns and its surprise triumph over Texas.

Sugar Bowl-bound Nebraska used two touchdown runs by Monte Anthony and a tough defense to whip Iowa and fullback Secdrick McIntyre's running led Auburn to its triumph over Mississippi State.

Forego Captures Jockey Gold Cup

NEW YORK (UPI) — Forego just about cinched his claim for the Horse of the Year honors Saturday when the 4-year-old gelding scored a 2½-length victory in the $111,900, two-mile Jockey Club Gold Cup at Aqueduct.

In recording his eighth stakes victory in 13 stakes starts this year, Forego took the lead at the 1¾-mile mark and held off a strong bid by French import Copte in the stretch.

Ridden by Heliodoro Gustines, Forego covered the distance in 3:21 1-5 under 124 pounds. The big Lazy F Ranch gelding was an odds-on favorite in the field of eight and paid $3.40, $2.80 and 2.20.

The impressive victory capped a banner year for Forego, in which he competed in the top stakes races from March to November under the training of Sherill Ward. The remarkable campaign includes victories in events ranging from seven furlongs to Saturday's two-mile distance.

In his 13 starts, Forego has never finished out of the money, posting two seconds, two thirds and a fourth in his five non-winning efforts. And, in three of his losses, Forego was saddled with more than 130 pounds.

Forego's Gold Cup triumph boosted his 1974 earnings to $545,086. The son of Forli-Lady Golconda's only competition for Horse of the Year is two-yearold filly Ruffian, who won her only five starts this year in remarkable times before being sidelined by an injury.

French jockey Yves St. Martin had the field measured off perfectly, except for Forego, as he took Daniel Wildenstein's 4-year-old colt from sixth at the 1½-mile mark to third at the top of the stretch.

Copte, making his first start in the United States and first on dirt, overtook Group Plan in the run to the wire but was unable to seriously challenge Forego.

Copte paid $5.40 and $3.40, while Group Plan, trained by Allen Jerkens who won the Gold Cup last year with Prove Out, returned $3.20 to show.

POLARPREME®
"78"
2+2 Belted Construction or Proven 4-Ply Poly

Winter driving worries melt quickly when the Polarpreme "78" bites into the winter weather. Special deep tread design means positive stop and go traction. Low slung "78" series sizing is built to roll firm on the straightaways and to resist skidding and sliding on turns. Available in popular 2+2 (2 polyester cord plies and 2 fiberglass belts) belted construction or 4-ply polyester conventional construction. Smooth and quiet running on any road, wet or dry.

Wide, deep tread puts more "rubber on the road" for better winter driving safety and mobility on snow-covered roads.
Polyester cord plies give smooth "no thump" ride without sacrificing strength of tire.
Belted model and Bias/ply model available in modern whitewall. 4-ply available in blackwall.
Ideal companions to our ULTRAPREME "78" and PREMIUM "478" for good car control and traction. Match 'em up now and take the worries out of winter driving.

Red Hook Capitalizes on Opportunities, 34-0

By STEVE KANE

RED HOOK

In a close football game, it's the breaks that make the difference. In a game that's not so close, the breaks just make things worse.

Red Hook High, the heavily favored host to the Marlboro Dukes Saturday, made the most of some early opportunities to coast to a 34-0 victory and remain in a first place tie in the UCAL.

Two blocked punts and two fumble recoveries paved th way to a 28-0 halftime lead for the Raiders. The big margin, along with a surprisingly good defense by the Dukes, took most of the impetus away from Red Hook in the second half, but Marlboro still failed to penetrate the winners' defense.

Walt Ulickas, a senior halfback who has been playing in the shadow of his more publcized running mate, Jim Merriken, had his second impressive week and led the Raiders with 102 yards rushing. Ulickas dashed seven yards for a first period score after Darryl Mosher had pounced on a bad snap from center when the Dukes were trying to punt after their first possession.

The star-crossed Dukes bowed out of the ball game three plays later. The Raiders kicked off, Marlboro lost 10 yards on first down, then halfback Sam Lofaro fumbled when hit by Red Hook's Corky Bayer.

The ever present Merriken scooped up the football and ran 15 yards to the Marlboro 15. Quarterback Ron Coon went around the left side on the next play and, with blocks from Merriken and Ulickas went all the way.

Even with three periods left to play there was little doubt remaining about the outcome. The Red Hook defense made sure in the second quarter. First Bayer crashed through the Duke line to block another punt which Mosher fielded on the second bounce and took ten yards for another score. Next came the crusher.

Marlboro's freshman quarterback, Dave Onusko, shocked the Raiders with a 37 yard completion to Ed Crosby as the halftime clock went under two minutes. the Dukes had two yards to go for a touchdown when Art Barley took off on a sweep around the right side.

But Barley couldn't hang on to Onusko's pitchout, and Merriken grabbed the fumble on the run to go 95 yards for the fourth Red Hook TD.

Marlboro kept Red Hook scoreless in the third quarter as its constantly blitzing defense bothered the Raider running game. In the fourth quarter, however, tackle Mark Kudzy picked off an Onusko pass to start an eight play Red Hook drive. Ulickas capped it with a fine 38 yard run.

"I'm generally happy, said winning coach John Neilson. The Raider offense has had better games, but as Neilson noted, "Our defense gave us good field position."

Dennis Burkett of Marlboro agreed. "Their defense really comes at you. I think they must have very good tackles and ends. Of course I'm impressed with Merriken. He's big and agile, and that's rare in a league like this."

Burkett was disappointed in his own team, saying, "We've done better," but the Dukes showed a lot of positive things on the field. As a freshman, Onusko's performance at quarterback was promising and the Duke defensive line gave the Raiders as tough a struggle as any team has to date. Most impressive was the Dukes' spirit which was evident right up to the last play of their eighth straight loss. This team may win a game yet.

Red Hook, tied with Rondout at 7-1, plays its last game at Elleville next week.

ELLENVILLE

It was a game of contradictions.

"We might have had a letdown," mused Rondout Valley head coach John Million. "We sure didn't play a very good football game."

"The kids played a heck of a game; by far the best of th year," reflected Ellenville head coach Pete Meoli.

The aforementioned comments were uttered shortly after Rondout Valley had slugged Ellenville, 21-0, on the losers' field Saturday. You figure it out.

The game started off true to form when on the opening kickoff Gander reserve end Russ Kortright swept 65 yards into the end zone for an apparent score.

To the chargin of the many Rondout rooters accompanying the team, a clip was detected nullifying the TD and returning the ball to the Ellenville 35.

Four minutes later placekicker Doug Lenard booted a 25 yard field goal for a 3-0 Rondout lead. At that point there was little reason to believe, that the high powered Gander offense wouldn't be visiting the Ellenville endzone on numerous occasions during the afternoon.

To the surprise of everyone they were kept scoreless until Dave Schmeltz (13 carries, 61 yards, 1 TD) burst over from the three with nearly five minutes elapsed in the third period.

Thereafter the Ganders dominated their outmanned opponents.

All-UCAL hopeful Bob Krom (24 carries, 164 yards, 2 TD's) scored on two consecutive possessions-once from three yards out the other from 21.

Ellenville, which started the game with only 23 players, was further hampered by injuries to three starters during the contest. QB Bob Del Gaizo departed early in the third stanza with an ankle injury. He was followed to the trainers room by halfback Mike Manpel, (credited with 15 tackles before his exit) suffering from a twisted sacroiliac, and Mike Giammichele, a solar plexus victim.

Much of the credit for Ellenville's persistence (with one victory for the season they haven't been too successful) come from the results of the efforts of tackle-fullback TonyDel Gaizo. For the 5'11" 185 pound senior, it marked another exemplary performance in a losing effort. While accounting for nearly half of the Ellie's 112 total yards on offense, the Napanoch native was even more outstanding on defense. Del Gaizo, brother of Bob but no relation to N.Y. giants signal caller Jim, was credited with 16 tackles extending his school record of 129 for the season.

Playing for a losing team Del Gaizo finds satisfaction in attaining the personal standards he set for himself long before this season began. "I was allUCAL as a sophomore and didn't repeat last year because I was hurt," he says. "There were rumors throughout the conference that I was washed up and I made up my mind to make all-UCAL again this season."

Del Gaizo, who according to Meoli plays either tackle or nose guard on defense "depending on where the opposition seems to be going," has received scholarship feelers from both Tampa University and Florida State.

"I'd definitely want to play college football," he admits. But not before being named all-UCAL, right Tony?

Gersch Leads Highland

HIGHLAND

J. C. Gersch, continuing to finish his high school football career in a blaze of glory, ran for 116 yards, scored a touchdown, and a conversion and threw for another two-point play as Highland tripped Pine Bush, 16-7, in an Ulster County Athletic League game here Saturday.

Gersch nearly matched Pine Bush's entire ground game and recorded more than half of Highland's total as the Big Blue upped its record to 6-2 with one game remaining on the schedule. Pine Bush dropped to 4-4.

Highland opened the scoring in the first quarter when Dave Mackey capped a long Highland drive by bulling over from the one yard line. Gersch then raced home for the conversion.

Pine Bush rallied later in the period and made the count 8-7 when Stan Gill busted his way to paydirt from five yards out. Jim Falco booted the extra point.

That's the way the game stayed until the fourth period when Gersch scored the clinching touchdown on a four-yard gallop. His toss to Randy Kite gave Highland its final two points.

Both teams had chances to score and failed in the early going when stingy defenses held tight deep in their own territories. One Bushman march was stopped on the Highland one, and one Big Blue drive stalled on the seven.

Alvin Gunther, Pine Bush's premier halfback, had 92 yards rushing to take runnerup honors for the game. Mackey of Highland had 57 yards.

Highland, which has an outside shot at winding up in a tie for first place, goes to Liberty for next week's season finale. Pine Bush hosts Rondout and will try to play the role of spoiler and knock the Ganders from a share of the top spot.

KINGSTON

Major Amos B. Hoople was six-for-six picking high school football games Saturday.

Among Hoople's selections was an on-the-nose 34-0 outlook of Red Hook's win over Marlboro, and the 21 point spread needed for Rondout to beat Ellenville.

Hoople is now 36-17-1 on the year for .645.

Sawyers Dampened KHS Homecoming

KINGSTON

It was not the Patriots versus the Bills, or even the Raiders versus the Chiefs, but feelings ran high with the Maroons versus the Sawyers in what is becoming something of a local football rivalry.

And as with traditional rivalries, a balanced history of one victory apiece set the scene for this year's showdown of Ulster County DCSL teams.

The atmosphere was one of--well, it was Kingston High's homecoming game and even the 17-7 defeat for the large Dietz Stadium hometown crowd could not dampen enthusiasm too greatly. Ticket takers said it was the largest crowd at a Kingston game in "at least two years."

Even so, Kingston bleacherites had to sit on their hands for most of the be ginning and end of the game, something many have become accustomed to in this winless season.

The Sawyer's offsides opening kickoff was a portent of things to come —even mistakes turned around for the visitors, who had the discipline to take advantage of them. Tom Abate recovered a fumble to set up the first score, and Saugerties was never headed.

Incidentally, Abate has played in just two games this year and Sawyer fans can rejoice that he is expected to return next year. His quick lateral pursuit from linebacker position bolsters an already solid defensive team, and an old knee injury does not slow him down much.

And it was heart warming to watch Joe Primo Sr. on the "chain gang" enthuse over his 5'6" halfback son on th Maroons. "He gives 100 per cent," said senior of junior (who is a senior), as well he must with the 200-pounders bearing down on him.

It was novel to see Saugerties quarterback Nick Malgieri working on his scrambling game, and his accuracy throwing on the run is a distinct improvement over early season efforts throwing from the pocket.

It was just one way that both clubs found of playing a more wide open game than has been either of their styles--an exciting method of play for spectators, although always more prone to mistakes than the lugging it up the middle syndrome that has proved largely unworkable for both teams this year.

After the win, Saugerties Coach Fred Seither commented on the improved offensive blocking exhibited by his line, saying, "I knew we were capable of running an offense like this all year. We were only out of one game, against Roosevelt---they buried us."

The offense has seen Mike Tiano emerge as a bread and butter ball carrier, similar to the hard pop through the line that Sal Misasi showed for Saugerties last year.

A Kingston highlight had to be Bill Chaffin's 46-yard kickoff return late in the first quarter, as the solidly built player took a reverse handoff and lumbered up the left side of the field. It came at an opportune moment with Tom Abate's field goal having just added insult to injury in making the score 11-0, and fueled the rebound that led to the Kingston touchdown shortly thereafter.

It was Saugerties' first successful field goal of the season. The team also had one field goal last year.

Rose Schueler was crowned homecoming queen during halftime ceremonies, to thunderous applause. We couldn't help feeling the applause would have een the same no matter who received the honor. Jill Spath was named maid of honor.

And booster clubs for the high school football teams presented flowers to mothers.of team seniors after the game, another budding tradition.

NEW PALTZ

You knew it was going to be a bad day for the beleaguered Onteora High Indians Saturday, when Sam, the New Paltz High canine mascot planted himself squarely in the midst of the pre-game Homecoming Day ceremonies at midfield and barked ominously in the direction of the OCS bench.

Onteora hasn't defeated an Ulster County Athletic League football opponent all season and Coach John Ford's Huguenots made sure the record remained intact and nothing happened to spoil the Homecoming ceremonies.

Led by Roger Plantier, who scored twice and rushed for more than 100 yards, New Paltz got on the scoreboard in every period, including 21 points in the third quarter for a lopsided 47-0 triumph.

The victory was the fifth against three losses for New Paltz and set the stage for the Huguneots' finale with Wallkill.

"We're looking toward Wallkill now and would like to close the season with a 6-3 record," said Ford. "I was satisfied with our performance today. Our running game was good and it was good all-round effort. Actually, we could have used fewer touchdowns."

Everything happened to Onteora that happens to a team that has lost its way. Two blocked punts and a pass interception accounted for three of the seven New Paltz touchdowns. The Hugueneots, however, really didn't need all those breaks, as they outgained Onteora 319-46 rushing and 49-24 in passing.

Plantier scored his two touchdowns on a 19-yard off tackle burst and a 40-yard pass reception from Mike Buck. The New Paltz quarterback stunned Onteora early in the first quarter with a 27-yard keeper play to put NP on the board for the first time.

Peter Ferrante raced 25 yards with an intercepted pass and Jerry Marks fell on a blocked punt in the end zone after Walter Smith crashed through for the block. Charles Gardiner accounted for New Paltz's third touchdown in the third quarter with a 15 yard run. Tony Savago's TD from seven yards in the fourth quarter closed out the scoring.

Plantier missed a third touchdown when he dropped a 22-yard pass from Buck in the end zone where he was all by his lonesome. Coach Ford substituted freely in the fourth quarter.

Onteora never penetrated inside the New Paltz 39. The Indians showed a flash of power, going from their 33 after the opening kickoff to the New Paltz 39 where three straight passes by Guy Turck misfired and Snider blocked Don Allen's first kick of the day. New Paltz moved 47 yards in six plays and it wasn't much of a contest after that.

Coach Joe DiGiovanni's Onteora squad is now 0-7-1 with the 1974 finale scheduled next Saturday against Marlboro which is 0 and 8. This surely, will be the Battle for the Cellar.

LIBERTY

Two fumbles, one of which came on a disputed, play, were returned for touchdowns by Liberty High School here Saturday as the Indians rallied in the second half to post a 20-14 victory over Wallkill.

The Panthers, playing what coach Jerry Trezza called, "One of our better gam es," drove to scores in each of the first two quarters to take a 14-6 lead at halftime. The lead evaporated in the third quarter when soph quarterback Harry Collier was hit while trying to pass, and Liberty's Greg Buck sprinted 40 yards with the recovery.

The Wallkill side thought it should have been ruled an incompleted pass, but the touchdown was good. So were the conversion points run by Redskin Mike Lofaro to knot the game at 14-all.

The winning score had a touch of de ja vu. Liberty's Larry Epstein latched on to another Panther fumble in the fourth quarter, and he too rambled 40 yards for the TD.

Liberty had the game's first six-pointer when Lofaro rolled and threw a 17 yard strike to Buck in the first period. Wallkill, however, came right back with George Thomas slamming across from the three in the same quarter.

Brian Wickes booted Wallkill into the lead, 7-6, and in the next period he got to kick another PAT after Collier fired an 11 yard pass to Dennis Lloyd.

Trezza, whose team slipped to 4-4, expressed disappointment afterwards, but he felt his squad had played well. "We stopped their triple option inside the 20," he said.

The victory boosted the Redskins to 5-3 and enabled them to remain in a fourth place tie with New Paltz. The winners will host Highland in the final game next week, while Wallkill plays New Paltz.

Giants-Jets: Meaningless Battle for Survival

NEW HAVEN, Conn. Once it was one of the bitterest and mosttalked about rivalries in the National Football League. Now it's simply a meaningless battle for survival.

The first meeting between New York's pro football teams came in August, 1969, just seven months after the Jets had stunned the pro football establishment with a 16-7 upset of the Baltimore Colts in Super Bowl III. More than 70,000 fans filled the Yale Bowl for the pre-season encounter to watch Joe Namath put on one of the greatest passing performances of his career, throwing three touchdown passes as the Jets crushed the Giants, 37-14.

Namath missed the 1970 game—the only regular season meeting between the two teams after suffering a broken wrist and the Giants won 22-10.

But since then, it's been downhill for both clubs, especially this year.

Both have new coaches—Challey Winner for the Jets and Bill Arnsparger for the Giants—and both have been losing. The Giants managed only their second victory by edging Kansas City last week and the Jets fell to Houston for their sixth straight loss and seventh in eight games.

And more than 10,000 seats in the Yale Bowl still were not sold.

The Giants seem to have rallied behind their new quarterback, Craig Morton, who sparked the win over Kansas City, while the Jets have veen plagued with injuries and rely on Namath's passing for their offense.

Only seven Jets and five Giants remain from that first game and most agree the rivalry has cooled considerably.

"We had a long hatred for the Giants then" said Jet linebacker Ralph Baker. "We had just won the Super Bowl and people still thought they were better than us. We prepared for that game like it was a regular season game and played it that way. We were sky high—we wanted to blow them right off the field—and we kid.

"Now the only thing we have in common is that we both get equal heat in the papers.When you're 1-7, you don't worry about rivalries. You just try to win."

Jet running back Emerson Boozer agree. "We're both at the bottom of our division so a win is more important than beating the Jets or beating the Giants. It would be nice to beat the Giants but it would be more important just to get the win."

Giant safety Carl Lockhart also feels the win's the thing.

Winning right now is more important to me than past rivalry," he said. "I like to play against the Jets because of Namath and thei great receivers. Guys like Rich Caster, Jerome Barkum, Ed Bell and David Knight are enough to wake up any defensive back. You don't have to slap me in the face for that.

"But beating the Jets won't mean any more than beatintg any team with a strong passing attack."

The Giants are as healthy as they've been all season. Besides having Morton to replace the immobile Norman Snead, traded to San Francisco, the Giants also have running back Ron Johnson back at full strength.

The Jets, however will be without their top runner, John Riggins, out with a shoulder injury, and his replacement, Mike Adamle, out with leg problems. That means rookie Bob Burns fro Georgis, the No. 3 fullback, will start.

Bobby Howfield, the Jets' kicker, also has leg problems and could miss the game. The Jets have handed Howfield's kickoff juties to guard Garry Puetz to reduce the strain on his knee but still need him for placements.

"The Giants may have found what they need in Craig Morton," Winner said, "He as tremendous confidence, a strong arm, reads defenses and deserves tremendous respect. And Ron Johnson is one of the finest runners in the game and he's also effective when Morton dumps that short pass off to him."

Arnsparger, meanwhile, was worried about Namath.

He just sca res the heck out of me," said the former Miami assistant. "I've seen what he can do over the years and it's frightening. We'll need a strong effort by our defense to keep him under control."

The Giants are 6½-point favorites.

Elsewhere in the National Football League today, Cincinnati entertains Pittsburgh in a key American Conference Central Division battle. Detroit is at Oakland, Houston at Buffalo, Washington at Philadelphia, Miami at New Orleans, Cleveland at New England, San Francisco at Dallas, Atlanta at Los Angeles, Denver at Baltimore, San Diego at Kansas City, and Chicago meets Green Bay at Milwaukee, Minnesota is at St. Louis Monday night.

The important game of the day is the Bengal Bengals-Steelers clash. Cincy trails Pittsburgh by a game and a half in th Central Division and a Steeler win will all but lock up that race.

WASHINGTONVILLE

The string ran out on Coleman High School's soccer team Friday as fourth-seeded Albertus-Magnus edged the Statesmen, 3-2, in the semi-final round of the Section Nine tournament.

Coleman, which had finished second to Onteora in the Ulster County Athletic League by virtue of a late-season surge, played Magnus even most of the way, but finally fell when Keith Murray beat goalie Kevin Coughlin on a direct kick at 6:35 of the fourth quarter.

Magnus had started the scoring at eight minutes of the second quarter when Paul Maravito converted on a pass from Pat Condi.

Charlie Blum tied it for Coleman at 12:20 of the third period with Steve Pechaloff getting the assist. But despite peppering Magnus goalie Bob Duggan with 15 shots, the Statesmen couldn't dent the twines again.

In the other Section Nine Class B game Friday, top seeded Monticello beat defending champion Washingtonville on the basis of an 8-6 edge in corner kicks. The teams had played a scoreless tie through regulation and two overtimes.

Magnus meets Monticello Tuesday in the finale.

In Class A, Middletown beat Nyack, 3-2, and Clarkstown North topped Ramapo, 2-1, to gain the final round.

Scott Wilson Top Player

SAUGERTIES

Imagine you're a high school football coach about to start fall practice. You wander out to the gridiron and a big, good-looking kid catches your eye.

"I've never seen him before," you might say to yourself. "Hey, he looks pretty good. I could sure use him."

Sound like a pipe dream? Maybe, but that scenario or one something like it, took place for Coach Al Weidlein at Douglas A. MacArthur High in Seaford, Long Island last August, for there was Scott Wilson coming out for the varsity football team.

Remember Scott? He played two years for Fred Seither's varsity at Saugerties High before personal reasons convinced him to transfer to the Long Island school.

A 6-3, 215-pound lineman, Scott made the all-DCSL team last year as a junior and also was named to The Daily Freeman's annual All-County gridiron honor squad. During the season he made 36 individual tackles, 37 assists, and was personally responsible for sacking the enemy quarterback 16 times.

How is he doing for MacArthur?

Very well, thank you. Wilson recently was named for the National Bank of North America's Outstanding Football Player award, quite an honor when you consider the quality of competition on Long Island.

Just to round off his talents . . . Scott, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wilson, also takes care of his team's kicking duties.

Wouldn't every coach like to have one just like him?

KINGSTON

Binghamton State College won the 1974 State University of New York Athletic Conference (SUNYAC) soccer championship wth a perfect 7-0 record.

The upstaters edged out four teams that finished in a second place tie. The quartet was headed by Cortland State, which won four and tied three for 11 points. Albany, Brockport, and Oneonta also had 11 points, but their total came on five wins, a tie, and one loss.

Cortland beat Oneonta, 1-0, on the last day of the season to keep its unbeaten record intact.

New Paltz State finished at the bottom of the 12-team pack. The Hawks, under first year coach Peter Van Geem, were winless in seven contests. New Paltz did manage to garner a victory in its final non-league game against Baruch College of New York Cty.

UCCC Wins Volleyball

Ulster County Community College's women's volleyball varsity pulled out the third and deciding game, 17-15, to defeat Rockland Community. It was the third win against five losses for Coach Pat McLean's squad.

Rockland won the first game 15-11 and Ulster tied the match with a 15-5 win.

Pam Thomas was high server with nine points and five ace serves. Sharon Kuriger had five points and one ace serve.

SUNDAY BUBBLES AND BRUNCH

UNLIMITED CHAMPAGNE AT THE CATTLEMAN

Start off the Day of Rest with an eye-opening Bloody Mary in one hand and help yourself to our Western Style Brunch with the other. The Cattleman Chuckwagon Brunch features eggs, bacon, sausages, waffles and griddle cakes topped with sour cream and cherries.

And to quench your thirst? Unlimited Champagne! Glass after glass of the bubblies—complimentary, of course. It's a great way to celebrate the end of a week—or begin another one.

All from 12 to 2 pm on Sundays and all for less than five silver dollars.

Walt Houghtaling Is No. 1 Quarterback at Norwich

NORTHFIELD, Vt. — Walt Houghtaling, a former three-sport star at Kingston High School, now calls the signals for the "best small college backfield in New England."

That, at least, is the description given by a man with first hand knowledge, Middlebury College football coach, Mickey Heinecken, whose team was recently beaten by a Houghtaling-led Norwich University squad, 69-23.

Houghtaling, a sophomore at Norwich, threw two touchdown passes, scored another on a 35 yard run and totaled 176 yards on offense to help turn what was supposed to be a close game in to a romp.

The '73 KHS graduate made his presence felt in a hurry this season on the Cadet varsity. The number one quarterback on the jayvee team as a freshman, Houghtaling was originally designated the number three man on the varsity. While the team absorbed three opening defeats, however, injuries sidelined the veteran Cadet quarterbacks.

Houghtaling took over the controls against Tufts and turned in a good performance as the Cadets stopped their slide. He then engineered a win over Boston State the following week.

Norwich's orignal starter returned to action against Bates, but Houghtaling continued to play well. He also turned into a placekicker in that game (again by default). He got that job when coach Joe Sabol saw him fooling around in practice.

Houghtaling got the nod to start against Middlebury in the Cadets' big game of the year. It was billed as a tossup, but Norwich blew the Panthers to pieces wth ten touchdowns as Houghtaling completed 7 of 11 passes and moved the Cadets to 554 total yards.

Halfback Jim Kelly's four touchdowns and 164 yards overshadowed Houghtaling's bid for weekly ECAC honors, but the former Marcon still had his best day. He earned another start against Worcester Tech when NU shoots for its fifth straight.

Norwich's point total was the highest of the series which dates back to 1893. It would have been six points higher had not Walt tripped over the Middlebury 15 yard line on what would have been a 40 yard gallop.

While at Kingston High, Houghtaling received All County honors in three sports. He was a first team basketball selection, a second team pick in baseball and received honorable mention in football.

The Cadet defense was also outstanding against Middlebury, and another DCSL veteran had a hand in that. Steve Volk, who once played against Houghtaling at Lourdes High School, won individual honors with three interceptions and two fumble recoveries.

Walt, a government major, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Houghtaling of 69 Northfield St., Kingston.

Red Hook, OCS in Final

NEW PALTZ — Red Hook and Onteora advanced to the finals of the girls field hockey Section Nine tournament with first round victories.

The undefeated Raider-ettes swamped Suffern 6-0 while Onteora was awarded a victory over Clarkstown on the basis of corner kicks, after the teams had tied 1-1 in regulation and one overtime period.

Onteora had a 14-1 margin in corner kicks and 17-2 in shots on goal. Colleen Duffy scored the Onteora goal and Cindy Ginsberg countered for Clarkstown. "We won everything but the final score, I guess," quipped Onteora Coach Carl Okoren after the game.

Shaun Pine paced Red Hook's victory with three goals, with Marion Bier adding two and Mary Harring getting the other. Red Hook led in shots on goal 16-4 and corner kicks 18-2.

Red Hook goes into the finals with a perfect 8-0 record, while Onteora has a 9-2 mark.

He's Seen Every Series

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eighty year old John Curtis insists he still won't need glasses when he sees his 50th consecutive World Series in 1975.

The alert Curtis, a friend of presidents and senators, attended his first World Series in 1928 when the St. Louis Cardinals beat the New York Yankees in seven games.

Since then, Curtis has managed to take in at least two games of every Series.

"Sometimes it was difficult," recalls the Christian Science practicioner who once cured his acute case of alcoholism by prayer. "But I managed to scrape up the fare and the price of a ticket each year."

Curtis has a flock of ticket stubs to show his attendance credibility. His portfolio contains a $1, bleacher ticket he bought in Cleveland for the 1948 series with the Boston Braves. Lurking near the bottom of the stack is a $6 standing room ticket he used in Cincinnati two years ago when he was 78.

The octogenarian was initiated into baseball's most important series at a time when Grover Cleveland Alexander was in the twilight of a brilliant career.

It was the seventh game of the '26 classic. The Cards were ahead, 3-2, in the seventh inning when the old master was called in from the bullpen with the bases loaded and struck out Tony Lazzeri to end the threat.

What possessed Curtis to begin one of the longest strings of World Series attendance records known?

"Booze," he answers candidly. "I was dealt a massive dose of moonshine poison during prohibition and had to be hospitalized. Lying there, with the doctors giving me just three days to live I prayed and thought of what I would do if I ever recovered. Then it hit me. I had a keen interest in baseball and vowed to attend the World Series each year to set an example as a reformed drunkard."

Curtis got well. He had been spending $20 a week on whiskey, but quit drinking and used the money saved to buy bus fare and tickets to his first series. He's never had a sick day since. He stays at the local YMCA in a world series town for economy reasons and boasts that he has paid for every ticket he ever possessed.

Born in Ireland and raised in Butte, Mont., Curtis counts among his friends former Irish President Eamon De Valera and Montana Senator Mike Mansfield.

"Every so often, I get down to Washington and visit Sen. Mansfield. We worked in the mines together back in Montana and I should have listened to him in the old days when he pleaded with me to stop drinking."

The "old days" in Montana was where Curtis first met Chief Myers, a full-blooded Cherokee who was pitching in a minor league around Butte.

"He borrowed four bits from me in 1908, the year he was sold to the New York Giants and the next time I saw him was 61 years later at an Old Timers Game in San Francisco. When I was a kid of 14 I used to be his mascot, carrying his chest protector, mask and shin guards into the ball park.

"Do you remember me?" I asked. "You borrowed four bits from me and I've figured out that compound interest for that loan would make it $218,000 today. Would you like to pay me now?'

"We settled for the Chief taking me, Casey Stengel, Monte Irvin and Bobby Thompson to dinner and I gave him a receipt that read 'Paid in Full.'"

Curtis says the players of today are more powerful, but the hitters of yesterday were smarter and the pitchers had more stamina. He watched Iron Joe McGinnity pitch a double header when the legendary Giant hurler was 50 years old and managing Butte's minor league team.

"I knew Stuttering Ed Coleman of the Phillies and Earl Averill of Cleveland. And I once had to hide Frank Crosetti when he ran away from home to play in Butte and his father came up from San Francisco to look for him. Frank was shy and a plumber's assistant. He never got over his shyness and you know he never went back to plumbing."

GOODBYE HOT METAL

Hopefully, if we play our cards right, we won't be faced with the problem of having a sale and disposing of a ton or two of lead. For literally hundreds of years newspapers have been produced by the so-called "Hot Metal" process which involves composing lead slugs or lines in a page together with photos or artwork cast in metal. The individual pages are then transformed into lead plates which print the image on the pages of your newspeper.

Shortly, we'll join the space age of newspapering with a complete and exciting switch to the PHOTO OFFSET PROCESS, often known as 'COLD TYPE', where film, photo processes and electronics replace hot lead.

What does it mean to you . . . the Reader, The Advertiser? Soon you'll be turning the pages of an exciting new newspaper with type that is far easier and faster to read; photographs that are much more lifelike. Advertisements will encompass more creativity . . . the opportunity for the advertiser to more graphically portray his product.

We're awfully excited . . . we hope you are!

Terry Hanratty Finding New Value in Life

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Terry Hanratty yearns for more action as a Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback but finds compensation in a humanitarian role.

At Notre Dame, Hanratty developed close ties with coach Ara Parseghian whose sister, daughter and a cousin are afflicted with multiple sclerosis (MS).

Through that association, Hanratty became interested in MS and three years ago he called the Allegheny District Chapter of Multiple Sclerosis and volunteered his services.

Hanratty and his wife, Rosemary, devote several hours a week trying to help MS patients.

"The patients are beautiful people," Hanratty said. "They ask questions about the Steelers and have an awareness of things."

Monica Feola, executiv director of the local MS chapter said, "In the past month Terry has devoted just as much time to patients as he has to football."

The Hanrattys plan to remain in Pittsburgh after the football season for a few weeks to help prepare a Christmas party for the patients. Their home is in Denver.

Hanratty has interested other Steelers in the cause. Nancy Russell, wife of linebacker Andy Russell, and Janet Mansfield, whose husband, Ray, is the center, are enthusiastic about the project. Former Steelers tackle John Brown, now retired, serves on the board of the local chapter with Hanratty.

Steeler players host a party at a downtown tavern during Monday night football games. Terry got the idea of selling hot dogs during halftime and donating the proceeds to the MS chapter.

"Thus far he has collected several hundred dollars which he will turn over to the chapter for the Christmas party," Miss Feola said.

Muscular sclerosis strikes people between the ages of 20 and 35, attacking the central nervous system. As the disease progresses, patients are afflicted with double vision. Their speech becomes slurred and they develop a stumbling gait.

The cause of the disease is unknown but research has been continuing for several years.

Recently the local MS chapter held a fashion show to raise funds for research. Several Steeler wives were models.

When Hanratty finished Notre Dame in 1969, Parseghian strongly urged him to try pro football.

"When I was a senior Ara told me I could not play in the Southern California game because he did not want me to aggravate a knee injury. He advised me to have surgery so I could be ready for the pros. I was disappointed because I couldn't play against the Trojans. The game ended in a 21-21 tie," Hanratty said.

Hanratty's only appearance this season was in the final quarter against the Baltimore Colts when he threw six passes.

"I'm resigned to the fact I'm not called on to play," he said. "But in practice I work just as hard as I would if I were the regular starter. My chance will come."

Sawyerettes Assured Tie

SAUGERTIES — Sophomore Debbie Holzhaver came back off the bench against Poughkeepsie to get Saugerties High girls volleyball team back on the road to the DCSL championship Wednesday. Her saves and sets brought the Sawyers from an opening 15-5 loss to wins of 16-11 and 16-14 as Saugerties claimed its 10th victory in 12 matches.

The Sawyers had held a lead on the pack until getting sidetracked at Lourdes earlier in the week. The OLL spikers stunned the Sawyers with a 16-14, 15-7 upset despite the play of Alice Bernier.

The loss dropped Saugerties into a tie at 9-2 with contenders John Jay and Ketcham. When Poughkeepsie won the first set Wednesday, memories of last year's late collapse haunted the Sawyers.

Holzhaver was just the spark needed to turn things around. Her play helped Karen O'Reilly and Tracy Demarest get rolling as Saugerties swept the last two games to take the match.

With one game left on the schedule, Saugerties can get at least a share of first with a win over visiting Beacon Wednesday.

The Saugerties junior varsity also leads its division with an 11-1 record and one match remaining. The Jayvees toppled Lourdes, 2-1, then blanked Poughkeepsie, 2-0.

It Took Two Overtimes For Barrister Victory

It took two overtimes and a rare sudden death to do it, but the Barristers beat Ramsey's, 72-70, in the YMCA Fall Basketball League's B Division.

In another game, Wenzel's topped Cannonball, 63-55.

Al Marinetti flipped a shot through the hoop in sudden death to give the Barristers the win after the regulation period had ended 58-58, the first overtime had concluded 66-66, and the second overtime had wound up 70-70.

Al Hrdlicka was the big scorer for the Barristers with 34 points. Joe Brown canned 20 for the losers.

Fred Seeger tossed in 19 points to pace the Wenzel's squad. Cannonball got 19 from John Guzewich.

The box scores:

Ramsey (70)—Hoffstatter, 3; Struble, 7; Pittsworth, 14; McGowan, 4; Beesmer, 2; J. Brown, 20; Sass, 10; D. Brown, 10.

Barristers (72) — Cavanaugh, 4; Marinetti, 12; Richter, 6; Hrdlicka, 34; Strosahl, 9; Gaffney, 7; Melbert.

Cannonball (55)—Olds, 4; Murphy, 13; Stoutenberg, 2; Sottile, 8; Guzewich, 19; Cook, 9.

Kingston High Leading Dutchess-Ulster Chess

KINGSTON — Kingston High leads the Dutchess-Ulster High School Chess League with a 3-0 record, according to the official standings. New Paltz is 2-1, Saugerties 1-2 and Onteora 0-3.

Kingston High edged New Paltz, although John Nyquist and Keith D'Elia of New Paltz remained undefeated in league play. The results: John Nyquist defeated Bob Moss; Keith D'Elia over Greg Peck; Steve Turnbull (K) over Eric Young; Steve Tutt (K) over Tim Rock and Rich Wiands (K) over David Strauss.

Saugerties High squeezed past Onteora, 3-2, in a match in which several games were extremely close and the result uncertain until the final moves.

The results:

Brion Keliar over Ken Garde; Jim Davis over Bill Peekema; Scott Wilder over Joe Cade; Jim Barth over Chris Sauer; Joe Brand over Jerome Smith.

Sports Briefs

WEST POINT, N. Y. (AP)— Army's football team scored only seven touchdowns in 1973 while losing all 10 games. Thus, the biggest task for new West Point football coach Homer Smith is rebuilding the Army offense.

As head coach at Davidson College in 1969, Smith guided the Wildcats to their first and only Southern Conference title. The past two seasons he assisted at UCLA and was the Bruin's chief architect in the development of the Wishbone T offense. The Bruins won 17 of 22 games during his campaigns on the West Coast.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mitch Anderson, Northwestern quarterback, has a chance to become the second Big Ten signal caller in conference history to lead the circuit in passing three straight seasons. Len Dawson of Purdue is the only other player to accomplish the feat.

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Sophomore tailback Scott Bream of San Leandro, Calif. wears number 49, numerals that run in the family. His older brother Brian, was co-captain of the 1971 Falcon 11 and holds the academy career record for rushing.

New Educational Device for Children

KEEPING WARM—Smitzie, the kitten belonging to Kim Dunhan of Kingfield, Maine checks out the restored wood stove the family is installing for the winter. With a long cold winter ahead and high fuel cost, the Dunhams hope to keep the cost of heating their home down by using the wood burner. (UPI)

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Twelve-year-old Theresa Hollc way flicks on her television set Saturday mornings to watch cartoons sandwiched in betwee her favorite newscasts.

For Theresa and thousands of Saturday morning has become youngsters around the country more than just watching the animated stories.

They are watching the CBS network show "In the News" — newscasts every half hour written for children.

Theresa and her sixth grade classmates at P.S. 30 in Jersey City watch the segments every week.

"It's a good educational device," says their teacher, Mary Ellen Cox. "We talk about it in school. The segments are on topics the kids can relate to."

The 2½-minute newscasts include stories on campaign spending, unemployment, British elections, pollution, the presidential resignation and subsequent pardon as well as other timely events.

Recently, the show asked children to write their views on the presidential pardon of Richard Nixon and letters from P.S. 30 were featured.

"I thought it was unfair to pardon Nixon," Theresa wrote to the producers. "Some children want to know wha Nixon did in a very big crime called Watergate."

"If anyone else did what he did they would be punished," wrote her classmate, 11-year old Tony Azzellini. "I'm not saying this because I don't like Nixon, but because those are the laws of the U.S."

"In the News" is now in its fourth season and shows children what's happening in the news every half hour between 8:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. Saturday morning. Several segments are rebroadcast on Sundays.

"The brevity of our segments is deceptive," says Judy Reemtsma, producer of the show. "One of the major reasons it works so well as a tool of instruction is that it doesn't tax a child's attention span."

Children, she says, are particularly interested in the environment, animals, what they hear on regular newscasts and any kind of problem-solving activity.

The show picks one single aspect of a news story and uses that for a segment.

"Each week we sit down and figure out what's been in the news with a particular eye to the kinds of things children are interested in," Mrs. Reemtsma says.

When Richard Nixon resigned from office last August, "In the News" staff threw out their week's programming and devoted 10 Saturday morning segments to the resignation.

"The real trick is to keep the segments simple and fun as well as informational," Mrs. Reemtsma says.

Inflation, she says, is one problem even children are concerned about.

A young boy recently wrote the show that he didn't understand why his blue notebook cost 57-cents two years ago and today costs 90-cents.

"Children see things in their own metaphors and we try to explain concepts in forms of a situation that the child knows," she says.

News stories containing violence or that are "threatening" to a child's world are handled delicately, she says.

"For a long time we didn't touch the Patty Hearst story," she says. "It's one thing if a child's mother explains kidnaping, but we don't know who is watching us and how they will be affected by what we program."

Younger children watch television earlier in the morning. Then the segments include "lighter" stories — Halloween customs, daylight saving time, how inflation is affecting the price of bubble gum.

Later, older children tune in to more serious news segments. "Basically, we assume a kid is starting from ground zero," Mr. Reemtsma says. "We not only tell them about what's happening in Ireland, we tell them the history of the Protestant and Catholic struggle."

WHITA Studies City Hall

KINGSTON

The present condition and possible alternative uses of the old Kingston City Hall on Broadway were discussed when the Board of Directors of the We've Had It Taxpayers Association (WHITA) met recently in the Statewide Savings and Loan offices.

Thomas Cerwonka described the condition of the building, and committee members expressed concern over the "wanton neglect of this historic building."

The deterioration of the building is primarily due to a leaking roof which should be repaired immediately to prevent further damage to the building, Cerwonka said.

Committees were formed to go to Washington and Albany to solicit federal and state aid to revitalize the building and make it an asset by renting office space. The board passed a resolution to invite Kingston Mayor Francis R. Koenig to go along.

Addison Jones presented a thoroughly documented report on 1,600 feet of roadway scheduled to be constructed through the downtown Kingston Urban Renewal Area. Peter Harp, Frank Reis, Thomas Cerwonka and Lester Schreiber volunteered to serve on a committee to study the need for the road.

Recreation Budget Gets Review for '75

KINGSTON

The Kingston Recreation Commission met in regular session Thursday night to review its budget requests for 1975.

Spending in the Recreation Department, currently at the $210,000 level, is expected to increase from five to 10 per cent for fiscal 1975 which begins Jan. 1. Final submission of budget requests to Mayor Francis R. Koenig is Nov. 15.

The department is expected to ask for increased funding for its tennis and softball programs and for the operation of the Rondout Neighborhood Center on lower Broadway.

Details were not available as to specific budget requests following Thursday night's meeting of the Recreation Commission.

Final Run Of Railroad Exhibition

KINGSTON

Today marks the final run of the 1974 version of the annual public exhibition of the Kingston Model Railroad Club's quarter-inch scale model of a railroad in action.

The show is open at the clubhouse, entrance from Pine Grove Avenue over Susan Street, from 2:30 to 9 p.m. Models of all types of railroad equipment, old fashioned and modern, can be seen in action on the miniature railroad system resulting from 37 years of pursuing a hobby.

A railroad museum is also a feature of the annual show. On display are many items of old railroads and antique toy railroads.

Camerons To Present Program Here

KINGSTON

"The Cameron Family" from Scotland will present a program of song and testimony at First Baptist Church, Albany Avenue at Broadway, tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

This family of five, father and mother, Stephen 17, Diane 11, and Cousin Dennis, 27, came to America in August and will be returning to Scotland at the end of this month. They have traveled all over northeastern United States, singing almost every night in churches of all denominations.

They say they are "fishing people" from a fishing village named Peterhead in the highlands on the northeast coast. A few years ago a spiritual revival moved upon the whole village and reportedly more than 300 families were touched by the ministry.

Many of the songs they sing were written by their grandmother, who never studied music.

Stephen, at the age of 11, picked up the accordion and began to play without ever having a lesson.

Fond Farewell for MacIsaac

Donald A. MacIsaac, longtime area resident and IBM Kingston-Poughkeepsie 's manager of communications and community relations, was given a testimonial dinner at the Walnut Grove Friday. Friday. MacIsaac has been transferred to IBM's corporate headquarters in Armonk, where he will head the company's film operations. Shown at the dinner are (from the left) Herman Geisler, manager at IBM-Kingston; MacIsaac; Mrs. MacIsaac; Richard B. Matthews, president of the Chamber of Commerce of Ulster County; and Len Cane, the Chamber's executive vice-president. (Freeman Photo)

OAS Offices Damaged by Bomb

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A powerful bomb exploded Saturday night at offices of the Organization of American States.

Metropolitan police said the bomb did heavy damage to the second floor of the Pan American Union Building about two blocks from the White House but there were no injuries.

The OAS has offices in the Pan American Union on Constitution Avenue.

There were no warnings about the blast beforehand. The Secret Service was informed of the bombing because of its proximity to the White House, but said it was not a matter under its jurisdiction.

A police spokesman said the explosion was "definitely due to a bomb."

It exploded about 8:30 p.m., police said, on the second floor of the west wing of the ornate building near the office of the Ecuadorian representative to the OAS.

In Quito, where the foreign ministers of the OAS are meeting this weekend on a proposal to lift the 10-year-old economic and political blockade against Cuba, bombs exploded Thursday at the Bolivian embassy and the Brazilian cultural center. A third was disarmed at the Paraguayan embassy.

All three countries are likely to come out against the readmission of Cuba to the hemispheric community.

Only two persons were in the building at the time and were not injured, police said.

The Pan American Union is the permanent secretariat of the OAS.

Three Dead in Belfast Violence

BELFAST (UPI) — Gunmen struck in a series of attacks in and around Belfast Saturday, killing three Roman Catholic men and wounding two prominent Protestants, police said.

The deaths on one of Northern Ireland's bloodiest days in recent months brought to 10 the number of persons killed in the past week, including four British army soldiers.

Police said a car pulled up this afternoon at a repair shop at Clady Corner, an intersection on the road to Aldergrove airport west of the city.

A man jumped out, walked inside and gunned down the two mechanics, both of whom were Catholics, a spokesman said. The killer escaped and the two victims were dead on arrival at a nearby hospital.

The 4-year-old daughter of one mechanic apparently witnessed the killings. Police said she was found sitting in a car at the repair shop garage. The car had a bullet hole in it, the spokesman said.

A gunman using the same hitand-run technique several hours earlier wounded two well-known figures in the Ulster Defense Association, the province's biggest Protestant paramilitary organization.

Jim Anderson, former UDA chairman, and Billy Hull, also a one-time UDA official, were hit as they stood in Anderson's hardware store on the Crumlin Road in a Protestant area of west Belfast.

Witnesses said the man escaped in a car containing two other passengers. Anderson was hospitalized with leg wounds and Hull was hit in the stomach, but neither injury was serious, police said.

Early Saturday police found the body of a Roman a bakery just 400 yards from Anderson's shop.

Olive Budget Shows Increase

SHOKAN

The proposed 1975 Town of Olive budget calls for total appropriations of $654,399, up 14 per cent from this year's $627,382.

The recent public hearing in the American Legion Hall, attended by about 50 persons, was quiet, with town board members responding to numerous questions from the audience. Supervisor Oliver Crawford, hospitalized for diagnostic tests, was unable to attend.

The amount to be raised by taxes in 1975 will be $575,342, up from this year's $395,809. A major portion of the increase is accounted for by a drop in the unexpended balance brought forward, which in the current budget amounts to $140,452. The estimated total to be carried forward to 1975 is $24,163.

Most increases in the budget reflect higher costs for fuel oil, electricity, and materials for the town and its highway department.

Salary increases were modest, with Crawford's supervisor's pay going from $7,000 to 7,700. The two town justices were boosted from $2,500 to $3,000 and the four town councilmen went from $4,500 to $5,000. The highway superintendent goes from $11,000 to $12,500 and the tax collector from $2,500 to $3,000. Town Clerk E. Lee Denman, faced with an increase work load due to the new Freedom of Information Law, gets a boost from $4,500 to $5,000.

The new tax rate per thouand will not be known until the town's new equalization rate and total assessed valuation are known, Denman said.

Bolivia Head Fires Cabinet

LA PAZ, Bolivia (UPI) — Gen. Hugo Banzer, president of Bolivia's military government, fired his entire cabinet Saturday following an unsuccessful coup against his regime Thursday.

Government sources said warrants have been issued for the arrest of two cabinet ministers and dozens of other officials.

Officially, the cabinet resigned at Banzer's request. He said he intends to establish a new government of "national reconstruction."

Those arrested or being sought included dozens of politicians and army and police officers suspected of backing the abortive coup.

The sources said Housing Minister Col. Jose Patino Ayoroa has been placed under house arrest in La Paz, but Commerce and Industry Minister Col. Miguel Ayoroa Montano, his cousin, is outside the country in Salta, Argentina.

The government announced that both the ministers have been dismissed.

Newsmen in the cities of Santa Cruz, Cochabamba, and government sources in La La Paz reported at least 10 army officers, an unknown number of policemen, and around 20 politicians have been rounded up as suspects.

Banzer led loyalist forces personally Thursday in crushing a revolt of a dissident military faction, supported by some civilian groups, in the southeastern city of Santa Cruz.

Newsmen in Santa Cruz said the leaders of the revolt and 200 followers have fled toward the Brazilian and Paraguayan borders and the city has been place under martial law.

Figures In Extortion Arrests

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — FBI agents used a direction finder beamed on radio code messages blown on a duck call to lead them to a couple arrested in connection with a $1 million extortion plot, the agency said Saturday.

David Windsor Heesch and his wife, Sheila, both 34, were arrested Friday evening in their car on the Portland outskirts.

The two are charged with sending a letter in which a threat was made to black out the city of Portland if Bonneville Power Administration did not pay $1 million. Eleven high-voltage power transmission line towers in Oregon had been damaged by dynamite blasts before the letter was received.

Julius L. Mattson, FBI agent in charge, said agents were communicating with the extortionist on citizen's band radio. They used a code directed by the extortionist—who signed his communications "J. Hawker"— in the last three of six letters.

"The code was similar to Morse code but was his own," Mattson said. "We never heard his voice." He said FBI agents used voice transmission.

Greenhaven Escapee Captured

NEW YORK (UPI) — State police have recaptured one of two prison inmates who escaped two weeks ago from the maximum-security state prison at Stormville, in Dutchess County.

Robert Enright, 40, of The Bronx, was picked up early Saturday at the home of a girlfriend in Queens. Troopers said he offered no resistance and was returned to the facility Saturday evening.

Enright and Matthew Armer, 55, of Nassau, in Rensselaer County, escaped from Greenhaven Oct. 26 while working on a kitchen detail. Armer was serving a 15-years-to-life term on a second degree murder conviction for the slaying of a state trooper in 1951. He was reported still at large.

A spokesman for the state corrections department said it was still not known how the two escaped and that after preliminary questioning, Enright was returned to GreenHaven and placed in segregation. He said felony escape is punishable by up to five additional years in prison.

A little simple arithmetic about a Math major.

The cost of a higher education is getting higher. In fact, you could end up spending close to $20,000 to put your child through college.

So maybe you should consider U.S. Savings Bonds. They're one of the most dependable ways to build funds for an education.

All you have to do is join the Payroll Savings Plan where you work. Then an amount you specify is set aside from your paycheck and used to buy Bonds.

Say your child is 3 years old now. If you buy a $75 Bond a month through Payroll Savings, by the time he's 18, you'll have $16,048 tucked away. A solid sum to get him started. See? A little simple arithmetic can add up to a lot.

Make the chances of your child's college education more secure. Join the Payroll Savings Plan now.

Now E Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4% the first year). Bonds are replaced if lost, stolen or destroyed. When needed, they can be cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

Take stock in America.

CALL FOR BIDS

Sealed proposals will be received until 6 P.M. Nov. 18, 1974 in the office of the Board of Fire Commissioners at Box 90, Mt. Marion, N.Y. 12456 for the furnishing of all necessary labor, equipment and material for a 1000 GPM Class "A" UL Certified triple combination pumper. Pumping equipment with not less than a 750 gallon booster tank, hose body and other equipment as outlined in the following specifications. Specifications and information may be obtained from Ken Clinch, Box 90, Mt. Marion, N.Y. 12456. The right is reserved to reject any or all bids and to accept any bid which meets or exceeds these specifications that is deemed to be in the best interest of the purchaser.

INVITATION FOR PROPOSALS
SECTION 23 HOUSING ASSISTANCE PAYMENTS
PROGRAM NEW CONSTRUCTION

The Kingston Housing Authority of Kingston, New York invites developers and builders to submit proposals for the development of privately owned housing to be assisted by housing assistance payments pursuant to Section 23 of the U.S. Housing Act of 1937, as amended.

1—The development will consist of 70 units of efficiency with alcove and 30 units of 1 bedroom designed for the elderly, making a total of a 100 unit High Rise construction with elevators. The maximum gross rents (including the cost of utilities) which the Housing Authority will consider shall not exceed $259.00 per month for the efficiency units and $313.00 per month for the 1 bedroom units.

2—Developers may submit proposals for locations within the boundaries of the City of Kingston. However, in its selection the Authority has the right to favor any proposal received which is combined with the construction and development of neighborhood shopping stores in the Broadway East Urban Renewal Area. The housing need not be constructed in the Broadway East Urban Renewal Area, however, a site would be made available thru the Urban Renewal Agency. The Davis-Bacon Act may be applicable.

3—Proposals will be opened by the Authority on December 3, 1974 at 2:00 p.m. Detailed guidelines, standards and procedures for the development of these units are contained in a Developer's Packet which may be obtained by interested developers and builders from the Housing Authority, whose address is Colonial Gardens, Flatbush Avenue, Kingston, New York, 12401.

RAPIEFF CHECKS THE BOUQUET OF A RARE TEA BLEND

Tea Taster...Delicate Occupation

By JON POWERS

GLENFORD

Next to water, tea is the world's most popular drink. People like Kenneth Rapieff are here to insure that the delicate brew maintains its stature as the preeminent beverage for most of the world's people.

Rapieff is a tea taster, one of just 60 in this country. Employed by the Tea Council of the U.S.A., he was in this area recently to discuss the vagaries of his uncommon profession with members of the Woodstock Rotary Club.

The Tea Council is a trade organiztion that represents the leading tea manufacturers in America, as well as the governments of the countries that grow and export most of the world's tea.

Since most tea sold here in America is a blend of between 20 and 30 varieities, it is somwhat difficult for any brand to maintain the same flavor, bouquet and body from one batch to the next. But that's exactly what the American housewive expecs when she plucks "Brand X" off the supermarket shelf every few weeks.

"It's the job of the tea taster" explains Rapieff, "to keep the taste of tea the same as it was last week, last month or last year. If the tea supply in Pakistan runs out, for instance, and a company has been using Pakistani tea in its blend for some time, the aroma and color are going to change. The tea taster has to make sure the taste doesn't change."

An expert tea taster can identify between 1,500 and 1,600 different teas. He can tell where a particular tea was grown, what variety it is, at what season of the year it was picked, how it was processed and what other varieties of tea should be blended with it to produce a particular flavor. And all that from just a brief sip, a violent swish and a noisy slurp.

The average tea taster, said Rapieff, will taste between 300 and 500 teas a day, devoting no more than a few seconds to each blend. After each taste, the liquid is neatly disposed in a watery trajectile . . . a practice that might raise a few eyebrows at the neighborhood bridge club, but which is an accepted part of the tea taster's rapid-fire work.

Rapieff noted that there are some 3,300 different types of tea in the world before blending, but all reduce to three general types: black tea (consumed in the western world), green tea (predominant in the Orient) and Oolong tea (common to India).

A teetotaler himself, what else?), Rapieff offered some suggestions on how to make the best possible cup of tea:

- First, the water should be brought to a rolling boil, anything less will affect the intended flavor;
- The tea (either a bag or loose leafs), should be steeped for no less than three and no more than five minutes. Anything less than three minutes will result in tea-flavored hot water, and nothing more.
- Never use water that has already been boiled once before. Use fresh water for each cup of tea. Otherwise, there will be an appreciable change in flavor.
- Never use a tea bag more than once. Statistic show that a tea bag retains only nine per cent of its original flavor the second time around; less than one per cent the third time.
- There is no relationship between the color of the tea and its strength. You can squeeze and mangle a tea bag all you want, but the tea won't come out any stronger than if you had let it steep for three minutes. All you accomplish by squeezing a tea bag is adding acids that aren't intended to be consumed. If you like your tea strong, buy strong tea.

With those helpful hints, compliments of a man who is a connoisseur's connoisseur, all that remains is to sit back and enjoy a relaxing cup of properly brewed tea. It's a practice man has enjoyed for 5,000 years, and it shows no sign of diminishing.

Police Seminar...Forerunner of County Academy?

KINGSTON

A seminar for local police officers to be held next week at Ulster County Community College could be a harbinger of the establishment of a police academy at the Stone Ridge campus, it was indicated at a joint Kingston Police Department-UCCC press conference last week.

But when — and if — a police academy will be started at UCCC is not known, as the idea is still in its infancy stage. City Police and college officials, however, seem to be in favor of the proposal.

"We hope there can be an academy established," said Police Chief Julius M. Glassman, who was joined at the press conference by UCCC President Robert T. Brown, Sgt. Joseph Feraca, the ecently appointed training officer of the Kingston Police Department and Associate Professor Theodore Dietz of the Department of Public Service at UCCC.

However, even if the police academy concept does not come to fruition, more in-service training courses such as that to be held next week will follow in the future, school and police officials said.

The special seminar on management theory and techniques for police to be held Nov. 14 and 15 marks the first in a series of programs to be held with the cooperation of city police following the establishment of the post of training officer for the department, to which Feraca was appointed.

The two-day course will be open to police officers throughout Ulster County. Instructors will include James Penrose, past director of personnel for IBM and present director of Gateway Industries George Washbourne, associate superintendent of education in the Kingston school district and Donald Favreau, associate professor at the State University College at Albany.

The course will run from 1 to 5 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 14, and from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 15, and is primarily intended for officers to familiarize them more fully with the fundamentals of management, control, understanding and supervision of subordinates. Prosperctive police officers, you can offer applicants should contact Sgt. Feraca by Nov. 13 at the Kingston Police Department.

In announcing the seminar Brown said such a program is one of the best ways to accomplish community service at UCCC.

"This type of coordinated effort between educators and professional career officers is a natural for a community-based, community-oriented community college like ours," he said.

Brown added that the present program "is the start of an integrated long term training program for police officers in Ulster County."

"Education and training are vital parts of the professional growth (of police officers) . . . We look forward to new successes for law enforcement officers in Ulster County which in turn will be valuable for all the residents of the county," Brown concluded.

Speaking briefly, Sgt. Feraca said, "If you have well trained better service to the public."

Dietz said he forsees much interest on the part of the public in the program.

Among future courses already planned are a firearms safety course and a basic police training course.

The topics at this week's seminar will include discussions of "Accountability in Supervision" by Washbourne "Personnel Administration" by Penrose, and "Management and Police Supervision" by Favreau.

The college and police officials stressed that it is hoped through the programs that better police service to all residents of the county will be made possible.

FEA Confirms Correction

NEW PALTZ

An Oct. 11 report by the Federal Energy Administration, which cited six Ulster County gasoline and heating oil distribution firms for overcharging customers between July 1 and Oct. 9, erroneously listed Reid's Heating Serivce of New Paltz as one of the companies.

According to Robert Reid, president of the New Paltz firm, FEA auditors did uncover a potential price irregularity in July, but the matter was corrected before any of the affected kerosene was sold to Reid's customers.

Reid's explanation was confirmed by the FEA.

In addition the FEA's audit of Reid's kerosene sales for the period from Nov. 1, 1973 to July, 1974 revealed that the New Paltz firm, in fact, undercharged its customers by $69 during that period.

"At no time," said Reid, "were our customers overcharged for kerosene. Any potential problems were discovered beforehand by the auditors."

Reid added that the particular method of pricing he had planned for July was different from the method approved by the FEA and would have resulted in overcharges had the auditors not detected the mistake.

"Dealers are having a great amount of difficulty understanding the pricing regulations," Reid continued. "They're changed quite often and are very confusing. Mistakes aren't uncommon."

Reid further noted that when he learned about the possible irregularity in kerosene pricing he contacted FEA auditors to examine his fuel oil income for the year. The auditors from the FEA office in Poughkeepsie, determined that Reid had overcharged customers by $258 on two million gallons of fuel sold during that period. "The auditors told me that I couldn't have come much closer than that," said Reid, "they said it was a satisfactory audit."

Reid emphasized that none of his costomers have been "victimized by stupidity or crookedness. I didn't make any windfall profits last year. In fact profits were down from the year before."

Reid's Heating Service has been in business since 1950.

'Emphasis On Careers'

NEW PALTZ

A seminar on Careers in Mental Health, sponsored by the Ulster County Association for Mental Health and the Career Planning and Placement Office State University College at New Paltz, will be held on Tuesday, Nov. 12 at 8 p.m. in the Coykendall Science Building Auditorium.

The careers to be emphasized are in the field of counseling with representatives from an independent child care home, a mental health center, a narcotics outreach program, and a state child and youth care agency.

The speakers will be Mary Blake, a house parent in an Agency (Calbrini) Operated Boarding Home in Poughkeepsie; Joyce Granger, social worker for the Ulster County Mental Health Center in Kingston; Dan Segal, director of the Outreach Center of the Ulster County Drug Commission in Kingston and Lewis Woodham, director of Social Services at the Highland Training School for Children.

The participants will each make a 10 minute presentation describing their educational background, how they got their job, and what it entails and what qualifications are required and opportunities are available in their counseling field. An open question period will follow. The moderator will be John Van Ness, assistant to the Dean of Students and a member of the Executive Committee of the UCAMH. Refreshments will be served and groups formed around the speakers.

The purpose of the seminar is to acquaint persons with majors in psychology and sociology especially, with opportunities in the counseling field. Persons in the community who may be thinking of continuing their education or going back into this field are urged to attend, along with both undergraduate and graduate students. The UCAMH is a United Way Agency.

News and features for the whole family

By Dorothy A. Narel, Women's Page Editor

Economists meet at the summit. Housewives at the supermarket check-out counter. And both agree. Something must be done -- or at least to narrow -- the gap between the money that comes in and the money that goes out. Dealing with that gap is what's known as "money management." That's how one insurance firm's public relations office tags it.

But instead of dealing directly with pressing issues, we get on a variety of topics including this one: the differences between urban and rural consumer thinking solutions are few but advice (particularly from special interest groups) abounds.

Most of the time I take researchers and surveys seriously. There are days, however, when statistics leave me cold or serve merely to amuse, in a wry sort of way.

As an example, one team of univesity researchers went out in June and again in September of this year and came up with this information: that rural and urban consumers indicate their number one concern is INFLATION. No, kidding! We would never have guessed!

To be fair, the researchers were really trying to uncomver differences in thinking processes between the two groups of consumers in Central New York. Knowing that rural consumers rank inflation as a leading problem with concern about food and clothing prices taking second place, is a digestible fact but it gets only a "so what" from me. I'd be more interested in knowing what happens to these statistical surveys after so much time and money has been spent on them. Like most reports, they will gather dust in somebody's files.

In getting around the county I find people are tired of statistics. They are tired of lip service and tired of being treated as guinea pigs. The only valuable return on the universtiy project was a statement attributed to a professor of consumer economics who served as one of the researchers. A woman, she feels response to the survey is a clear indication of her contention that the consumer is hit simultaneously on a number of fronts and the net result is a MULTIPLIED EFFECT WHICH EXCEEDS ANY CONSUMER PRICE INDEX.

"High prices of goods, low quality of goods, salary and wage increments that don't keep pace with prices, plummeting stock prices, sky-rocketing housing costs caused by increased rents or higher mortgage rates, are just a few samples of ways in which the consumer is being hit," she says.

The professor also states that inflation is supposedly going on at a whopping 14 per cent but the result due to a multipication effect is really much higher and that a by-product of high inflation is usually a compensatory tendency by producers and sellers to recoup via the quality of their goods, with high prices entailing a drop in quality.

In another area, the "how to" people from a leading insurance company open their presentation by emphasizing that if any family wants to win a bout with the budget, it shouldn't start juggling columns of figures. Instead, they say, do a little soul-searching for it's essential for for each family to properly assess its financial status right now. They emphasize also that it's equally important to consider expected future income, goals and obligations. Who can argue with it? No one, except it leads like a good text book on economics. Great in theory, warped in practice. If in doubt, try it out the next time you're juggling the week's shopping list. You will be able to assess your financial status immediately! You either have it -- or do not have it.

The helpful little report goes onto emphasize that "if you or your husband are on your way up in business, you can realistically expect your financial picture to change." Very profound. In light of today's economy, a small businessman may go out to lunch and find himself wiped out by the time he returns. Look around you -- the small business and the middle-income family are really ha nging on the ropes with no relief in sight. The "how-to" department also tells us to keep an accurate record of income -- salaries (after deductions, dear) interest, dividends (if you have them) tax refunds (oh, you dreamer!) and other little goodies. Then this report goes on to state: "You'll need a realistic listing of your expenditures, not only for day-to-day requirements but also for such needs as insurance premiums, taxes and tuition. Do your own survey and you'll find most people stop at the day-to-day state of the game these days. And when the release goes on to cite savings as "absolutely essential," I think of the sick, unemployed (and that's over 6 per cent) and struggling young couples. Or don't they exist. Of course savings are desirable provided you are in a position to "sock it away."

Then there's always the working wife. For some couples, the authorities tell us, a job for the wife has been the answer to financial problems. Let's face it -- a double income is the ONLY way the majority of couples can make it today. And if the wife doesn't work, you can bet her husband moonlights on a second job.

If the wife is lucky enough to get a decent paying job, she doesn't need anyone to tell her that expenses for baby-sitters will take a big chunk out of her earnings. That's the easy part. The difficult task is finding a RELIABLE sitter. Our sophisticated society is still dragging its feet on day-care nurseries.

Therefore, to the "how-to" departments and the numerous survey committees, let's change our direction. Let's eliminate meaningless reports and ineffective budget outlines. Let's not preach to today's housewife turned career girl that she has to allow money for household help, clothes and lunches. Today's middle-class working woman with a family usually skips lunch, restyles her old wardrobe and does her own housework AFTER HOURS. That's the only system that works for her. And believe me, everytime she walks up to a cash register she is fully aware of today's high cost of living.

What we need are fewer surveys, fewer studies and committee reports, less skirting around problems and more realistic, direct decision-making for the welfare of the majority.

Finnish Woman -- A Skipper?

By GAY PAULEY

HAMILTON, Bermuda (UPI) -- Arja Tytti Marjatta Rauramo claims no pioneering part in careers for women in her role as first officer aboard a luxury passenger ship.

Miss Rauramo already has finished her formal training for master's license, which means she'll be qualified to skipper ships.

"I'm not the first in the whole world," said this lovely brunette of 29 years. "In Russia, the men and women have always been equal in the maritime. I just happened to be the first woman in Finland."

Her employer, Flagship Cruises, believes she is the first to attain first officer rank in Scandinavia as well as in the whole world of cruise ships.

In contrast, the maritime industry in the United States has just opened its doors to women, permitting enrollment in the four-year course at the U.S. Maritime Academy, Kings Point, N.Y.

The rule that women might work toward a commission in the U.S. Naval Reserve came from the Commerce Department, which runs the service academy. The fourteen women who entered Kings Point last August are still there studying with 320 men in the first year class.

She is the first mariner in the family. A grandfather was a priest, other relatives were lawyers, her father teaches languages.

She took secretarial courses and trained for law before, compelled "by something I'd always wanted to do," she went to sea.

Aboard the 626-passenger Sea Venture she ranks with two male first officers, all of whom share duties ranging from computerized satellite navigating to checking supplies to flying bridge duty when moving in and out of port.

Her apparel on board is a tailored, gold-buttoned jacket, shirt just covering the knee in white or navy, with the visored cap traditional for officer uniforms.

Her below-shoulder length hair, except for bangs, is tucked up under the cap when she's on duty. And certainly she wears lipstick -- "a little never hurts."

Duty on a cruise ship is a much cleaner job than those she's had on cargo runs where she added up years of sea experience, plying the ports along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts. Then it was dirt and wind and trousers while she chipped rust, painted and climed right alongside the men.

There's only one sailor in port for her, a Finnish sea captain based in New Orleans "who's waited for me six years, although we don't get to see each other often."

Fashions on Parade but Coordinated

FOR CASUAL WEAR, try this combination, long-sleeved red turtle, sleeveless navy pullover and navy pants and add a striped cardigan if you like. The new fashion math, according to NEA's Helen Hennessy, proves that four times two can equal 16 and it's all tied in with fighting inflation with fashion multiplication.

With bright red big skirt, right, you can wear the cardigan with a scarf, or the halter if you choose. In this age of overrated prices And that is just what Palo Alto by Fairfield has managed to do for your budget.

ANOTHER FASHION math version is the sporty look, at right, turtle tucked in navy pants and topped off with striped cardigan. Another design by Palo Alto. His fashions are designed coordinated separates that actually stretch your dollar. By purchasing four tops color-cued to a skirt and pants, you can achieve by different fashions looks—all for under $70.

You're sure to enjoy the season ahead from both an economic and a fashion point of view.

Gleason's Daughter Is Slenderly Similar

By MARIAN CHRISTY

NEW YORK—Jackie Gleason's look-alike daughter, 33-year-old Linda Miller, looks as slim as a Paris mannequin. Lingering memories of obesity haunt her sensitive psyche. Svelte Linda, in the process of getting a divorce from actor Jason Miller, claims she still thinks she's fat.

"When I was 13, I was over 135 pounds and under five feet," she says. "I was built exactly like my father. My poor mother would wince at the amount I was eating and cry!

"I had this continuing, unexpressed fantasy of flitting through school in a tutu and looking like a skinny, juvenile Margot Fonteyn. Of course I never did! Even worse were the constant urges from teachers and classmates to tell a joke. I just kept on eating some more.

"Then, tra-la-la, one day I got the measles. In one week, I dropped 15 pounds! Gradually, very gradually, I slimmed down. I still feel guilty whenever I eat spaghetti."

Linda, a brunette blessed with oversized green eyes and extra-long black lashes, pauses for a final admission that refreshes the listener with its total honesty: "I'll always be fat in the annals of my mind."

The father-daughter relationship has been riddled with emotional crises infinitely more traumatic than the hereditary tendency toward overweight. The Gleasons separated shortly after Linda was born and she was a semi-orphan who grew up without a one-to-one father figure.

During the last seven years, a time when Linda's three children— Jennifer, 10, Jason, 8, Jordan, 7—were going through childhood illnesses and accidents, Linda didn't see her father at all. He lives in Miami. She was in New York and neither financial nor emotional support was forthcoming.

Absence seems to have made the heart grow fonder.

"I have found that life often separates people—even though the separation isn't intended," She she says.

Recently she and her father met to talk. Apparently the tete-a-tete was more "wonderful" than Linda had imagined it would be. She talks glowingly about her father growing gray and how the change in hair color has given him a distinguished, attractive posture of mellowness.

"We discovered we had a common link," says Linda, who attended the College of the Sacred heart, Newton, Mass. and was graduated from Washington's Catholic University. "Daddy and I are both staunch Irish Catholics. Best of all, there's no antagonism between us—just the separation of a generation.

Linda, who has appeared in many national television commercials merchandising household products, will make her acting debut in December in a play, "The Black Picture Show," at Lincoln Center.

She auditioned with dozens of other hopefuls for the role and won it. But producer Joe Papp had to assure her that the part was hers only because she turned in the best job—not because her father is Jackie Gleason.

"Too often," she says, "people assume you're out of a mold. They expect you to be what your celebrity parent is. I yearn to be accepted for my own strengths. It takes an incredible amount of confidence. I'm not a comic."

This year, a tough one, has had no outward ill effects on Linda who glows with health and good will. She and Miller, her husband of 11 years, separated in January. He has moved to Hollywood.

About surviving the marital breakup: "We lived happily when we had mutual problems to solve," she says. "What we couldn't handle was super success. It changed everything! Little breaches suddenly exploded into wide valleys that put us out-of-reach."

A financial settlement is currently being negotiated. "A man," says Linda about the economics of the divorce, "has the upper hand because he controls the purse strings. In reality, there is no equality."

Best-dressed Linda would like to marry again. She expresses confidence that having three young children isn't a stumbling block to finding love a second time. Even more than being successful onstage is the expressed desire to please a man in a traditional setting.

Obviously, she's not disenchanted with marriage. "There is," she says, "a certain satisfying maternity involved in a good man-woman relationship. Even the bravest, strongest, most masterful man needs to be coddled sometimes. Certainly he can't run home to mommy! A wife is a husband's best friend and most exciting lover. She's not just the woman who washes his socks and bakes cookies for his children."

It was Miller who told Linda he wanted out. About the initial shock: "I thought my breathing had stopped and I was in the final stages of dying. Then the pain set in. I felt very, very sorry for myself. But I didn't want to transmit my terror to the childr en."

Linda doesn't hide behind her beauty. When she met with her father, he stared at her and, in typical show biz lingo, said, "Honeybunch, you're a broad with a beautiful kisser. You know that?"

"I told him what I tell my friends," she says. "I'm not knocking my face—but when I go to auditions where girls are so beautiful they must be stared at, I realize there are scales of beauty that range from attractive to super-gorgeous. Good looks are merely a backup."

Work, Linda's current salvation, isn't all play. When doing commercials, she has discovered that the "money people" are corporate executives who eclipse creative staffers with talent but no power.

"See," she says, "some bloke comes in from Baloneyland and tells artists do this, do that. Unfortunately, money is where it's all at. Creative persons find themselves defining their own level of integrity."

Linda is close to her mother, the former Genevieve Halford, an ex-dancer who married Gleason and produced two daughters—Linda and Geraldine, a year younger.

"My mother is a lot like Rose Kennedy," she says admiringly. "She sailed through every woe. That is very beautiful."

She expresses sadness that the Gleason marriage didn't end in mutually consented divorce when she was little. "I always felt my mother should have remarried. But she didn't bend in her attitude."

Gleason married Beverly McKittrick in 1970 and they're getting divorced.

It's a common assumption that women form opinions of men from indelible childhood impressions emanating from their fathers.

But Linda says "I really stumbled upon my concept of men from my own experiences. The seeds of these influences didn't start with Dad.

Hints From Heloise

THE BRIDE'S FRIENDLY PATCHWORK QUILT

Dear Heloise:

I have found a very good way to help prevent cradle cap on babies.

I use my baby's soft hair brush. Just wet hair and put on shampoo and brush with baby brush. The brush really works up the shampoo and massages the scalp.

Keep putting the brush in the water and brush until all shampoo is gone, then rinse. It only takes a minute or two and the baby's scalp will be clean.

Sarah Quintrell

Dear Heloise:

I had purchased several pairs of opaque panty hosee only to discover they hung down at the crotch as the day progressed.

A fellow teacher gave me this fantastic tip. Wear a pair of those stretch panties (one size fits all kind) on the outside of your panty hose.

They never come down! Works for regular panty hose too.

Marcia McCarty

I do declare! So help me, it works.

Heloise

Dear Heloise:

We use dehydrates salad dressin mix, adding oil and vinegar according to the directions on the package.

We have found that if we mix this in the blender it homogenizes, giving a different and better texture, taste and appearance. Also, it doesn't separate nearly so readily.

Helen Rothrock

Dear Heloise:

Recently I had occasion to be away from my home town for several weeks and enjoyed very much getting the daily paper.

The hint I'm writing about is that my Mother sent the newspapers rolled up and surrounding them was an empty toilet tissue roll.

Well, after the laugh, I realized how great her idea was. The roll won't fall off, come apart, and it is easy to write on, thus helping to make the mailman's job easier.

M.E.W.

Dear Heloise:

I discovered that the top of my plastic cake cover makes an excellent mixing bowl.

It is deep and I don't splash any food over the sides and it holds a lot more.

It is also good for doing a small amount of dishes, serving as a dishpan.

Mrs. Pat Sizemore

LETTER OF WARNING

Dear Mothers:

Please, listen and absorb. It just might save your child's life!

Never leave an extension cord connected to the wall plug when you aren't using it.

One mother wrote that her baby picked up the end of the extension cord and put it in his mouth. He was terribly burned and will be scarred for life . . .

Another mother wrote that her baby stuck a bobby pin in the electrical outlet in her wall and was almost electrocuted.

Naturally, babies see mothers plug something in there so why shouldn't they try?

Tape all electrical outlets securely with electrical or adhesive tape.

Please, let's try to save that little babe's life. He doesn't know, but Mommy does. Bless all Mommies . . .

Make Part-time, Seasonal Money with Decorations

By JOHN SHUTTLEWORTH

"I've seen a lot of alternative business ideas written up in The Mother Earth News," says Martha Schaefer, "but no one has mentioned the part-time, seasonal money that can be made gathering and selling holiday decorations. Folks in various parts of the U.S. and Canada harvest pine cones, evergreen boughs, dried grasses, holly and other ornamentals.

"Here in Kentucky, though, the trees are full of mistletoe . . . and the white-berried sprigs sell like mad from the day after Thanksgiving to Christmas Eve. I've made as much as $50 from just one afternoon's picking . . . and that was while charging only 25 cents for a large spray!"

Actually, the potential for cashing in on mistletoe is not limited just to Kentucky. The parasitic plant grows on old oaks, black walnut and other trees from the east coast to as far west as eastern Kansas and from southern Ohio south to eastern Texas. Knowledgeable individuals (such as Ms. Schaefer) living in the region have their "kissing plant" businesses well organized.

"First find a source of mistletoe by driving around the country until you spot an area where the parasitic plant is dense. The clusters of thick yellow-green mistletoe leaves stand out clearly among its host trees' bare branches, so this part of the job is quite easy. "If you find mistletoe-bearing trees that overlook a public road, well and good. If they're in someone's pasture, always ask permission before you gather (few landowners will refuse) and then drop off a nice bunch from your harvest as a 'thank you.' Since mistletoe is a parasite that slowly kills its hosts, you're doing the trees a favor by removing the infestation. On the other hand, the plant is practically impossible to get rid of for good -- it grows back and is thought to be transmitted by birds -- so you won't be uspetting any natural balance."

Once Martha has the season's choice harvest spots mapped out in her area, she just sits tight until the first sunny, windless day immediately after Thanksgiving. Then she drives back out to "her" mistletoe patches with an agile teen-ager, a ladder and a long handled tree trimmer.

"Since the object is to break off as few berries as possible from the sprigs you collect," says Ms. Schaefer, "it's a good idea to take along an old sheet and let your tree-climber drop the bunches of mistletoe into it while two other people hold the 'net' clear of the ground. And don't be greedy. Limit your outing to about two hours and only gather a couple of orange crate-sized boxes of the plant at a time."

Martha likes to sort her day's take of mistletoe as soon as she gets home. She discards a few pieces, breaks up some bunches and even ties a few odd sprays together to distribute the berries among the leaves in a more artistic manner. "Adding red ribbons and other decorations, though, doesn't pay off," she says. "Just sort the mistletoe and then keep it cool and damp until it's sold."

Ms. Schaefer sells the "kissing plant" both wholesale and retail. Her wholesale markets include florists, craft shops and boutiques and she especially likes stores which cater to the tourist trade.

Another "kinda wholesale" market that Martha supplies every year is the holiday parties and Christmas dances held by schools, colleges, the Junior League and other groups. "Check the newspaper for announcements of large gatherings and weddings during the Christmas season," she says, "and contact the appropriate people about using a load of your sprays for decorations." Martha charges $5 for a beer case-sized carton of mistletoe when she sells to a shop and somewhat more than that when her customer is one of the groups mentioned above. The real money though, comes from retail sales.

"To retail mistletoe profitably, take your harvest to a really large city. Then, if possible, get a street vendor's license, pick a good corner in a busy downtown area or at a shopping center, set out a display, put up a sign . . . and let the customers come to you.

"Or you can dress respectably, go to wealthy and middle-class residential sections and ring doorbells. Or let younger children -- say 8 to 11 -- do the selling for a percentage of the profit. All it takes is enough nerve to approach people and ask them to buy your decorations."

Two nice sprigs of mistletoe -- with berries -- sell for $1.00 a week during the Christmas season, for no more than 20 hours of work, selling mistletoe," says Martha. "An average church group or club that worked both the retail and wholesale angles could clear $4,000 to $5,000 . . . if their supply of mistletoe held up!"

For a more complete explanation (with photographs) of how Martha Schaefer collects and sells mistletoe, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope to The Mother Earth News, Box 957, Des Moines, Iowa 50304. Ask for Reprint No. 209, "The Mistletoe Game."

FTC Expresses Concern About Mileage Claims; Hearing Slated

By MARGARET DANA

If you're planning to buy a new or used car this season fuel economy and tire durability will doubtless top your list of points to check for.

But there's a problem. Though the Environmental Protection Administration (EPA) tested the cars, many manufacturers ran their own tests as well and some are using their results instead on the labels.

To further confuse the issue, different working is being used to list the test results, making comparision shopping difficult.

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) has expressed concern about mileage claims particularly since last winter's fuel emergency and is now gathering opinion from dealers, manufacturers, automobile clubs, purchasing agents, transportation specialists and consumers.

On Nov. 25 the FTC will hold a hearing on what kinds of gas mileage information will help car buyers compare different makes and models. The FTC wants to know:

If gas mileage information is based on "typical consumer driving" conditions, should these conditions be specified? Should the FTC require provable information on fuel economy in all advertising or in special booklets, labels, etc.? Should the claims be based on uniform standards? Who should do the testing -- manufacturers themselves? An independent agency? A combination of the two?

Your ideas on these and related questions will be welcome. Send them to: Special Assistant for Fuelmaking, Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D.C. 20580. Head your letter this way: Re: Notice of Rulemaking Proceedings Concerning Automobile Fuel Economy Claims. Remember the Nov. 25 deadline.

There has been a problem of getting truthful statements as to the actual mileage of used cars.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reminds us that consumers are entitled to a written statement from the dealer as to the actual mileage on a used car. This is a federal law.

Unfortunately a recent survey shows that only 45 per cent of 864 used cars sold by dealers were delivered with this required mileage statement. Out of 388 sales between private parties, only 2 per cent of the sellers complied with the law.

Getting an accurate fuel economy figure on a used car is more difficult than with a new car. But an experienced dealer who cares about his reputation usually can figure an approximate miles-per-gallon measure for both city and highway driving by comparing his models with similar NEW models. Of course an auto's gas economy will differ depending on how the previous owner drove and maintained the car.

As to tires: Consumers often find "private" brands and wonder how much to trust them. The National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1966 requires that each tire be labeled with an approved code mark identifying the tire maker. This enables the dealer to tell the buyer, upon request, who manufactured the tire.

The code mark usually is found near the bead of the tire and will consist of the letters DOT and three figures. Goodyear's code, for example, is DOT 169.

"Who Makes It Where," published by Tire Guide, 2119 Route 110, Farmingdale, N.Y. 11735 is a booklet listing all U.S. tire makers, trade names and DOT numbers. You can order it for $1 from the publisher.

Two last notes on tire buying and care: The Tire Industry Safety Council warns that if you are putting snow tires on a car equipped with radial tires, you must get radial snow tires too. Don't just substitute radial tires with regular snow tires. Radials and regular tires are designed to perform differently.

Live on a farm or have friends who do? The Rubber Manufacturers Association offers a booklet through tire dealers entitled "Care and Service of Farm Tires," and gives the best coverage on the subject I have seen. Ask your tire dealer for it.

Send your questions and comments to Margaret Dana, Research Center, R.R. No. 1, Chalfont, Pa. 18914. Due to the large volume of mail, no personal replies are possible.

...it tells you how

If you still dry your clothes on an old-fashioned cotton line, try boiling the next replacement rope in salt water for a half hour before you put it up. This will take out all the tangles and prevent wet articles of wash from freezing to the line in cold weather.

TWO COLD-WEATHER CLOTHESLINE TIPS

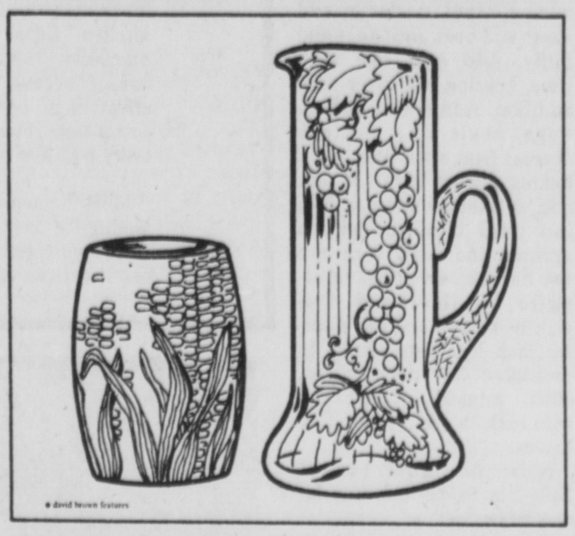
The next time you're obliged to do some fine work outdoors on an extremely cold day, rinse your hands in vinegar and dry them before going out. For some reason, the vinegar wash makes the frigid temperatures easier to take and seems to keep the fingers a little more limber a little longer.

Art Glass by Joseph Locke

The work of Joseph Locke (1846-1936) ranks high in outstanding achievements within the American art glass industry. Before moving to the United States around 1890 and joining the New England Glass Company of Cambridge, Massachusetts, he had already established an enviable reputation in his native England as a designer and engraver of fine art glass.

The company soon began to secure, in his name, a long list of important patents for various types of Art Glass. In 1883, there was one for Amberina — a shaded glass varying from amber to red. This was followed by a plated variety having a creamy opal lining with an outer layer of glass featuring thin, dark, vertical protruding ribs. Patents for Pomona and Agata glass were secrued in 1885. Pomona is a delicate-appearing type of glassware with a design produced in relief by acid etching. On Agata glassware a fired metallic stain produced a mottle effect over a shaded opaque base known as Peach Blow.

ABOUT ANTIQUES



For a short period Locke was employed by the Libby Glass Company, Toledo, Ohio which succeeded the New England Glass Company. The famous Maize Glass, which made its debut in 1889, was designed and patented by him and sold by W.L. Libby & Son of Toledo. Made by the pressing method, the pattern resembled an ear of corn, with a glossy finish except where maize leaves fan out from the base.

Sometime around 1900 Joseph Locke moved to Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania where for about thirty-five years, until his death, he turned out a limited quanitity of fine etched glass from blanks purchased from local companies made to his specificiations. His famous "Uncle Remus" series with their comic cartoons of Br'er Fox and Peter Rabit is about but one example produced during this period.

Searching for Locke's signature "Locke Art" or "Joe Locke" will require close scrutiny, for the signature was worked into the design in small letters. On a limited number of pieces of New England Glass manufacture, signatures were enclosed in a rectangle, and the Libby Glass Company marked a goodly number of its pieces with the word "Libby" in acid etching.

Prices on Joseph Locke's Art Glass creations are firm. A small piece of Pomona would run around the $100 mark, with Agata and plated Amberina costing much more.

'Dear Jane' Won't Work Here

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune N. Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: It all started last summer when a very pretty but shallow 18-year-old girl came here from Italy to visit her aunt. We were fix ed up on a blind date. I am 19.

Abby, if it is possible for a girl to rape a boy, that is what happened to me. I mean, she was really eager. We dated all summer.

She went back to Italy and we corresponded. Then she started writing things like, "Nothing else matters to me in this world but you." Also, "I can't wait until we can be married." (I swear to God I never mentioned marriage tc her once.)

I tried to break off the correspondence, but she wrote to me anyway. Now she writes that she is coming here to live with her aunt for a YEAR! That's the last thing I want. I want to write and tell her if she's coming to be near me, she shouldn't, because I have a lot of college ahead of me yet. I hate to sound like a heel, but I don't love this girl and I wish she would leave me alone.

She told me that when she was 17 she had a broken love affair and tried to commit suicide and spent three months in a mental hos pital, so I have to be careful how I handle her.

Please help me.

DESPERATE IN N.Y.

DEAR DES: With her history of emotional instability, do not send her a "Dear Jane" letter. You can't stop her from coming, but if she does, let her down gently and ease her out of your life as subtly as possible.

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, I moved in with an older couple, Jimmy and Laura. They treated me like a daughter and helped me get my head together. I was pretty messed up. I feel I owe them a lot.

Six months ago, I got my own apartment, and three months later I began seeing a lot of this man I work with. I have fallen in love with him. He moved in with me last week and wants to marry me when his divorce is final. I think I love him enough to marry him, but I'm not sure yet. One of the problems is that he is twice as old as I am.

I invited Jimmy and Laura over to meet my guy. They told me privately that they think I am looking for a father and I need to see a shrink. I feel I owe it to them to take their advice. But then if I do, wouldn't it show that I am not sure about my feelings for my guy.

D.H.

DEAR D. Yes. But it's nothing to be ashamed of. That takes intellig ence! It's a lot easier to make a mistake than remedy it. Get into therapy, and stay single until you are sure of your feelings.

DEAR ABBY: I made the mistake of lending a sympathetic ear to a wom an who works with me, and now she calls me nearly every evening at home to tell me her troules by the hour.

I am not exaggerating, Abby, she often talks for a solid hour and if I don't make some excuse to get away from her, she talks longer.

I have left the phone and rung my own door bell just to end the con versation. Once I actually left the phone for 15 minutes, came back, and she never knew she had been talking to herself. When she starts ta lking, she doesn't even wait for an occasional sign that she's be ing heard.

I feel sorry for her, but I simply cannot devote every evening listen ing to her complaints about her family, her job, and what's wrong with the world.

WEARY

DEAR WEARY: Now that you have allowed her to make a habit of callig you, it won't be easy to dissuade her, but you have to start somewhere , so tell her you are too busy to visit when she calls, and after a while she'll get the message.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-add ressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasion s."

Consumer Question-Box

By MARGARET DANA

Q: What is the definition of a country ham? How is it different from other types of ham?

A: A country ham is produced by using a dry cure, very slow smoking and a long drying process which includes heavy salting. You may find country hams called Virginia, Georgia, Kentucky or Tennessee ham, depending on the state where the ham was produced. The resulting flavor of the country ham is usually quite different, more pronounced and much stronger than the commercially produced hams, processed by much faster methods.

Q: I have heard that using water hot from the hot water tap is not advisable for cooking because of the composition of the pipes. Could this be a fact?

A. I have heard this from time to time, but have never been able to find dependable research to support it. If the water itself is pure, the heating and the pipes through which it flows should not affect the safety in any way.

Q: Can the makers of all-beef salami put pork grease in it and still label it all-beef? We are not supposed to eat any pork at all and must know this.

A. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), the all-beef salami should not use any ingredients from another type of meat. But it could happen, I suppose, should the salami maker run out of beef fat in the middle of a lot, because of an unexpected shortage of beef suet in today's market, and use a substitute fat to save the batch being processed. But this would be rare, and against the regulations.

Q: Could you send me some recipes using soy beans for main dishes?

A: Your local public library is the best source of books on soy bean cookery. There are several available today. You can borrow whatever book you wish and copy from it the recipes you want to keep. From reader Mrs. Mildred Richmond of Iowa comes a recipe for a good dish of soybean sprouts for a fine green vegetable -- cheap, she says: "Soak one-half pound soy beans overnight in water with a pinch of chlorinated lime. Next morning put them in a strainer after draining off water. Keep moist, and covered with a damp cloth. Douse them each night with a solution of one-half teaspoon of lime to a gallon of water (to prevent mold). In 4 or 5 days you will have a crop of green sprouts. Cook them 10 to 20 minutes, and eat as you eat spinach or green beans."

Q: Due to high prices of meats and other foods and shortages, my husband and I are eating a lot of "substitutes." I do not want to compromise good nutrition, though, and want to know if peanut butter or soy beans are complete protein foods, containing the eight essential amino acids. Also what vegetables can I combine to get a dish with all the essential amino acids?

A: Both peanut butter and soybeans are very high in essential nutrients, not identical with those found in meat but providing close to the same nutrition. I have reprinted a chart prepared by nutrtition experts at the USDA, titled "Key Nutrients: Why They are Needed: Some Important Sources." Under "Protein," it tells why protein is needed, then lists some important sources such as lean meat, poultry, fish, eggs, milk and cheese, and for next-best protein sources, dry beans, peas and nuts. Peanut butter is listed as rich in niacin, and essential element. For a copy of this chart, sned your request to me with 10 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Q: Is anything being done to improve the quality of the sewing thread used commercially in garments and also that which we, who sew at home, have to use? It breaks so easily, and deteriorates under laundering.

A: Yes, thread manufacturers have been getting the message -- thread has been poor for years. The makers feel that this is due to the mistaken belief on the part of garment makers that theysential nutrients, not identical with those found in meat but providing close to the same nutrition. I have reprinted a chart prepared by nutrtition experts at the USDA, titled "Key Nutrients: Why They are Needed: Some Important Sources." Under "Protein," it tells why protein is needed, then lists some important sources such as lean meat, poultry, fish, eggs, milk and cheese, and for next-best protein sources, dry beans, peas and nuts. Peanut butter is listed as rich in niacin, and essential element. For a copy of this chart, sned your request to me with 10 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The Inflation Fighter

Fuel Consumption Is a Weighty Matter

Car's Fuel Consumption Is a Weighty Matter

The family car is the largest single energy consuming device in the typical household. Careful selection can be a big help in keeping fuel costs down.

The most significant variable affecting a car's fuel consumption is its weight a car weighting 5,000 pounds.

Cars with diesel engines have 40 to 70 per cent better fuel economy than cars with conventional engines. Currently, rotary engine vehicles are less efficient by 20 to 35 per cent than cars of similar weight powered by conventional engines.

Know Your Lights

Wattage does not measure the amount of light, but the energy needed to light the bulb. The amount of light is measured in lumens. Study bulb packages to get the most for your wattage.

Larger wattage bulbs are usually more efficient and produce more lumens per watt than smaller bulbs. For example, it generally requires six 25-watt bulbs to give the same amount of light as only one 100-watt bulb.

Water Wise

The emphasis on crisp vegetables came at just the right time for energy conservation. If you use only a little water to cook vegetables they will retain their color, vitamins and consistency better.

The idea is to cook the vegetables, not heat water. And once it is boiling, turn the heat down. Leaving the heat on high won't cook the vegetables any faster, and you may burn th cauliflower too.

That's Entertainment

You can cut down on the home entertainment bill—the use of radio, television and stereo—if you remember to turn them off when no one is in the room watching or listening.

Televisions with an "instant on " feature use electricity 24 hours a day keeping components heated and ready for operation. Unplug these when they will not be used for an extended period.

Color sets are especially expensive to operate. They use 33 per cent more energy than conventional sets with tubes. For example, a typical largescreen, solid-state television set uses about half the power of similar "tube-type" set.

Appliance Efficiency

Cold water works best for operating food disposals. In addition to saving hot water, this helps get rid of grease-the cold grease solidifies and can be ground up and washed away.

Faulty appliances don't work efficiently and can waste energy. Try to repair or replace them promptly.

An electric blanket helps the energy crisis if you turn your thermostat down at night further than usual. But if you forget to turn it off in the morning you'll quickly lose that advantage.

Fashion Bread into Tempting Holiday Gifts

Bring true Yuletide cheer to your gift giving by baking quick breads in your own kitchen. Little is more appreciated than homemade baking because there's true affection in every stir of the spoon and thoughtfulness in every addition of ingredients.

Most homemakers will be baking for their own families, so it's easy enough to make one loaf to serve, the other to give with these recipes, each of which makes two plump, delicious breads. Since each has fruit, it keeps well when plastic or foil-wrapped and frozen. When made with butter, the flavors mellow and ripen.

Quick fruit breads slice beautifully especially when they're made in advance. Spread an assortment of them, sliced, for your buffet table for an especially festive look. Butter them lightly for holiday snacks, as an accompaniment to salads or as a colorful bread to serve with breakfast or any other meal.

To give breads as gifts, wrap in plastic or foil and give them gaily in a basket or an an attractive bread board with a wooden spoon tied to the handle with red or green yarn. All of these spell the magic of Christmas.

Cranberry Nut Bread

One egg
Three-quarters cup sugar
One cup dairy sour cream
Two and one-quarter cups all-purpose flour

Economical Solution For Those Dining Out

By GAYNOR MADDOX

What is a "now" restaurant? We are in an inflationary time and some rich aren't so rich anymore. The moderately well-off are worrying and the poor are frightened, according to some observers.

A "now" restaurant is geared to meet needs of a changing society. It is opened only for dinner. This cuts down labor costs and waste. All the food is packaged and frozen at one large station or commissary then shipped to the local restaurants but the aim is to serve quality food. "Now" customers' ages are between 20 and 40. At least 30 per cent want prime ribs of beef. The rest go for lobster tails and steaks. The average income of the customers is between $15,000 and higher. The dinner restaurant has no neon signs in front. The decor is modern and practical. The entire establishment is geared to the modern financial strain since people still want to eat out but they cannot, or will not, pay enormous prices. They want quality but don't demand dishes created by fine French chefs.

One of the men behind the development of these "now" restaurants is Frederick A. Rufe, vice-president of the Dinner House Division of Marriott Corp. "Everything I've ever done has been with food," he explains, stressing his study at Cornell University's Hotel School, jobs as food and beverage chief at several top Miami Beach hotels, vice-president of the Four Seasons and the Forum of the Twelve Caesars in New York and also his Army service in the food supply department. A genuine food man.

We dined recently with Frederick Rufe at the newest of his Dinner House restaurants in Huntington, Long Island, called the Joshua Tree.

He says, "Look at this menu. You can eat a decent meal for $3.95. All the fancy salad you want, all the bread and butter you want and a chopped beef steak plus glasses of sangria. Or for $5.50 you get beef tenderloin brochette plus the other things. You can't tell me those prices and the quality of the food won't attract people who don't want to cook at home, or young fellows and their girls who have little spending money but a preference for dining out.

"The biggest item," Rufe continues, "is our primes ribs of beef with salad, bread and butter and sangria, for $6.95. The beef is really prime. Everyone who can afford it goes for it. Incidentally, salads served on large dinner plates, thoroughly chilled, make a big hit, too. The fixings for our salad, which customers mix themselves at an attractive salad bar, include ripe and green olives, bacon bits, chopped eggs, green peppers.

The secret behind the low cost, he says, is efficiency and control. Everything is precut and weighed. Everything is ready to be broiled. Every serving of prime beef is we ighed before going on the plate. Diners get 12 ounces without the bone, 14 ounces with. Plus au jus gravy.

The menu offers extras: large baked potato (without aluminum foil) for 75 cents, fresh mushrooms at $1, vegetable casserole for 85 cents, whiskey pie or seasonal casserole for $1 and coffee for 35 cents.

The carvers and the broilers are clean-cut young men. The waitresses are young, quite attentive and usually local students. The atmosphere is youthful and willing, rather than professional and surly.

"What you see here is typical of all our Dinner Houses. People welcome our 'now' way of serving food — reasonable, not fancy, very good, and in pleasant atmosphere with pleasant people. They keep coming back. They no longer can afford to spend $25 a person on French food. But they want excellent, plain food. So they get it here," Rufe says.

Doing The Right Thing
By Elizabeth Post

Dear Mrs. Post: I am 15, and I am left-handed. My mother sets my place at the table opposite to that of the rest of the family. Because I have gotten used to this, I find it very hard to adjust when I eat out. Would it be all right if I picked up the silver from the right side of the plate and put it on the left? Or should I just reach across and pick up what I need with my left hand? Can I pick up the water glass, drink and then put it on my left, which would be easier?

Cynthia

Dear Cynthia: Your mother has done you a real disservice in setting your place differently. If you stop to think about it, there is no reason a left-handed person should have trouble with a standard place setting.

After all, right handed people must reach across to pick up the fork, which is on the natural side for a left-handed diner. If you prefer to move the water glass a little toward the left, that's all right, but if there is a butter plate, would you then put it over on the right? Once the silver is used, it is placed on the plate — on whichever side you wish.

If left-handed people are taught to use the utensils from their proper placement, they should have no more trouble than a right-handed person does with the particular items I mentioned.

Dear Mrs. Post: I am a middle-aged woman with a reasonably good figure. I am going to Europe for the first time this winter. For the airplane trip over and back, would it be appropriate for me to wear a wool pantsuit? Also, would the same suit be all right for sightseeing during the day?

Charlotte

Dear Charlotte: A pantsuit is entirely appropriate as long as you look neat and it is becoming to you. In fact, they are more modest and far more comfortable for travelling than a skirt. As for your age, if a middle-aged woman has not lost the battle of the bulge, she may wear a well-tail-ored pantsuit almost any place.

Dear Mrs. Post: What are the rules about "rain checks?" I have asked people to dinner occasionally. Sometimes they say they can't come then, but that they will take a rain check and come the next weekend. Sometimes "next weekend" is not when I want them, and I don't know what to say. It doesn't seem right for them to set the time to come to dinner in my home.

What should I say if this happens again?

Constane Loring

Dear Mrs. Loring: There is a vast difference between "I'm so sorry -- please give us a rain check" and "Give us a rain check for next weekend." The first is a polite way of showing your disappointment; the second is an imposition.

You do not have to accept their sel f-invitation. Just say pleasantly but firmly, "I'm sorry, but we have another plan for next weekend. I'll call you to set another date." Then do it for a time that's convenient for you.

Dear Mrs. Post: My husband and I are going on a cruise in January, and we suspect that several friends will come to see us off. Who provides the drinks? My husband says we give the party, but I think the people seeing us off should give it.

Who is right?

Bertha

Dear Bertha: Your guests may bring you liquor or they may bring something else as a bon-voyage gift. If they do bring liquor (especially champagne), by all means serve it. But in case they don't take a bottle or two along yoursleves. The steward will bring you snacks and "set-ups," but liquor is not sold until the boat sails.

Don't be foolish.

Try a Winning Combination with US
a US Payment Order Account
AND A
Triple-DW Statement Account

You win two ways . . . with the convenience of FREE Total banking. You pay your bills and get cash through US, while the money you don't need for day-to-day expenses earns 5¼%.

You receive cancelled payment orders and a monthly statement. Plus unlimited free payment orders (and all for keeping just a $200 minimum in the statement account, which is earning interest at 5¼% a year!)

Here's how it works

Take out a Payment Account with US, and a No-Passbook Triple DW Statement Account with US.

Then, you put just enough for immediate needs in your payment account—and deposit what you don't need right away in a No-Passbook Triple DW Statement Account. If you maintain a $200.00 minimum balance in your no-passbook account, payment orders are free, and there is no minimum balance requirement for your US-payment account. The money you keep in a No-Passbook Triple DW Account earns a full 5.25% day-to-day! (And there's no passbook to carry).

You can quickly transfer money from your payment account to your statement account—you can have our Automatic Monthly Transfer Option—you can get personalized payment order books at no cost—and a monthly statement covering both accounts.

Of course, either of these accounts is available separately. If you open just an US Payment Account with a $200.00 minimum balance, payment orders are absolutely free. You may open an account with as little at $100. However, if balance is less than $200, there is a monthly service charge of $1.00.

There is also a $1.00 charge for return items or stop payments.

Payment Accounts are no-passbook, non-interest bearing accounts. No overdraft privileges are allowed. There can be no payment unless sufficient funds are available on deposit. Payment Accounts are available to all customers of Ulster Savings Bank.

What You Do Is Not Who You Are

By JOANNE AND LEW KOCH
(Note: Today's column is written by Lew)

Leonard Aronson has just joined the ranks of the unemployed. Like 5.8 per cent of the population, he has become a victim of the economy. But Leonard is not behaving like a victim.

When the newspaper he worked for folded one month ago, Leonard and 277 others were out of work. "Many of those who were fired had a sense of rejection," he recalls. "Those were the people who judged themselves by what others thought of them."

But a colleague expressed what Leonard was feeling when he saw the pink slip in his pay envelope. "What the hell, the paper died. I didn't."

"Had I lost my job three years ago, I would have taken it much harder," says Leonard as he makes lunch for his 5-year-old son. "You see, my identity was tied to my job. The press card gave me an identity I was proud of. I felt bigger because I was associated with a newspaper.

"But three years ago I began seeing people who were making it in all kinds of different ways, people who didn't follow the usual patterns but who were able to make changes and get what they really wanted."

So three years ago Leonard began to invest part of his time in ventures outside the newspaper — writing and editing material that he felt was important, stories that weren't being printed in the daily papers.

"I began to have a sense of adventure," says Leonard, "and a source of satisfaction from something other than my job. And over a period of time, I realized that I was also learning, that my life wasn't going to change in some sudden burst but in a slow, evolutionary way. I was making progress."

Thus the shock of being fired, which sends most men into a state of depression, was handled with a great equanimity by a man who now had a sense of independence and worth beyond his job.

"If you let what others think about you set the standards for your own self-esteem," notes Leonard, "you are continually going up and down on an emotional roller coaster. But there's another option. Try to become independent and develop your own strong values and try to become self-determining."

There are other reasons that allow Leonard to be philosophical about his current lack of employment. His wife, Anne, is continuing her full-t ime job. He has helped with the care and rearing of their son Patrick since Pat was a baby, so he feels no degradation in doing household chores, serving Pat meals or taking him to the park.

Men seldom talk to each other about being fired. But if we would get together when we face a crisis like unemployment, we'd learn there is nothing "unmanly" about losing one's job. It happens to every working person.

Listening to people like Len Aronson, one almost feels changing jobs can have a fringe benefit. It's a chance to realize, before it's too late, that there is more to be said for each of us than can possibly fit on a company identification card.

Mothers Go Back to School

KINGSTON

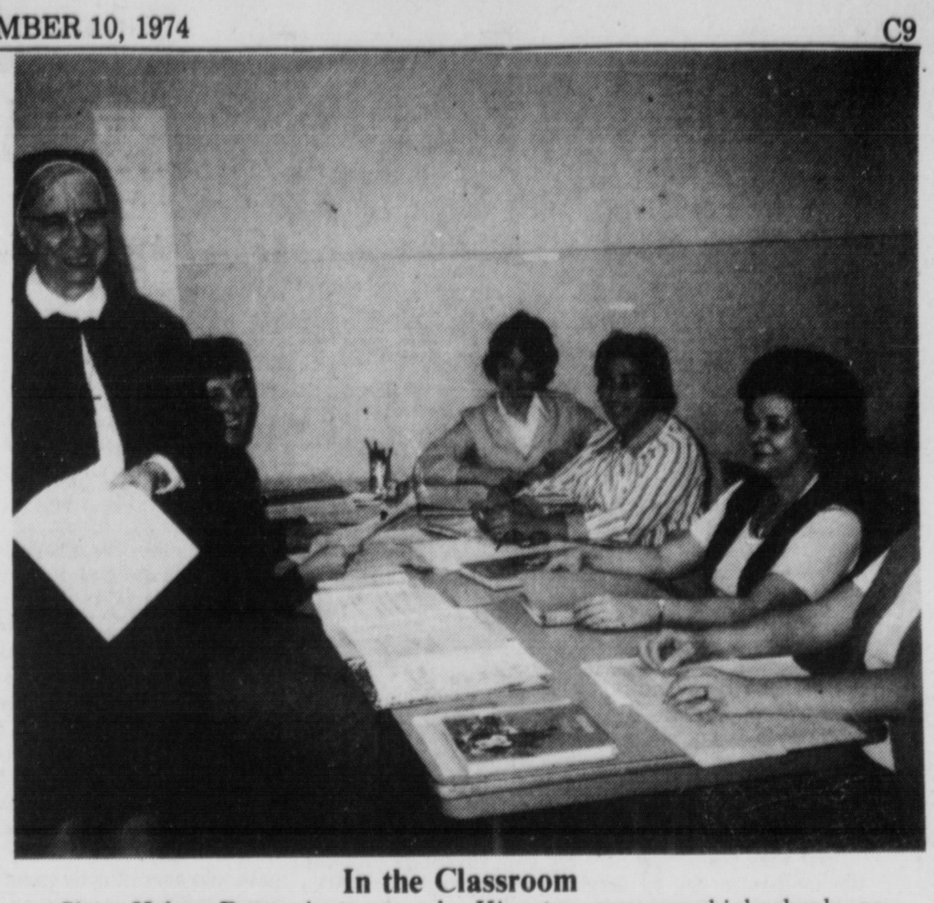
A group of volunteer mothers went back to school recently, training as teachers aides for area parochial schools.

The women were bused from the five parochial schools in and around Kingston and for one week worked under the tutelage of Sister Helena Barnes who was bused here from the archdiocesan school office for the training session.

Sister Helena instructed her 35 "pupils" on how to aid the classroom teacher in her task of instructing children.

After reviewing and brushing away the cobwebs in the basic areas of Math and Language Arts, Sister Helena offered ideas on how to motivate and work with children in the classroom and how to become teachers aides in the true sense.

Graduates received certificates from their principals and were pronounced ready to assist as teachers aides in Kingston Catholic, St. Joseph's, Immaculate Conception, St. Peter's, Rosendale, and St. Mary's of the Snow, Saugerties, Schools.



In the Classroom

Sister Helena Barnes instructs volunteer mothers in teachers aides class. Graduates will serve in five Kingston area parochial schools, assisting regular faculty members with classroom duties.

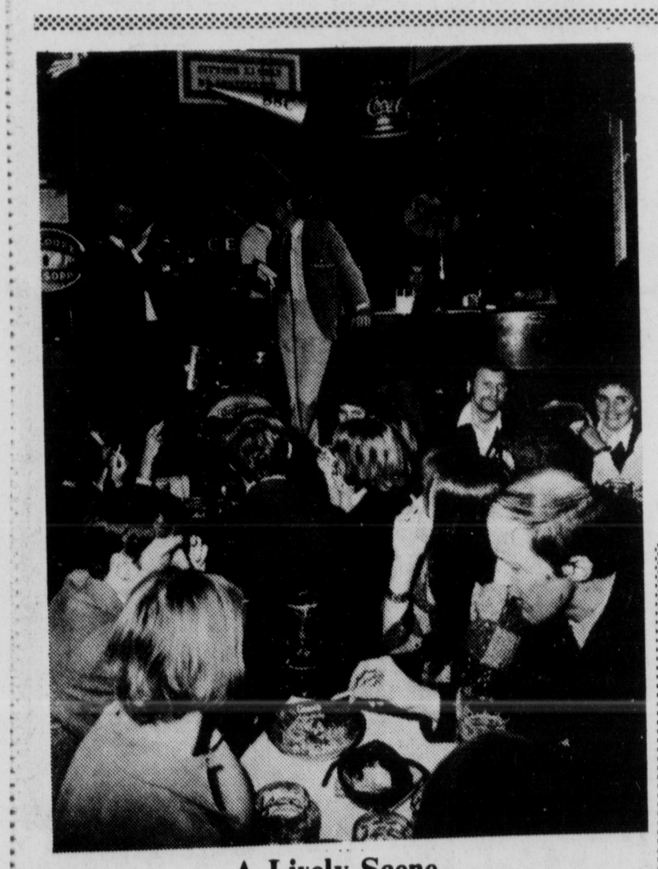
Sweden Lowers Prices



A Lively Scene

NEW YORK

One travel bargain which actually will cost you less this year than last is swinging Stockholm's one week package offering hotel, continental breakfasts and a number of free features to add to the fun of your stay in Sweden's capital.

Besides seven nights at a comfortable hotel with breakfast each morning, t he package includes free admission to a popular nightspot three nights during your stay, free rental cost for a car for one day, free admission to the popular Skansen folk park and free admission to the Vasa and Kaknas Tower, for a s little as $80 per person in a twin bedded room at Stockholm's Hotel Aston; $130 at the Hotel Reisen or $150 at the Grand Hotel. Airfare to Stockholm is extra. (Last year's Stockholm package started at $100 per person.)

In addition, the 1974-75 package offers two options: a half day city tour of Stockholm for $7 per person and dinner at three different restaurants for $35 per person.

Stockholm is a vibrant, lighthearted destination during late fall and winter when opera and ballet perfomances, festive Christmas celebrations and other events bring life to the social scene.

You also can combine Stockholm and Copenhagen in a one week's vacation package with many extras beginning at $90 per person, double, or splurge on a two week trip featuring Stockholm and three other Scandinavian capitals -- Oslo, Helsinki and Copenhagen -- starting at $209 per person, double.

Check with your local travel agent for more information on tour departure dates, accomdation choices and other package details.

Europe On a Pass

NEW YORK

American travelers who prefer not to be part of regimented tours, but desire to take advantage of low-priced group facilities and services may select Pan Am's Europe on a Pass program this fall.

The independent tour package offers budget-conscious tourists the choice of bargain rates on European hotels through Eurotelpass, unlimited rail travel on Eurailpass, and special low weekly automobile rates with Eurodrivepass.

In the "Eurotelpass" package, 162 participating hotels (including many Holiday Inns) in 138 cities offer double occupancy rooms at $11.50 per person ($16.50 for a single room). Accommodations are guaranteed and no reservations are necessary provided arrival is before 3 p.m. The rate includes continental breakfast, service charges and taxes, and private bath or shower. There is no miniumum stay, so that the individual is free to arrange his itinerary with total flexibility. Eurotelpass coupons are purchased before leaving, similar to traveler's checks. Any unused coupons will be refunded in full upon return home.

"Eurailpass" offers unlimited first class rail travel for 21 days or more through 13 European countries. European trains are clean, comfortable and generally operate directly into the heart of the city, saving travel time and money.

"Eurodrivepass," offers special low weekly rates including unlimited mileage on various car rentals in 14 countries. Gasoline supplies are now plentiful and European highways are excellent.

For full details about Pan Am's "European on a Pass," contact your travel agent.

Acrylics Ease Face Lifts

NEW YORK

Do-it-yourself bath tub installation is easier than ever before, according to a leading plumbing fixtures designer, thanks to new, lightweight materials and the simplified installation techniques they allow.

"Durable fiberglass-bonded acrylics have eliminated much of the tedium and all of the heavy lifting and pushing once involved in bath cove renovation," said Stan Korol, designer for Borg-Warner Plumbing products.

He explained that acrylic tubs weigh approximately 70 pounds while traditional cast-iron tubs can weigh 300 pounds or more. One man can easily position an acrylic tub -- a nearly impossible feat with a cast-iron unit.

"But easy positioning isn't the only advantage provided the do-it-yourselfer by acrylics," Korol explained. "The nature of the material itself allows the molding of integral installation, comfort and safety features."

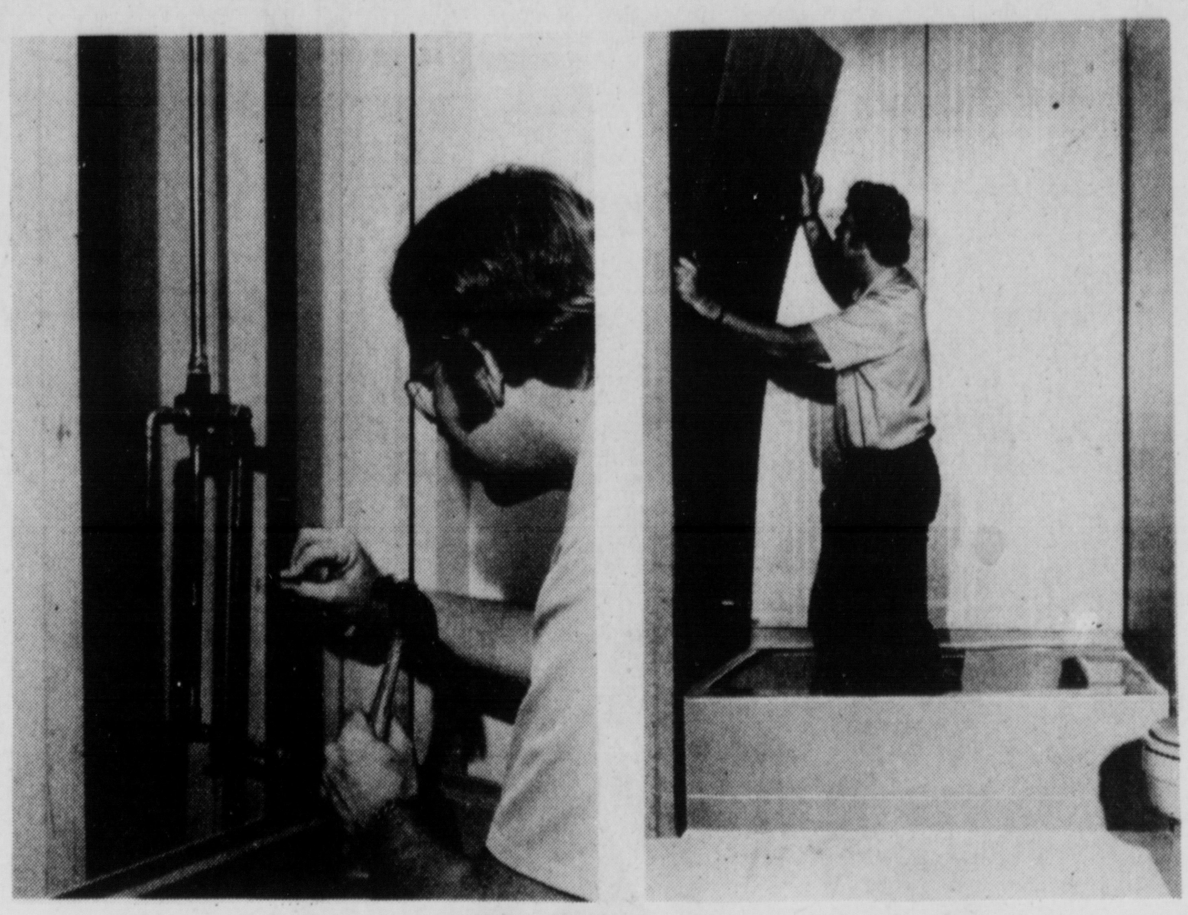
"The Borg-Warner Comfortub unit, for example, incorporates a unique tiling flange which allows subsequent installation of ceramic tile or finished wall surface material without the need for grouting along the tub edge."

Acrylic tubs offer other advantages to bathroom renovators. Since these bath tubs are secured directly to bare wall studs, they have less tendency to shift over the years. And, Korol adds, the drilling and countersinking necessary is much easier when working with acrylics.

"Once installed, acrylic bath tubs can offer a variety of features including integral safety grab bars, ample ledge space and -- in the case of the Comfortub unit -- a convenient seat and contoured back rest," he said.

Three major New York building materials chains -- Wickes', Agway and Grossman's -- confirm an increased incidence of do-it-yourself bath cove remodeling since the advent of acrylic units. They all agree that the new acrylic bath tubs are distinctly easier to install and have eliminated many long-time undertaking such a job alone.

Now, Korol says, almost anyone can complete a bath cove renovation exercising normal care, and attention to detail. Acrylics have done for the bath what water-based paints, wood paneling and other time worksavers did for dry room remodeling.



A New Technique

One-eighth-inch shims are installed along the outer edge of all wall studs (left), extending downward until they touch the acrylic tiling flange. This allows the installation of half-inch sheetrock panels overlapping the flange to rest flush with the inner walls and ledges. Finished wall surface material is then positioned and secured (right) so that the extrusion strip along the bottom edge is three-eighths of an inch below where the sheetrock and Comfortub unit meet.

Water Tight

The complete installation proves as attractive as it is practical.

Tree Talk

STAMFORD, CONN.

Leaves should be raked up once a week during the early fall. They can be returned to the soil in rich humus for your garden by making a compost pile, says Robert A. Bartlett Jr., president of the F.A. Bartlett Tree Expert Co.

Leaf mulch contains proteins that turn into nitrates as well as trace elements which trees and plants require in minute quantities Mulches help conserve soil moisture and aid in preventing root kill by winter cold and root cooking during periods of summer heat and drought.

If you have oak trees, make two compost piles. On one put only the oak leaves. These are acid, the compost from which can be used on azalea, laurel, rhododendron, andromeda and evergreens. Leaves from other trees should be placed on the second compost pile. Oil contaminated leaves should never be put on a compost.

A leaf compost should be built in layers. Over each layer sprinkle a little fertilizer, lime and soil. Water down with a hose, then occasionally turn over the whole heap.

Do not burn leaves, in most cities, it is forbidden as it contributes to air pollution.

Leaves should not be allowed to accumulate on your lawn. Though, a source of nutrients from the compost pile, if left on lawns they become wet and form a tight mat which can smother the grass roots.

Yard, Garden Notes

FIRST FLOWERS OF SPRING

I'm an impatient guy. Just like any other gardener I can't wait until the first tomato ripens; the first pickings of beans; or the first flower in spring. These are always the best, even though they may be smaller than those coming later on.

This is especially true with the first flowers of spring. These would come from what we call the 'little' bulbs. Some of these little gems will pop up through the last snows of winter. But even a little speck of flower color then is worth all the year's gardening efforts.

Oddly enough, this first color of spring is much easier to come by than the first tomato or bean. Also this first color of spring will keep coming back year after year with no effort on my part. You plant these little bulbs once and they take care of themselves after that.

My favorite among the little or minor bulbs is the crocus. I have several plantings that I put in more than ten years ago and every spring they come up with regularity.

The bulbs are inexpensive and easy to plant. All you do is drop them in a hole 4 inches deep (pointed end up) and cover. Nature does the rest.

Perhaps the most fun with crocus comes from where you plant them. I have mine in front of the shrub border in the corner of the yard that I can see from the front door. They are just on the edge of the lawn. Another group is planted under a dogwood tree.

One of the favorite spots for planting crocus is in the lawn. Some people advise against this because this bulb — like all spring flowering bulbs — must create a new bulb in spring to flower again the next season. To create a new bulb the plant must have foliage. When crocus are planted in the lawn, the first mowing will remove the foliage and prevent a new bulb from forming.

So all you have to do is to put some stakes in the area where the crocus are planted to show you where they are and refrain from mowing these areas until the foliage has completely died down. This is what I do in the corner where the crocus are in front of the shrubs. It looks a little ragged and "unkempt' for a few weeks in spring, but the show of flowers is worth it.

Another of the little bulbs that I like is the muscari or grape hyacinth. This comes a little later in the spring but is a delight. It has a blue flower that looks like a miniature bunch of grapes. This goes well with the yellow daffodils that bloom at the same time.

One thing about the grape hyacinth that makes it so wonderful is that unlike many other bulb flowers it will seed itself every year so the planting gets bigger and thicker. Seeds formed on the flowers and it drops to the ground to sprout and grow a new plant. One planting that I started years back with a dozen bulbs this spring looked like a blue carpet with hundreds of flowers.

Now that summer is over send for my FREE Fall Seasonal Report for 1974 filled with tips, hints and suggestions on fall and early winter gardening. Write to me at the address below.

Again, all they demand from me is that I allow the foliage to stay on the plant to die down naturally.

There are other early-bird bulb flowers with some quite romantic names such as glory-of-the-snow and the snowdrop. As you can guess from the names, these appear as early as any flower in the garden, sometimes along with the last snows of winter. They are mostly white, but some kinds have other markings such as blue, yellow and green.

Little bulbs are among the unusual things in the garden, because they come into bloom so early. Since they are little flowers, they should be planted where they can be seen. Tuck them in here and there near a well-used doorway or walk. If you plant them in the back of the yard you may miss the entire display unless you go back there regularly. The flowers are little, but give big enjoyment.

Dear Bill:

Along the back fence in our yard is a poison ivy vine. Last year I tried pulling it out but got a rash. I would like to put a weed killer on it but my son-in-law says this might harm some neighbor's plants and his vegetables. Is there anything I can do?

Dorothy Metz
Staten Island, N.Y.

Dear Dorothy:

Poison Ivy isn't easy to kill. If it has been there for some time it is a tough, old vine. I can also understand how your son-in-law feels. But, here's what you can do: Mix up the weed killer -- liquid kind -- and put it in a two-pound coffee can. Then, dip the ends of the vine into the can of killer. Then the weed killer only gets on the vine and no place else. You can also use a spot weed killer -- like Raid Spot Weed Killer. This only goes on the plant and no place else.

Planters ... a Delight

CHICAGO (NFS) -- Indoor gardening is hardly a brand new notion. Long before central heating became common, American housewives delighted in nursing a few favorite plants through the winter. Today, plants and planters have become more popular than ever before, according to Mary Ann Wills, interior design consultant for a leading manufacturer of decorative accessories.

"The possibilities for using greenery to enhance various living areas seem to be almost unlimited," she observed. "If you'd like to a change of pace from the usual locations such as window sills, coffee and end tables, book shelves, or mantelpiece, for example, just consider where you might use wall planters to advantage."

Hang-up planters are now available in a range of sizes, shapes, and styles to blend with practically any decorating scheme. Several intriguing new designs recently introduced by Burwood Products Company, Traverse City, Mich., make the choice even wider.

Some of these new planters are attuned to the Country Rustic look that is gaining momentum as the nation's 200th birthday approaches. One example is the Barnwood Slat planter, which duplicates the texture of knotty weathered timbers. There's a deep-dimensional harvest bouquet in the center while artificial philodendron spills out of a full-width trough, across the base. Reproduced from a hand-carved original design, the new simulated wood wall planter is finished in mellow antique pine tone.

Equally at home with Early American, traditional, provincial, and even Mediterranean decor, depending on the finsih you select, is a group of new Colonial Lantern planters in a choice of metal gold, black or white.

One version of this new, large-scale design isn't a wall planter in the usual sense, since it hangs free on a brass-plated chain. A four-foot length of chain, plus hardware needed to create a swag effect, comes with the 9 by 25-inch high lantern.

"While some Burwood planters incorporate water proof containers that can hold live plants and soil, most are intended primarily for decorative effect," Ms. Wills pointed out. "In both cases, however, a supply of realistic English ivy or Philodendron leaves is included. So every planter arrives ready to hang, without an assist from the florist."

The Family Cape House

By JACK MCELENEY

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Cape style home is realizing a new potential due to today's housing demands. Today's feature, called "The Amity," makes profitable use of the second level. Generally in a house of this size and form, the second floor is finished off as two-bedroom or one-bedroom and storage space, but "The Amity" shows an additional floor value. The first floor is planned as a complete two-bedroom home, and the second floor as an efficient one-bedroom apartment. The value is readily visible and the cost of carrying out the plan will more than be offset by the service rendered.

This type of planning is ideally suited to the elderly parents who would find the first floor completely adequate to fit their needs or to a young married couple who would need the extra income to finance the house. In the case of children or relatives, it would provide the closeness desired by such family ties without the intimacy that comes--often to a disadvantage with trying to accommodate two families in one unit. There has been no skimping or elimination of necessary functional qualities in creating this two-family home.

The first floor places two bedrooms on the right side, front and rear, with a handily placed full bathroom. The kitchen has not only plenty of working area, but also a spade at the center wall to addommodate a small breakfast table. The extra large living room is well appointed with an expansive bow window, flush wall fireplace and wide opening to the rear dining room with sliding glass doors that open upon a pleasant rear terrace.

The second floor apartment provides a better than average layout, consisting of a large rear kitchen, separate dining area, large living room, full bath and an extra large bedroom.

The exterior finish is wood shingles all around (painted or natural) except the front living room wall where inverted board and batten is used around the bow window. "The Amity" design contains 1,260 square feet of living space on the first floor and 756 on the second floor. The size of the house is 45 feet by 29 feet.

Complete building plans of "The Amity" design are available at the moderate cost of $15 for the first set and $12 for additional sets, plus 50 cents to cover cost of postage and handling, by writing to the Associated Blueprint Co., 595 Plainfield St., Providence, R.I. 02909. Booklets containing past newspaper features are available, consisting of Split Levels, Capes, Colonials, Two-bedroom Ranches, Three-bedroom Ranches and Raised Ranches for 50 cents each and a brand new Popular Home Booklet for 75 cents.

A Country Feeling Decor

CHICAGO (NPS) -- How ya gonna keep 'em away from the farm seems to be the theme behind the current craze for the country feeling in home decor.

A good example is a giant deep-dimensional wall plaque depicting an old—fashioned barn. The detailing is complete with windmill and cupola, hayrack, milk cans, chickens and geese, and even an ancient Tin Lizzie blocked up in the tractor shed.

To go along with the barn plaque are four Country Rustic oval plaques, all reproduced from hand-carved original designs. They show a country daybreak, churning day, back porch scene, and harvest time.

All are by Burwood Products Company, Traverse City, Mich., and are available in furniture, department and gift stores.

THE DUKE: He also left 20 songs

Gossip Column

By ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN

Q: Did Duke Ellington die rich or poor? H.E., San Francisco, Calif.

A: The Duke lived it up pretty good but he left a tidy amount behind. His songs will be around for a long time. Incidentally, the Duke left quite a legacy — 20 new songs for a Broadway show which will have lyrics by Herb Martin and will be called "Saturday Laughter."

Q: What's with Ryan O'Neil and romance these days? H.T., N.Y., N.Y.

A: Ryan keeps following in Elliott Gould's steps. He woos all the girls Elliott leaves behind. Just look at the record. Ryan had a love affair with Barbra Streisand after she and Elliott divorced. He also took Bianca Jagger and Marisa Berenson around in Europe in the wake of Elliot. Now Ryan has taken up with Jenny Bogart, who was Elliott's last wife. Ryan thinks Elliott has good taste!

PUTTING ON THE RITZ: The famous Ritz Hotel in Paris has always kept its standards so chic that it didn't accept tourist groups, credit cards, nor would it cash personal checks for persons unknown to the Ritz. Now the hotel has changed. It's accepted its first organized group tour and today you can pay at the bar with your credit cards or a personal check.

Q: Is that Jewish organization that hunts down Nazi criminals still in operation? And also, who are the most wanted Nazis today? -- H.T., N.Y.

A: The Documentation Center is still in operation and Simon Wiesenthal continues to search for German war criminals. Two men head the most wanted list: Joseph Mengele, chief Doctor at Auschwitz who is 63 and living in Argentina. Also Walter Rauff, 68, head of the exhaust gas execution squad who is living in Chile. Wiesenthal says that the rumors about Martin Bormann still being alive are untrue and that he killed himself in Berlin in 1945.

Q: What has Germany's Willy Brandt been doing since he left office because of that Commie spy in his administration? -- B.W., Baltimore, Md.

A: The resigned Chancellor of West Germany has been in his Norwegian retreat writing his memoirs under the title, "Mut Zur Vernunft." Roughly translated, this means "The Guts to Have Common Sense."

QUESTION YOU NEVER ASKED: Once you've been loved by Prince Aly Khan, the Earl of Warwick, J. Paul Getty, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Maurice Chevalier and the 11th Duke of Argyll, what else is there? Well, for Margaret, the onetime Duchess of Argyll, there is a book in it. English bluebloods and a few common variety Limeys are said to be quaking in their boots that the beautiful Duchess has decided to tell all.

Ills May Be Linked

By By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB -- I have been subject to spastic colitis for some time. My new ailment is diverticulosis. What is the difference between the two ailments? What are the dangers that may occur suddebkt suddenly or otherwise? What steps should be taken to balance the two ailments? Who should I see and what medicine should I take? What are the chances for recovery?

DEAR READER -- Most specialists in gastroenterology today believe the two conditions may be related. Diverticulosis means small pockets on the colon. These pockets are caused by a rupture of the wall of the colon, the doctor said like an innertube that has a weakened wall.

The sac-like pocket centrally located in the area is a diverticulum. It is thought that diverticula develop because of increased pressure inside the colon. The pressure is caused by poor bowel function such as spastic colon.

There may be other factors invoved, such as an inherently weak spot in the colon to begin with, before the pressure problems occur. The diverticulum is something like an appendix. It can be inflamed or rupture giving the signs of appendicitis. It can have a small leak causing pain and discomfort . It can bleed, causing a sudden, serious loss of blood.

Often the diverticula may go unnoticed. The problem is quite common in people over 40. By age 50 about half of the population has diverticulosis, so you are not unique. Most of them have no symptoms.

Some people have abdominal pain and cramping that is confused with diverticulosis. These pains are often the underlying problem of spastic colon.

Treatment of both of these problems requires development of proper bowel habits. You need quite a bit of help to do it right. For information you can write to me at P. O. Box 11551, Radio City Station, New York, York, N.Y. 10019 and ask for the two booklets, Spastic Colon and Dvert culosis. Send 50 cents for each booklet to cover costs.

There has been a change in thinking about diets for these problems. Bland diets used ot to be recommended under the impression that they would soothe the troubled bowe. It is often necessary to eat a soft or liquid diet or sometimes nothing during an acute problem, like an acute inflammation or certainly during a hemorrrhage. Otherwise, when the acute problem is under control the practice today is to provide food with lots of bulk.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

Bridge

By Oswald and James Jacoby

South's four-spade bid was based on the mistaken theory that West had been fooling when he bid one notrump. South knew better about the matter when West doubled, but it was too late then to do anything. All he could do was hope for the best and give the cards a chance to help him.

He ducked the first spade; won the second one and saw one faint glimmer of hope. In any event some hope is better than none. He led a club to dummy's ace, ruffed a club and was happy to see West play the king. He went back to dummy with the king of hearts, ruffed another club while poor West had to discard his queen.

Now all South had to do was to lead his last trump and show West his hand.

Dummy was left with two good clubs plus one heart, two diamonds and the last trump. West could take his ace of diamonds right then and there and concede the rest of the tricks. He could lead a low diamond and score his ace in the cool of the evening or he could lead a heart up to South's ace-jack. Whatever he did the only trick he could score would be that ace of diamonds.

This year you'll discover new ways to cut yourself free from situations and conditions that have limited your progress in the past. A bolder course will be found.

A $225,000 Dollar

By Mort Reed

The Idler specimen of the famous 1804 silver dollar changed ownership three times in two weeks. According to a story out of "Coin World," the final price of $225,000 is the largest ever paid for a U.S. silver or copper coin.

The famous Idler specimen, which sold for $150,000 a year ago, sold twice in quick succession in the latter days of September and early October at prices ranging from $200,000 to $225,000.

Bowers and Ruddy Galleries sold the coin first to Blackburn and Blackburn, a Washington firm for the advertised price of $200,000. Within the week it was sold to Continental Coin Galleries of Minneapolis for a record price of $225,000.

The Idler specimen is generally known to be th e finest of the 1804 dollars with a noticeable proof surface in the field and extremely sharp edges on the lettering.

The coin was originally acquired from the United States Mint by William Idler in the 1850s. It was later sold by his son-in-law in 1908 and subsequently passed to the celebrated William C. Atwater collection

In 1946 it was placed on the market by Max Mehl and later became the property of Edwin Hydeman. Twice between 1961 and 1972 the 1804 dollar changed hands again. In 1973 the Bowers and Rudy galleries paid $150,000 for the coin purchased from a private owner in Atlanta.

The 1804 dollar, while not the rarest issue of the U.S. Mint, is the word's most famous "necessity" coin. Officials of the Mint in 1830, when preparing a se of U.S. coins for presentation to certain forign dignitaries (the King of Siam and the Imam of Muscat), were faced with the absence of a dollar-size coin in the set, since none had been struck since 1803.

To fill out the set, they empoyed the dies of the 1803 type but stamped the date 1804 as the date. The dies were not destroyed until 1850.

In this period, Mint officials began to build a national numismatic collection, but with a shortage of earlier specimens it was necessary to produce at least a half-dozen 1804 dollars including the Idler specimen.

In all, a total of 15 1804 dollars are known to exist. Five are permanently impounded in museum collections. Only one other has appeared on the market since 1963.

We recommend reading "The Fantastic 1804 Dollar" by Eric P. Newman and Kenneth Bressett, published by Whitman Publishing Company, Racine, Wis.

Sawyers Marching to Fame and Glory

By JON POWERS

SAUGERTIES

The Sawyer Marching Band -- already recognized as one of the premier high school marching units in the Northeast -- will add another notch to its growing reputation when the 125-member ensemble performs at Disney World in Florida next week.

Plans for the eight-day Southern swing began last March. Since then, band members have sold what seems like tons of candy, and have conducted numerous fund raising events, to collect part of the money necessary to pay for transportation and lodging. The band's Booster Club, an aggregation of active and enusiaaastic parents and community volunteers raised the difference.

Those long days of hard work, practice and anticpation will finally reach fulfillment Tuesday, when the 125 students and 20 chaperones pile into a fleet of buses at Saugerties High School and settle for a 28-hour non-stop excursion down the Eastern seabord.

The caravan is scheduled to arrive at Orlando, Florida at 6:30 Wednesday evening. After a night at the Orlando Sheraton Inn, the talented troupe of musicians, twirlers and color guard bearers will take its place as the featured band in the colorful and traditional Magic Kingdom Parade.

The parade -- replete with all the famous Disn chaaaracters -- will wind through the world famous fairytale kingdom, past the towering spires and glittering monuments that have made the handcrafted fantasyland a world-wide attraction.

At Cinderella's Castle, the band will perform a half-hour concert before rejoining the parade to its conclusion.

The next day, the band will present a concert at nearby Sea World. They'll then return to Disney World for a day of sight-seeing and related activities.

The band members will remain in Orlando through Friday, using most of that time to take in the sights and special attractions of Disney World. For the next two days, the group will visit many of the popular sightseeing and related activities.

The band members will remain in Orlando through Friday, using most of that time to take in the sights and special attractions of Disney World. For the next two days, the group will visit many of the popular sight-seeing attractions in Florida, including Cyprus Gardens and the beach at St. Petersburg. The travelers will return to Saugerties on Tuesday, Nov. 19.

The Sawyer Marching Band certainly isn't unaccostumed to travel. Last year, the band marched in the Winter Carnival Parade at Quebec City, Canada; the year before at the National Tobacco Festival in Richmond, Va.

But this year's trip holds a somewhat different meaning than those of the past. While the band will certainly put its best foot forward its Southern hosts, and is sure to attract new friends and followers with it contagious blend of enthusiasm and musical wizardry, next week's trip will serve more as a well-earned vacation for the hardworking teenagers who have practiced long hours every day to achieve literally an international reputation.

Beyond that, the performance at Disney World is another feather in the cap of the young man who has almost singlehandedly transformed the Sawyer Marching Band -- and the entire musical program at Saugerties High School -- from a floundering organization that numbered less than 20 four years ago to the popular precision marching unit that today boasts accolades from throughout the region.

Director David Keehn, a member of the Hudson Valley Philharmonic and an accomplished French Horn player, selected all of the musical numbers that the band will perform in Florida, including several arrangements of his own created especially for the occasion. But he emphasizes that music is just one aspect of the upcoming trip.

"I think that only a fraction of what I teach is music," Keehn told The Freeman, "planning this trip has given kids valuable business experience. They've done just about everything themselves, from raising most of the money to handling the finances and planning the itinerary. I'm sure that the emotions will be running quite high during the parade and that there will be a great deal of pride in performing well, but even more important is the experience they've gained working together as part of an organization."

Icicles and Bicycles -- Part Two

As we wrote last week, it is getting to be the time of year when bikes by the hundreds are put into storage for the winter. It is also the time when bikes by the hundred turn into rusted wrecks by springtime, because too little care was taken in storing the bike for the winter. Most bike maintainence shops can help the biker prepare the machine for a period of inactivity. There is also much that the owner can do him or herself. With exams, holiday shopping, and homework this may seem like a strange time to be concerned with a bike, but in spring, you'll be awfully glad that the bike is ready to ride out of the garage, instead of ready to ride into the junkyard.

On a warm, sunny day you can work on the bike outside. This eliminates danger from fumes in a closed space, such as a garage, and gives you more light with which to work. The two biggest enemies of stored bikes are dirt and rust. It is all-too-easy to forget that anything that is wrong with the bike will not mysteriously repair itself during the winter, and will possibly get worse. If your gears don't mesh or your chain slips off, Santa isn't going to stop off in your garage and repair them. All that could happen is that during the winter you might forget that the bike has its failings, and take a nasty fall in the springtime. If your bike has a mechanical problem, get it fixed now, during the slack time at bike shops, not in spring when the big bike-buying binge goes on.

Rust on a bike is like cancer. It spreads, and it consumes the surfaces it spreads over. Before you can store your bike, you must remove all rust. Dirt also damages a bike, and more than just the finish. Dirt mixed with the oil and grease that (we hope) lubricate your bike, forms tar-like deposits that not only make the operation of the bike harder, but which can acutally erode the bike parts.

Your first step, obviously, is to wash your bike down. All of it. Pedals, chain, mudguards, under the seat. Make sure it is rinsed and dried. On a 10-speed, this is all rather simple. On a more substantial bike, you may get some surprises. One girl found a dead mouse wedge between her chain and her chainguard, and it is a rare cyclist who won't find that the underside of his fenders and chainguard have turned orange, or are encrusted with tar-like deposits of dirt and oil. If there is a problem getting the area clean, get the proper wrenches and screwdriver, and dismantle that part of the bike.

If there is a problem getting the area clean, get the proper wrenches and screwdriver, and dismantle that part of the bike.

Rust on non-painted surfaces may be removed with naval jelly, and great care. Read the instructions twice. The stuff could destroy in minutes any rubber or paint it touches and the fumes are toxix, so don't just splash it around with abandon.

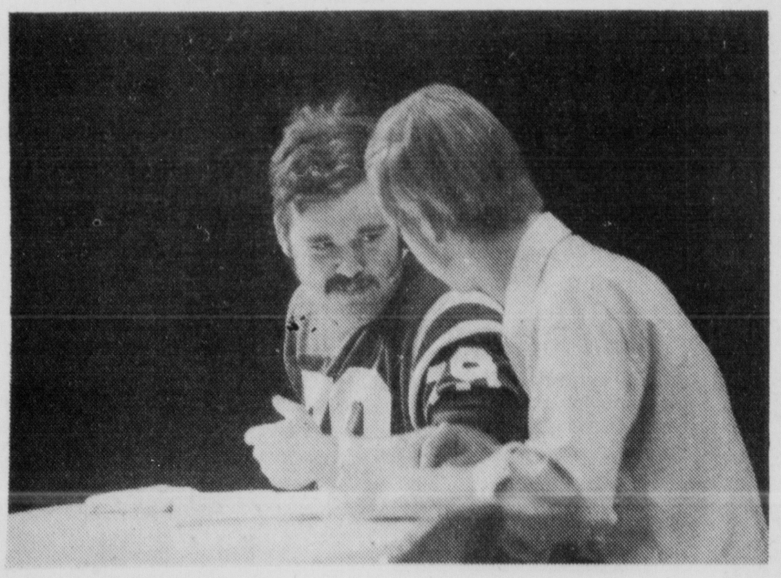
Another good rust remover is fine steel wool and elbow grease. This may be used safely on areas such as the spokes and rims of the wheels, where naval jelly could rot the inner tubes. Make sure that all rust is removed, whether it shows or not -- rust on the underside of a shiny chrome fender can eat straight through the fender in time.

Now is the time to touch up any chips out of the bike's paint. Those little bottles of model enamel may contain enough -- for larger areas try the rust-retardant paints.

After the paint is dry, wax the bike. The whole bike. Using auto wax as directed on the can, apply a heavy coat to the frame of the bike, and to the chrome trim, the rims and even the spokes, particularly the spoke nipples. Don't worry if the wax looks streaky -- the purpose it serves isn't to shine the bike, but to provide a shield against moisture in the winter air.

Lubricate the bike well -- you can wipe off the excess in spring. Grease the chain. Repack the bearings, or get a bike mechanic to do it. Oil any area where metal rubs on metal in the operation of the bike -- the hubs of the wheels and the sprocket for instance. Many waxes can be applied to the seat of the bike, too.

Rondout Seniors On Stage



The Play's The Thing

Alton Stewart (L) and Mark Wikane as Grandpa and Paul go over scene from comedy classic You Can't Take It With You. Rondout Valley High School senior class will present the play Thursday, Friday and Saturday . A double cast has been rehearsing for th production during th past few weeks.

KYSERIKE

It is Senior Play time again at Rondout Valley High School. On the evenings of Nov. 14, 15, and 16, the Class of 1975 will present the celebrated comedy, You Can't Take It With You, in the high school auditorium. Mrs. Marion Eckert is the director.

The role of Penny Sycamore is skillfully handled by Margaret Doyne and Lilian Paddilla; her husband, Paul (Mark Wikane, Mike Meehan) is always working closely with Mr. DePinna (Louis Padilla, Tom Hayes). The part of Grandpa is taken by Alton! Stewart and Mike Sommer. Essie, the ballerina, is played by Jennifer Barthel and Gigi Rogers, and her husband, Ed, by Jeff Purcell and Ted Nadratowski. Alice is portrayed by Edie Brockbank and Jane Derman, and her lover, Tony, by Gian Barrecchia and Matty Carlsen. Tony's parents, the Kirbys, are played by Wendy Friedman and Sam Olmstead in one cast, and by Marianne Mulligan and Fred Zorn in the other.

Tickets may be obtained at the door or from members of the senior class.

Celebrating The Rural Environment

On a steamy day in July of 1825 workers bent to the task of beginning construction on the Delaware and Hudson Canal. Planned as an essentially one-way route to transport a single commodity — anthracite coal — from the great coal fields in northeastern Pennsylvania to New York and the seaboard by way of the Hudson River through Rondout, it opened in 1829. Midway through the building of its 108 locks, Old Lock No. 21 was finished between Alligerville and High Falls in 1827.

During the canal's heyday, Lock No. 21 was a busy place. Millions of tons of coal passed through its gates on heavily loaded boats.

Profitable was the canal and prosperous, as a result, were the areas of Ulster County it touched in the course of its business. But, in time, competition for an expanding railway network rendered the canal obsolete with increasing rapidity. It fell into decline; operations were ceased, and abandonment was total by 1898.

Over the long years since, Old Lock No. 21 between Alligerville and High Falls remained standing and remained unique among D.&H. artifacts. But, in recent years, it has been in danger of collapsing without preservation — and, unfortunately, it was being used as a dumping area. A piece of America's industrial heritage seemed destined for destruction — to be lost forever through environmental decay, neglect and apathy.

If Dorothy Spar and her husband, both educators, had not chosen to make the locktender's cottage at Old Lock No. 21 their home, the lock itself might have fallen victim to the wide belief that "Monuments just don't pay."

And if she had not applied to the "Unique New York" program aimed at halting environmental decay, enhancing the environment, and preserving and celebrating both the urban and rural past, the demise of Lock No. 21 might well have been final. But Dorothy Spar, a member of the D.&H. Canal Society, knew "her" lock was unique in being the sole remaining "Old Lock."

She asked "Unique New York," a project of The Preservation League of New York State Council on the Arts, for help. Totally in sympathy with her aim to preserve the lock, they awarded her a grant of $1,500.

With the funds, the debris was removed from inside the lock by cranes. Now cleaned out through modern mechanical magic, the 1827 landmark has been partially preserved for a new generation of history lovers.

But to return it entirely to its original charm, community help is still needed. The $1,500 grant went entirely toward its cleaning. It must be shored up manually and, hopefully, money will be raised to fence it in and provide a footpath.

Abandoned for more than half a century, the lock is well on its way toward preservation. The magic formula to retain forever this small spot where the American we know began is community action. If you can help with money, ideas or work, contact Dorothy Spar, Berme Road, High Falls.

90 Miles Off Broadway Sets its Fall Show

Three directors and three casts are currently in rehearsal for Ninety Miles Off Broadway's fall production of Neil Simon's comedy, Plaza Suite. The 1968 Broadway production of Simon's pointed look at three different couples' stay in a suite in Manhattan's Plaza Hotel was directed by Mike Nichols and starred George C. Scott and Maureen Stapleton in all three segments. However, since the acts are unrelated except in set location, Ninety Miles members elected to have completely separate casts and directors.

Bill Sill is directing Act I which concerns the not-too-happy anniversary visit to the Plaza by a middle-aged couple who cannot agree on how many years they have been married or which suite they stayed in on their honeymoon. Sill should be a familiar name to Kingston residents through his acting and directing work with the Coach House Players as well as his appearance on the Showboat.

Act II, "The Visitor from Mamaronack," features Sill in an acting role. He will be directed by Pamela Geuss and will be portraying the swaggering, self-confident movie director who seduces his old high school girlfriend. Pam Geuss has directed Woody Allen's Don't Drink the Water for Ninety Miles and was most recently seen as Nellie Ferbush in South Pacific.

The third act, a riotous pre-wedding fiasco in which the bride-to-be refuses to come out of the bathroom despite pleas and threats from her distraught parents, is being directed by Barbara Mainetti. She has worked with County Players in Poughkeepsie on many of their productions and is currently on the board of directors for the Children's Theatre in Poughkeepsie. Mrs. Mainetti is directing for Ninety Miles for the first time.

The third act of Plaza Suite was entered in the Sixth Annual Regional Theatre Festival of the New York State Theatre Association, which was recently held at Dutchess Community College Theatre. Performance dates for the play will be Nov. 14, 15, and 16, at 8:30 p.m., at New Paltz High School. Tickets may be bought in advance by calling the Ninety Miles box office, 255-0893, at $2 for adults, and $1.50 for children.

Frank Speiser portrays Bruce with telling effect.

Lenny Bruce Lives On!

Beautifully Reincarnated By Frank Speiser

By TOBIE GEERTSEMA
Tempo Editor

Only devout believers in reincarnation might expect to come upon Lenny Bruce today, inasmuch as the nightclub comedian died nine years ago. And, even those believers — in expectation of his return — would be more inclined to seek him out in Greenwich Village's Cafe Au-Go-Go than in the foothills of the Catskills.

Still, it was not in a Manhattan bistro nursing a double scotch on the rocks that we encountered the "essential Bruce" this week — but in Woodstock's Roas's Cantina sipping a cup of tea. For in actor Frank Speiser, star of a one-man show called "The World of Lenny Bruce," the prince of scatology lives on.

Speiser, who now lives in Zena, is about to bring his triumphal show to the Tinker Street Cinema in the art colony on the nights of Nov. 15, 16 and 17 for 11 p.m. stagings Friday and Saturday, and a 10 p.m. performance Sunday.

Since putting "The World of Lenny Bruce" together 3½ years ago, Speiser has been doing it steadily for two years, taking it into clubs all over the country, onto more than 100 college campuses, and settling into the Players Theatre on New York's MacDougal Street for five months. Everywhere it has been hailed as an explosive theatrical experience — and Speiser has been critically applauded as a convincing Bruce, who delivers his material "better than" Bruce ever did.

Speiser, who was born in Cuba and grew up in Brooklyn, caught Bruce's act several times in Greenwich Village when he was 18 and more into jazz than rock and roll. After Bruce's pathetic death from a drug overdose, the author-actor wrote his show in two sections, doing bits of Bruce's routines learned from the comedian's albums, and enacting pieces of Bruce's testimony in his own defense.

Critics have pointed out that the rigors of his one-man performance would have to drain Speiser considerably. And he is well aware of the pressures of solo acting in comparision to ensemble performance.

In a play peopled with other actors, he says, "You have the strength of the play and the other characters to interact with. There isn't much pressure involved and not as much dependence on the audience as in a one-man show.

"I have to deal with the audience constantly," admits Speiser. "The show is very Brechtian in approach — a series of blackouts involving different scenes and episodes in Lenny's life — and there's no place to hide."

To illuminate the import of Bruce's unhappy career, Speiser does not rely on any physical resemblance to the comedian. An extremely youthful looking 31, he has been wearing a beard to give him an older look in the show's final scenes, when the real Bruce was 40. "Most people don't think of Lenny Bruce that way," says Speiser, "although he was bearded at the end. People do say I resemble him physically without the beard, perhaps because the hair is much the same."

The obvious question to ask any man so deeply immersed in the Bruce psyche surfaced early in the conversation. "Did he believe Lenny Bruce, considered by many to have been a martyr in the cause of free speech, had been a man 'before his time' where sex and scatology were concerned?"

Far from it, according to Speiser, who says, "I think Lenny Bruce was RIGHT ON TIME, not ahead of his time. I believe in what Gertrude Stein said, 'Somebody's ahead of their time when they can comment on that time as they exist in it.' Bruce was aware and highly sensitive . . . right on top of the pulse of what was happening around him. He saw the very obvious hypocricies that existed and chose to expose them."

In an era when "Deep Throat" and "The Devil in Miss Jones" can play uninterrupted on a double bill, it is difficult to justify the vilification of Lenny Bruce for his use of words describing body functions and parts. And, as Speiser portrays Bruce, his intent is to show Lenny as largely misunderstood.

The first half of the show is genuinely funny, as Speiser romps jovially through Lenny's routines. In the second half, Speiser draws a strong portrait of Bruce standing before the unsympathetic bar of justice — and succeeds in proving that Lenny's fight for freedom of self-expression was for much more than the right to make a "Deep Throat" or "The Devil in Miss Jones."

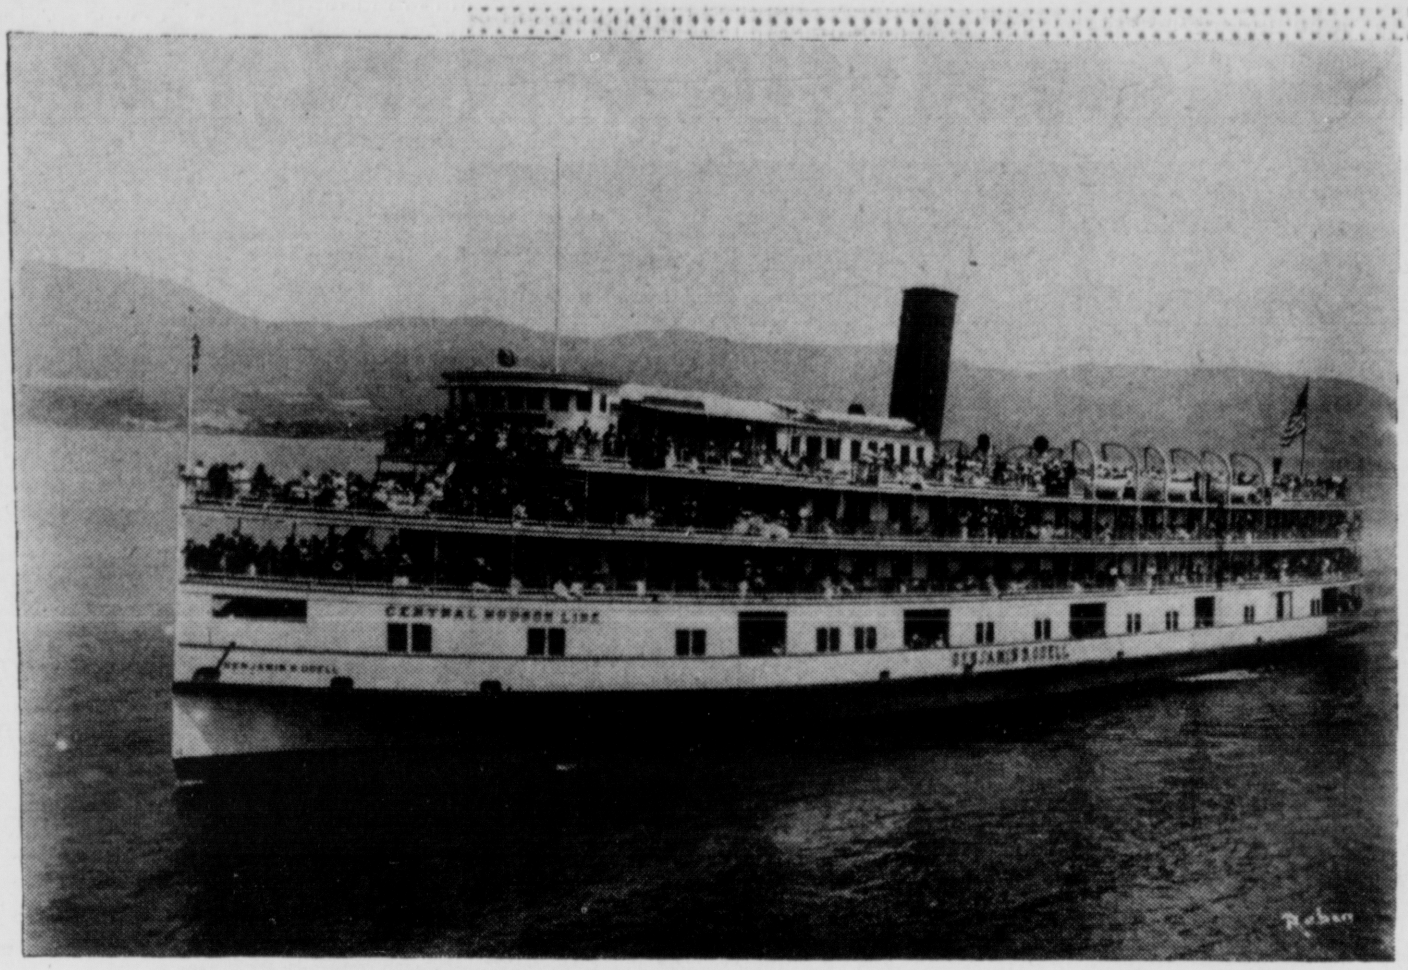
Insists Speiser, "He really believed in the system. He felt it would justify and vindicate him. It destroyed him."

That Bruce's mishmash of gutter talk and obscenities was his way of speaking out against poverty, prejudice and war is part of the intent of Speiser's show. That his belief in the system was misplaced emerges in a searing scene before the bench, as Speiser as Bruce argues on desperately even as he realizes his defeat by the legal apparatus.

If Bruce lives on in this beautiful reincarnation, Speiser emerges as a consummate actor . . . and as his own man. Everything that happens on stage comes through him, despite makeup and props.

Speiser puts it this way: "I have gotten constant reinforcement from the show in being a part of a piece that makes such a definite statement. And by putting so much behind my performance emotionally, I know I am touching people with MY essence through HIS thing. If the show has gone well, people find out a lot about me, and I find out a lot about them after the show by how they've been affected by it. It has helped me as an actor and has helped my confidence as a person to be able to relate to people on a very good, deep level. It's a very nice feeling — it's nice, too, to make a lot of people laugh."

You can see for yourself at Woodstock's Tinker Street Cinema the nights of Nov. 15, 16 and 17 when the nightclub flavor of Lenny Bruce is delivered by Frank Speiser at the nightclub hours of 11 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 10 p.m. Sunday.



The "Benjamin B. Odell" of the Central Hudson Line approaches Newburgh

The 'Odell' And 'DeWitt Clinton' Have A Race

Steamboat racing was once a way of life . . . . when racing was banned due to accidents friendly 'goes' became popular

By CAPT. WM. O. BENSON

Back in the 19th century, steamboat racing was a way of life. After a number of accidents traced directly to racing as the cause, steamboat racing was prohibited. This, however, didn't prevent latter day steamboats from time to time having a friendly "go" if the conditions were right. One such incident took place in June 1922 between the "DeWitt Clinton" of the Hudson River Day Line and the "Benjamin B. Odell" of the Central Hudson Line.

The story of the "race" was related by Lester "Happy" Diehl who was then the 1st Assistant Engineer of the "Odell." At the time, I was coming across Rondout Creek on the "Skillypot" with my brother Algot who was home for a few days from his job as Chief Mate on the steamer "Onteora." We had gone to Rondout to get a copy of the old New York World, the newspaper my father always liked to read.

"Happy" was also a passenger on the "Skillypot" and, on seeing my brother, said "Hey, Algot, you ought to see what we did to the 'DeWitt Clinton' coming up on Sunay." As he told the story, I was all ears.

It had been a beautiful summer's Sunday. As boatmen used to say, both boats were crowded to the guards. The "Odell" was a soft coal burner in those days and the "Clinton" burned hard coal to make her steam. As the "DeWitt Clinton" was leaving her pier at Yonkers, the "Odell" was just a little ahead. A south wind was blowing making the flags, while underway, hang limp from the flag poles. The black smoke from the "Odell" went straight up in the air, as did the blue smoke from the "DeWitt."

The "Clinton" was about one length of open water astern of the "Odell." Sometimes her bow was only fifty feet off the "Odell"'s stern. But try as she would, she couldn't get out of the "Odell"'s back swell. Up the river they went, both dragging deep in the shallow waters of Tappan Zee and Haverstraw Bay. The only slow down for each steamer was, when passing a Cornell tow, and in those days there were plenty going up and down.

At that time the "DeWitt Clinton" in her second year on the river was a very hard boat to keep steam on with hard coal. On the other hand, the "Odell" was always ready to blow off steam. Nevertheless, like a dog chasing a cat the two steamboats sped up the Hudson. Passengers on both steamers got into the spirit of the occasion, cheering their boat on when one or the other would gain slightly. At times, a slight shift in the wind would cause cinders from one to drop on the other.

A fellow later told me he had stood on the dock at Haverstraw when they went by. How the Cornell tugs "Engels" and "H.D. Mould," that were tied up there over Sunday, rocked and pulled on their lines from the drag of both these big steamers racing up through the bay. Some of the brick scows that were at the brick yards were only half loaded, otherwise he said they would have swamped.

When arriving at Bear Mountain, the "DeWitt Clinton" had to temporarily give up as she had the landing to make. The "Benjamin B. Odell", however, had a landing to make at Highland Falls. When the "Odell" was leaving Highland Falls, the "Clinton" was already underway and coming up fast. By the time the "Odell" was up to speed, she as a scant length in front of her adversary. Captain Greenwood of the "Odell" gave his engineer of the watch, "Happy" Diehl, the extra hook up signal to get around West Point and Magazine Point ahead of the Day Liner.

Of course, when they got off the Military Academy both steamers had to slow down to get around West Point. By pure chance, the pilots of both steamboats blew their whistles at the same instant — the one prolonged blast required by the rules of the road when approaching a sharp bend in the river. Both boats had beautiful sounding steam whistles. How that pleasant sound must have pealed up through those old Highlands on that long ago day.

As the two steamers came up to Little Stony Point north of Cold Spring, there was a Cornell tow on the way down in charge of the tugboat "Edwin H. Mead" with her helper tug the "R. G. Townsend." When they passed the tow, both steamboats had to go dead slow, it was such a big tow. The "Odell" passed to the west of the tow and the "Clinton" to the east. The "Odell" slowed a little more than the "Clinton," so by the time they were clear of the tow the two foes were neck and neck up through Cornwall Bay.

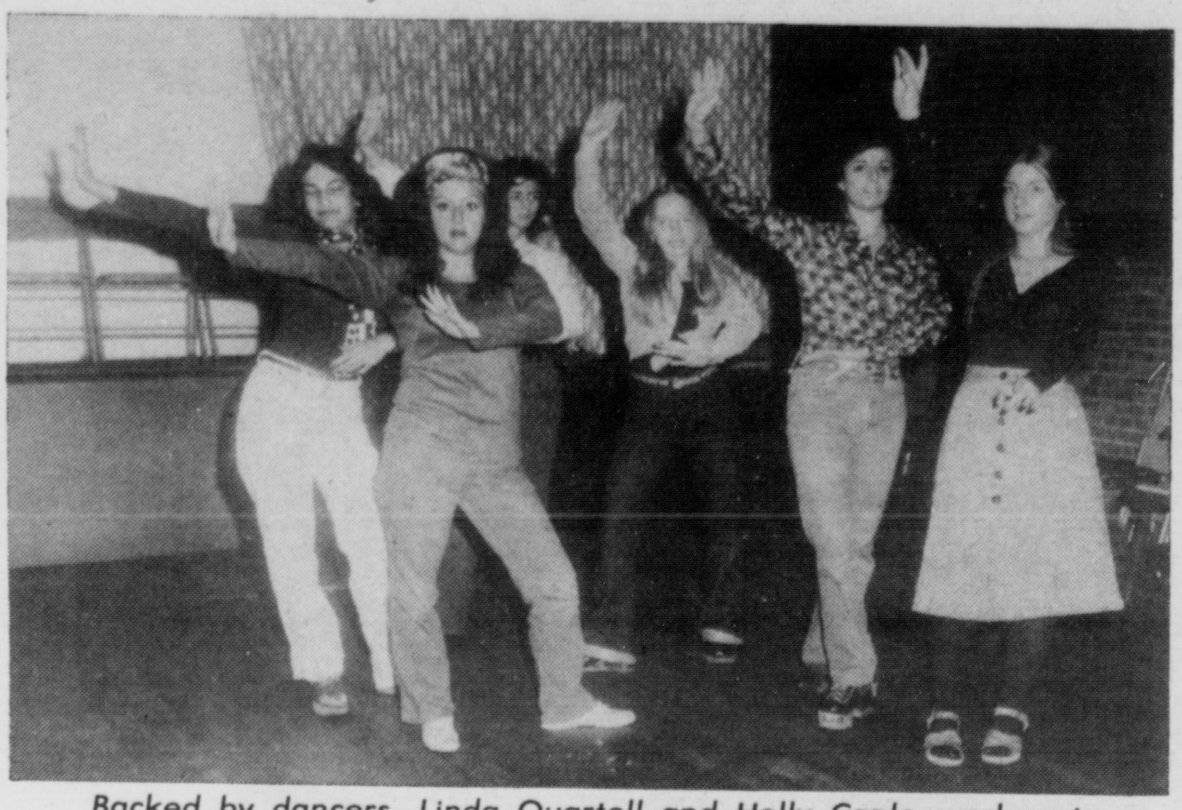
Both steamboats were scheduled to make landings at Newburgh and off New Windsor both began to slow down. As they did, both steamers started to blow off steam since the engineers on both the "Clinton" and "Odell" had their steam pressures at the upper limits. what a racket that must have made over Newburgh Bay and the streets of Newburgh.

When the "Benjamin B. Odell" landed at Newburgh, Mr. Herbert R. Odell, General Manager of the Central Hudson Line, was on the dock and came aboard. He asked Captain Greenwood not to do that again. Whe he gave his admonition, however, Mr. Odell did so with a smile on his face.

Years later I was talking to Jim Malia of the Cornell tug "R. G. Townsend" and asked him if he had been on the "Townsend" at that time. He said he was and remembered the incident well, as the "Clinton" did not slow down enough when passing on the port side in the tow and had done some damage to a canal boat in the tow owned by his uncle. Some chocks had been pulled out and other minor damage.

Actually the "race" between the "DeWitt Clinton" and the "Benjamin B. Odell" from Yonkers to Newburgh had been pretty much of a draw, a brush between two evenly matched steamboats. The following winter, allegedly because of her reputation as a hard steamer, the "DeWitt Clinton" was converted from coal firing to oil burning, the first Day Liner to be so converted. After that, the single screw "Odell" with her 2,500 h.p. enginge was no longer a match for the "Clinton" with her twin screws and 4,000 h.p.

Bouncy Music, Clever Lyrics



Backed by dancers, Linda Quartell and Holly Caple work out routine for number set in the subway in "Bells Are Ringing."

'Bells Are Ringing,' a musical comedy hit of breezy songs and zestful dancing . . . filled with romance and offering fun from Coach House.

While a director's inspiration and conception in shaping a show is never the same from one production to the next, an exceptional director contributes that extra spark that breathes magical life into the performances on stage. Such a director is William Skilling, currently at the helm of Coach House Players' presentation of "Bells Are Ringing," Nov. 14, 15 and 16, 8:30 p.m. at J. Watson Bailey School, Quarry Street, Kingston.

Linda Quartell will play the role Judy Holiday created, that of a telephone-answering operator who can't stop spreading kindness everywhere. Among the recipients of her impulsive meddling is a despondent playwright in a literary slump, with whom she falls in love although she only knows him by his telephone voice. Sam Tesorerio is cast as the desperate author unaware of the real identity of his "good angel." However, hilarious complications develop in the plot devised by Betty Comden and Adolph Green, along with the show's clever lyrics.

Although cautioned by Sue, owner of the answering service, a role played by Nina Werbalowsky, not to get too mixed up in the private affairs of customers, the sunnily optimistic operator can't resist juggling information received on the job. One of the bounciest numbers in the show has the proprietor's suitor, a bookmaker played by Murray Rivette, rehearsing his codes for bettors using the answering service as a drop for wagers and conveyed as orders for classical records. This in turn brings a suspicious police inspector, played by Robert Clemons and his assistant played by Richard Neiman on the scene.

Other memorable characters are created by Tony Ruggeri as a misguided actor mistakenly imitating Marlon Brando; and an appealing take-off based on a real-life character by Gene Heitzman as a dentist more interested in trying to compose songs on his air hose than in filling his patient's cavities.

Linda Houghtaling is assistant to the director as well as Stage Manager and Al Curl is in charge of production and sets. Costumes are by Nancy Neiman, lighting by George Quartell and props by Ginger Curl. Season's tickets may be obtained by calling Mrs. Ray Caddy at 331-5221 or Mrs. Michael Boyle at 679-2073. Single tickets for this musical only will go on sale at J. Watson Bailey School Nov. 6, 7, 11, 12 and 13 between 7 and 8:30 p.m.

79-97 HURLEY AVENUE

The Big Changeover Is Coming!

We're extremely proud of our new building at 79-97 Hurley Avenue and we want to share it with you. Many of our friends and readers have been sidewalk superintendents during the past summer. They have viewed the progress month by month and the usual question they have asked is "When are you moving in?"

We are reaching the final stages; the exterior is nearing completion and the interior is being readied for the "Big Changeover" about to occur in the next few weeks.

DRIVE BY

AND LOOK US OVER

If you haven't been checking our progress, slow down the next time you're driving on Hurley Avenue and look us over. It's a building that's built with one thought in mind . . . to serve you better . . . the customer.

Help Fight Inflation! Get a Job!

Help Wanted: Kids Can Apply!

Want Money?

Get a job and help the family budget. Money is not everything, but learning to be a good worker is important. Here are some ideas! Check the ones that would interest you!

Baby Sitter

Must play with children, straighten up the mess they make and wash the dishes they dirty up while he or she is on duty. Mother will be in the house, but needs to get away from kids.

Dog Walker

Dog lover needed to walk adorable French poodle after school. Must be dependable and able to keep up with owner's front door key.

Pet and Plant Sitter

Bird fancier needed to feed and water pet parakeet and African violet. Sitter must agree to say a few kind words to both bird and plant every day.

Yard Worker

Must be able to weed, mow and rake. On the job training. Bring your own gloves. Worker should be able to tell the difference between valuable plants and weeds.

Car Washer

Will furnish soap, water, wax, vacuum cleaner and car. Bring your own rags.

DEBNAM

WANTED: GOOD WORKERS! EQUAL OPPORTUNITIES FOR BOYS AND GIRLS!

DEBNAM

WOULD YOU HIRE THIS BOY?

Rules for Good Workers!

1. A good worker is on time.
2. A good worker is honest.
3. A good worker is pleasant and willing.
4. A good worker follows directions.
5. A good worker does his work and does not "goof" off when he sees others loafing on the job.
6. A good worker tries to give his boss a better job than he or she expected.

*Be sure that you settle how much you will get before starting on the job.

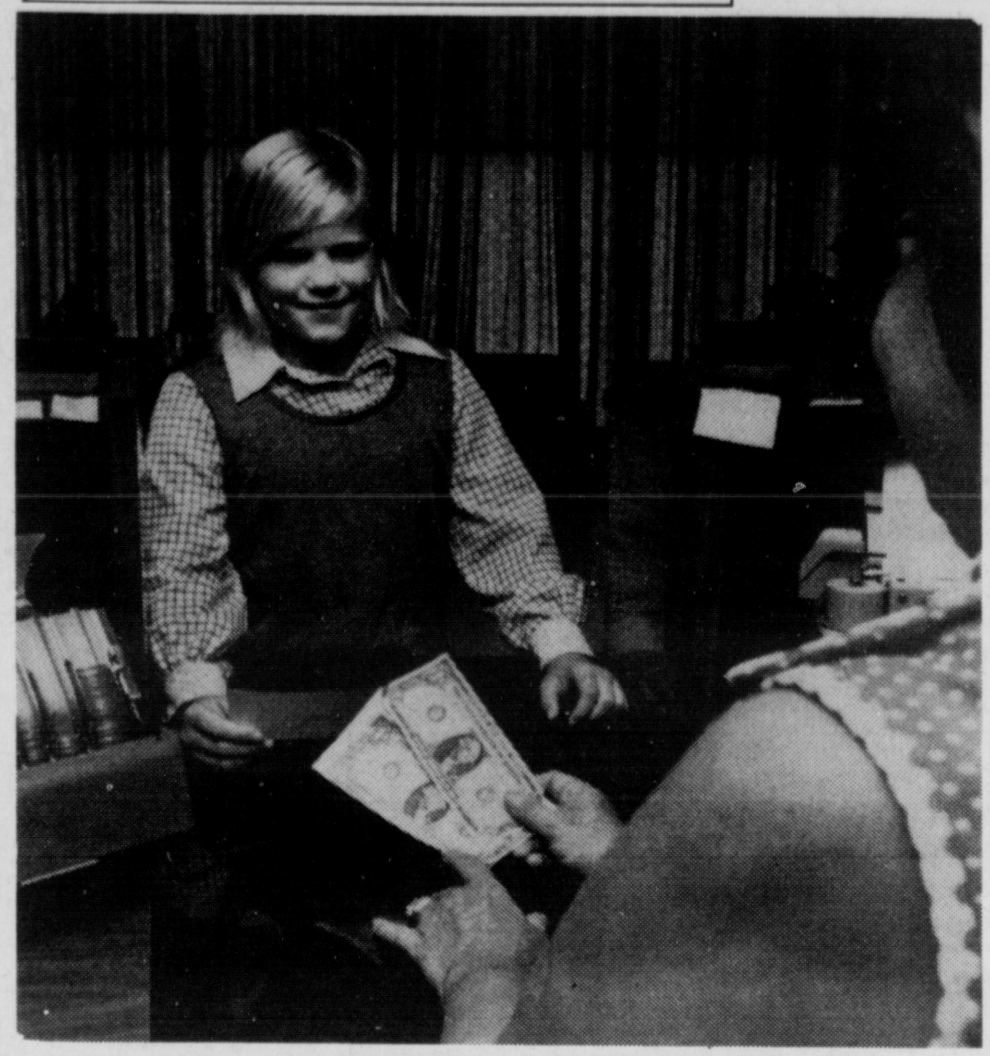
Needed: Wise Savers



NEEDED IMMEDIATELY: Kids to cut out foolish spending. Wise savers can buy their own birthday and Christmas gifts or save up enough money to buy something big.

Kids can also help fight inflation. By putting money in savings and not making purchases, you might cause merchants to lower their prices if they want to sell their goods.

Also, by not buying things, the pressure on natural resources and labor use is less, and this reduces the cost of manufacturing and cuts the prices.

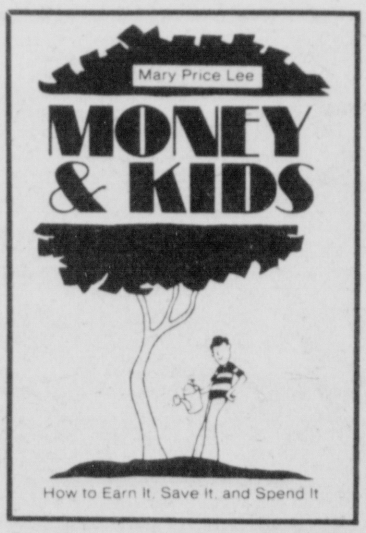
Book Review: Money & Kids

"Money & Kids," by Mary Price Lee, published by The Westminster Press, 1974. 129 pages.



Have you ever wanted to raise money but didn't know how to go about it? This book has some very good ideas.

Included are consumer and budget tips.

There is a chapter on how banks and savings accounts work. Allowances and budgets are discussed.

This is a book that children from the fourth grade up might enjoy.

Set Yourself Up in Business!

This artist sold her paintings at an outdoor art show.

Get your parents' permission before you start, but why not:

- Put on a show and charge admission.
- Organize a garage sale and sell odds and ends.
- Set up a lemonade or bagged lunch stand.
- Start a lending library and charge borrowers.
- Make Christmas presents to sell at a neighborhood bazaar.

Super Sport: Mary Bacon

Mary Bacon is a female jockey who doesn't believe in horsin' around. The pretty 25-year old blonde has ridden more than 300 winners. She earns more than $50,000 a year riding horses.

But it's a rough life, too. Mary has been in the hospital four times in "critical condition." In 1973 the Philadelphia Sportswriters Association named her the "Most Courageous Athlete."

She grew up in Elk City, Oklahoma, and began riding when she was five years old.

Robert Angeloch is deservedly renowned for his landscapes, acclaimed as close-ups of natural phenomena as well as broad vistas of forest, mountain and shore. His skill at painting landscapes is evident in this work, entitled "Inagh."

To Western Kentucky University at Bowling Green, in the Bluegrass State, will go the renowned Woodstock artist, Robert Angeloch, to be artist-in-residence at Western Nov. 15 through Dec. 15.

Angeloch, born in Richmond Hill, N.Y., studied at the Art Students League, with Fiske Boyd in New Hampshire, and at the Academy of Fine Arts, Florence, Italy. While a League student he won the McDowell Traveling Scholarship and visited France, Italy, Austria and England. Past awards include: an Emily Lowe Award; the Herminie Kleinert Award; a Woodstock Foundation Award; the Warner Prize for Watercolor; Berkshire Eagle Prize for Oil Painting; Tyringham Gallery Prize for Landscape and the Crane Award all at Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, Mass.

Other honors received by Angeloch: at Albany Institute of Art, First Prize for Oils, Unrestricted Prize for Oils, and the Jurors Award. He has also been awarded the Purchase Prize of Woodstock Artists Association, Jane Peterson Prize for Landscape at Allied Artists' Annual, and First Prize for Oils, 19th Annual, Museum of Fine Arts, Springfield, Mass.

There was a 10-year retrospective of Robert Angeloch's work at Albany Institute of History and Art in 1965 and major one-man shows at Berkshire Museum and at the the Lewis Gallery, Woodstock. His book BASIC OIL PAINTING TECHNIQUES was published by Pitman in 1970. A mural completed recently for Baisley Park Branch of Queensborough Public Library was the third Angeloch work for a public building, the others being a vertical triptych for Kellogg Research and Development Center in Brunswick, N.J., and a horizontal triptych for a public school in City of New York. He has also shown in national exhibitions at Metropolitan Museum of Art, Museum of Modern Art, Brooklyn Museum, Library of Congress and in other juried museum shows as well as numerous one-man shows in New York City and other art centers.

Critics have acclaimed Angeloch as a modern day Hudson River painter. He has been described as a mature artist displaying a unique integrity and honesty in what he depicts, startling us with his observation of truth. In landscape, his vision seeks out exquisite close-ups of natural phenomena as well as broad vistas of forest; mountain and shore. The designs and energy of nature are also evident in his abstractions. Visits to France, Italy, Austria and England and numerous trips to Ireland, Monhegan Island in Maine the New England Shore as well as the beauty of the Catskill Mountains have all been sources for his paintings.

Angeloch has been an instructor in drawing and painting at the Art Students League of New York since 1964, at Woodstock School of Art since 1968 and at Russell Sage College in 1971-72.

His approach to teaching is of particular interest to people wishing to paint and draw directly from nature. He believes the variety of natural forms in landscape can stimulate a diversity of conceptual approaches which together with control of color and sound technical procedures, are of primary concern in his classes.

The Artist-in-Residence project at Western Kentucky will provide Angeloch with a studio in the Ivan Wilson Center for Fine Arts where he will be available certain hours each week for consultation with students and faculty as well as any residents of that region.

The Angeloch residence is sponsored in part by The National Endowment For The Arts.

POTPOURRI

By JOAN L. WOINOSKI

Capri '400' was alive with activity last Saturday night. It was the annual Armenian American gala. And 'tho one can't pick either his relatives or his nationality, anyone with more than six letters in his named claimed to be "part A." . . . for the night anyhow.

Of course there were the full-bloods like Audrey and Joe Ohnikian, Hermine and Haig Tashjian, then there were the name-changers (by marriage like Virginia Minasian Carpinelli, and Mary Minasian Cramer. But, lo and behold, there were also patrons like Columbia University's Professor Dudley Fuller, Gateway Diner's George Kakoulis, and Kingston's Norm Rafalowsky.

All in all there were 'bout 450 of the liveliest members from America's vast Melting Pot who danced their feet off to folk music played by a band "imported" from Boston. Then, near the bewitching hour, came the climax: a real live raven-haired belly dancer dressed in red satin and black mesh. At that exact moment, the kinds of people at the shindig dwindled down to a precious TWO . . . those who WERE Armenian and those who WISHED they were.

As for Norm Rafalowsky bein' there, it was just two weeks back he took part in arrangements for HVP's smashing performance of "Cinderella;" guess as long as it's good music, Norm doesn't care if it's belly or ballet!

Meanwhile, at the Lounge, another band was playin', a solo pianist treated patrons to top tunes, and bartender Matt Doyle was doin' pretty darn well presentin' a show of his own. With Tony Sinagra as the straight guy and Matt as comic, the Brothers Costello could be headed for stardom . . . via Rowan and Martin manner. Patrons who stopped in for ONE cocktail, ended up stayin', and stayin', and stayin'. It was like bein' invited out for dinner . . . and movin' in!

Speakin' of dinner, Stan and Audrey London were dining at Capri with a party of six. Seein' Audrey reminded us of Schneider's recent display of unusual gems and fine jewelry, the largest ever seen in Kingston.

Among the many "ohin' and ahin'" over the beautiful estate pieces and antique reproductions were Rondout Savings Bank President Jim Norton and Gwen. Asked if he wasn't takin' a chance — what with Christmas comin' and all — that Gwen would decide she'd like one of these and two of those, etcetera, etcetera, Mrs. N. piped up: "He's got no fear my dear. I'm allergic to metal."

On the other hand, however, there was aforementioned Audrey London who does NOT happen to be allergic to metal but DOES happen to have an active charge account there. Audrey was accompanied by Nina Werbalowsky and all we can say is Nina must've been workin' together with Stanley. Everytime Audrey spotted an elaborate piece, Nina would yank her to a budget buy. Now, that's friendship, true blue . . . Give that gal a WIN pin!

Photographic Moments A 'Greenhouse' Show

Glenn Van Bramer, award-wining journalist and communications instructor at Bennett College, is currently featured at The Greenhouse, South Road, Millbrook, where his "Moments, Spring '74" exhibit, a most unusual photography show is on display.

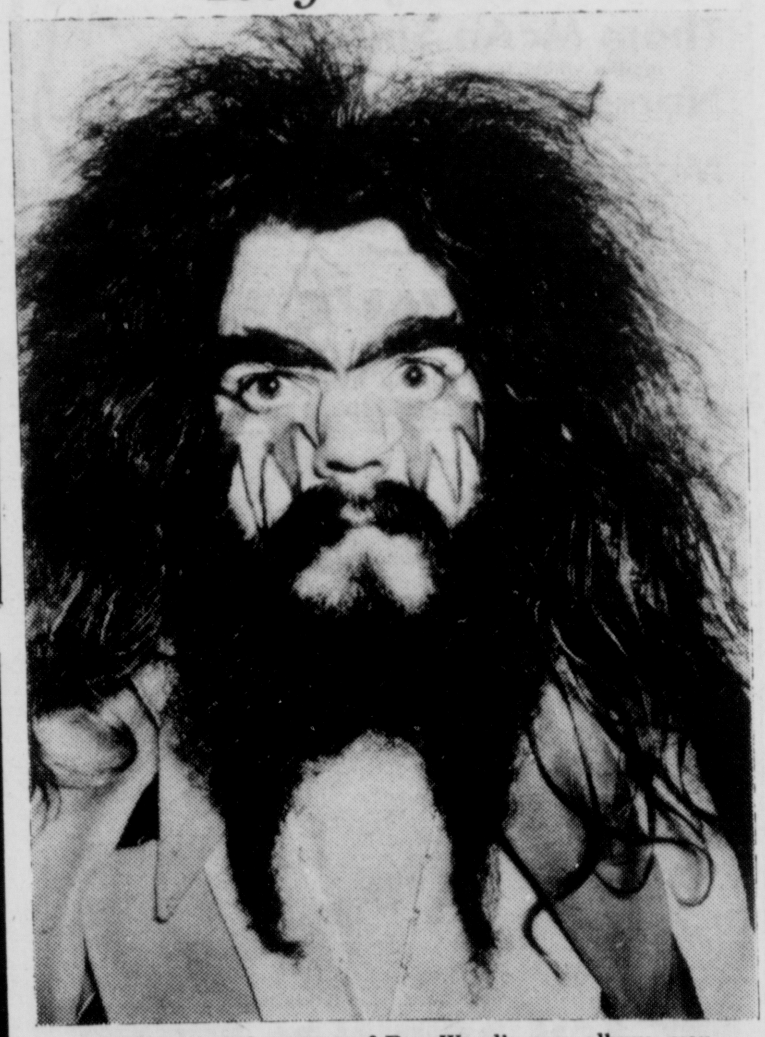
A true "Hudson Valley artist," Van Bramer was born in Poughkeepsie, educated in local schools and graduated from Hamilton College in Clinton. He has been a photo journalist for several area papers, at one time on the staff of the Millbrook Roundtable, and did a series of photos for Time-Life books. He and his family are residents of Millbrook.

The uniqueness of Van Bramer's exhibit lies in his basic philosophy — that he sees photography, not in the traditional sense, but as an artistic idea. He is not concerned with minor technical flaws, the spot of dust, or the complicated processing of film (his work is processed simply and easily through the drug store media). What is important to him is the message of his work — the appeal to the sensitivities of the viewer, the desire to convey FEELINGS, not mere effects, the belief in the eternal cycle of life, reverence for nature, ability to re-arrange visual concepts in expressions of time, space, motion and color and finally to transform what the lens can capture into a poetic statement with a message of timelessness and immortality.

The Greenhouse, plant shop and art gallery combined, is, Van Bramer feels, the ideal setting for his exhibit for here, in this vibrant location, surrounded by plants, nature and creative art, Glenn's philosophies are enhanced in a nature-oriented world.

The school of thought behind Van Bramer's photographic art was known as "New England Transcendentalism" and was instrumental in shaping American values. Centered in the belief that nature is a source of religious reverence, that man's conscience is his first guide, that beauty, comfort and inspiration are found in the simple ways of life, Van Bramer's photographic messages continue the thinking of such great men as Emerson and Thoreau. Art lovers will not want to miss "Moments", twelve soul-stirring glimpses into eternity, individually an inspiration, collectively, a revelation.

Roy Wood



If you've seen the cover of Roy Wood's new album, you might well have wondered if it had anything to do with Halloween. Wonder no more, since it had nothing whatsoever to do with that holiday of haunts and spirits. Wood just wears witch doctor makeup to protect himself from muggers. He scares them before they scare him.

Ancram Musical

Bing Crosby in his more youthful years crooned his way through "BLUE SKIES," the musical co-starring Fred Astaire, Joan Caulfield and Billy DeWolfe. Fans of earlier musical movies will find it featured at Ancram's Operetta Museum today, Sunday, Nov. 10 in a 3 p.m. matinee performance.

For Nostalgics

To feed the hunger for information about early movie making, WNET-TV, New York City's Channel 13, is repeating "The Men Who Made the Movies." Each program examines the works of one leading American film director. One program that will leave you wanting more will focus on the tremendous zest for life of veteran Hollywood director King Vidor, here reviewing a shooting sequence with Wallace Berry during filming of "The Champ." Vidor's works will be presented on the series in the local viewing area the night of Wednesday, Nov. 13.

Sense and nonsense — Firesign, fully capable of making the real seem absurd, and the absurd seem real.

Zany Firesign Theatre . . . Equal Parts Of Reality and Nonsense

By FRANK ROSE
Pop Scene Service

When nothing seems to make sense, nonsense makes more sense than anything else.

That seems to be the secret philosophy of Phil Austin, Peter Bergman, David Ossman and Phil Proctor, the four zany, quick -witted guys who make up an unusual comedy troupe known as the Firesign Theatre.

The Firesign Theatre evolved out of a half-hour radio program known as Radio Free Oz which was broadcast in Los Angeles during 1967. Bergman, who called himself "the Whiz," became the "Wizard" of Radio Free Oz. Austin was producing the show, and Ossman, a former program manager, and Proctor, a student at Yale, soon started collaborating on it.

The group received national exposure in 1968, when Columbia Records released their first album, "Waiting for the Electrician or Someone Like Him," a maniacally sophisticated production which gained them immediate cult status among the disaffected young.

Now — nine albums, two books and two movies later — the four are about to release their latest record, having recently finished their first full-fledged tour of the U.S.

On the new album, to be called "Everything You Know Is Wrong," the Firesign Theatre argues for the existence of life on other planets.

The record is a simulated radio broadcast, with an Army training film about what to do in case of an alien attack, a travelogue about a couple who visited aliens on their vacation and a film about Benjamin Franklin which purports to trace the presence of aliens in history.

There are also commercials for "Bear-Whiz Beer" and "Atlantis Carpets" and an interview with "Ebes Kniebes" as he is about to perform his latest daredevil feat — a leap into the center of the earth.

"We see ourselves metaphorically as aliens," Berman explains, "outerspacies who come to a culture and get a lot of fun out of reading things backwards."

The group's recent stage presentation, "Anytown, USA," was a synthesis of the skits on their first four records. "It's a collage," Bergman says, "and yet another story jumps out of it.

"A lot of the material in the show is a visualization of the albums, which were created as phonograph plays — i.e., theatre which we got on wax first and on stage second. Some of the stuff that has gone onto wax, like 'The Tale of the Giant Rat of Sumatra,' our last album, started on stage. So it moves back and forth with us."

What makes the Firesign Theatre unique is the ability to jump around among different forms of media. But what makes them popular is their fast-paced, multi-level humor which mixes occasional flashes of satire with an overriding sense of absurdity.

Watching or listening to the Firesign Theatre means opening yourself to a constant barrage of stimuli. Talking with Proctor and Bergman — the duo was billed as "half the wits of the Firesign Theatre" when they appeared in nightclubs last spring to promote their own album, "TV or Not TV" — I discovered that interviewing them can mean the same thing.

Discussing the seriousness with which fans treat their work, Proctor suddenly leans forward excitedly. "I recently received a most fascinating paper by a young man who was studying in California," he says. "It was about the use of schizophrenic lannguage by the Firesign Theatre. He shows first the components of schizophrenic language, and then using our work he shows how we represent each one of these aspects.

"It's very enlightening, and it shows us in a peculiar way how we work. Because we work in terms of Clang associations . . ."

"CLANG CLANG CLANG CLANG CLANG!" Berman broke in. "Named after Victor Clang, who started that association. It's an honorary group of schizophrenics — the Clang Association."

I asked Proctor, who looked relatively serene, if he had thought of their humor as schizophrenic.

"I didn't, but he did. — No I didn't! — Oh yes you did! — I didn't — Well, you acted as though you did. — Let's not get into an argument about it, okay? Sometimes I did and sometimes he didn't.

"I would say, however, yes. Seriously speaking — heh heh heh — I have apparently approached comedy from the point of view of alienation. If you can abstract yourself from something it becomes funny. this is tearing the veil off of reality, revealing the true essence of what things are."

The Firesign Theatre's schedule is as busy as one of their comedy sketches. Proctor and Bergman have recently finished a film — also called "TV or Not TV" — and the group as a whole is entertaining ideas for another movie.

Dance Theatre of Harlem will be in residence in this area

For Poughkeepsie: World's Finest Black Ballet

Dance Theatre of Harlem opened its doors in a converted garage in Harlem in 1969 as a school for classical ballet. Two years later a company was formed and made its debut, performing before sold-out audiences across the United States, the Caribbean, and Europe. The company was seen on nation-wide television and this summer in London one critic suggested they extend their season in England to six months.

Performing Arts Festival is in its second year of bringing fine professional companies, with national reputations to this area. Last year the Paul Taylor Company, cited by the New York Times as the outstanding American modern dance company, was in residence giving master classes, workshops on stage craft as well as a performance at Poughkeepsie High School. This year the Dance Theatre of Harlem comes to Dutchess County just two days before its command performance before Queen Elizabeth. Performing Arts Festival II will continue the season with a projected dramatic presentation in the winter and a production of Leonard Bernstein's "Mass" in the spring.

Arthur Mitchell is a man who makes promises and keeps them. After the assassination of Martin Luther King, Mitchell promised to fulfill a commitment to the black community — and to dance — and went on to found the Dance Theatre of Harlem, the finest black classical ballet company in the world. He promised, in a company lecture-demonstration at Poughkeepsie High School in 1972, to return to the Queen City "with costumes and scenery." On Nov. 15 he will keep that promise when Dance Theatre of Harlem performs a full-length program at 8 p.m. at Poughkeepsie High School.

The Dance Theatre of Harlem performance is part of the company's two and one-half day residence in the area sponsored by Performing Arts Festival II. A cooperative venture of Dutchess Community College, Hudson Valley Philharmonic, Poughkeepsie Ballet Theatre, and Vassar College, the residence will include two lecture-demonstrations at the colleges and a master class taught by Arthur Mitchell for advanced ballet students, as well as the Friday evening performance.

Captain Benson's Ship Models

The original STEAMER NEWBURGH, built in 1886, was a familiar freight and passenger steamer on the Hudson River in the early part of this century. But the Newburgh passed forever from the scene when she was broken up in 1951. The well-remembered steamer lives anew, however, in this intricately detailed model by Captain William O. Benson of Sleightsburgh. An attractively arranged display of Captain Benson's Hudson River ship models is currently on view at the Rondout Savings Bank, 300 Broadway, Kingston. The miniature steamers, nightboats, tugs and towboats will remain on exhibit until late November. (Freeman photo by Kruh)

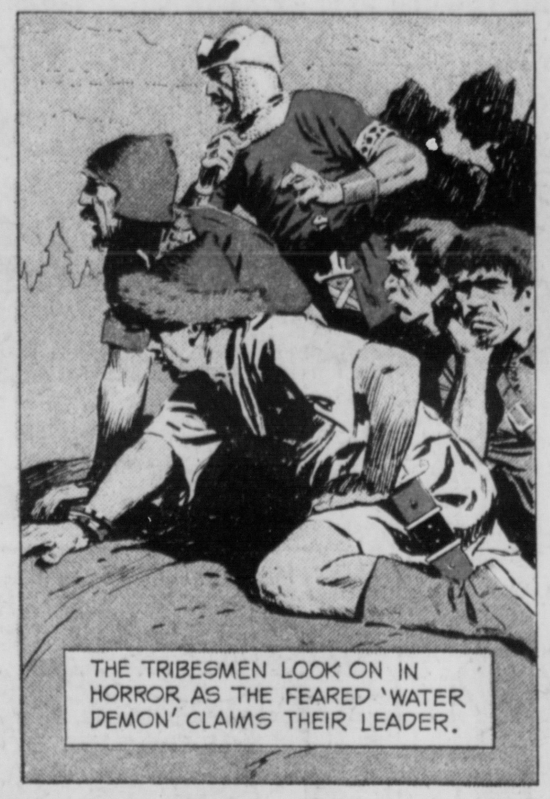
Prince Valiant®

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: KARAK DISAPPEARS FOREVER, WEIGHED DOWN BY THE HEAVY ARMOR THAT HAD MADE HIM INVINCIBLE IN BATTLE. VAL STRUGGLES TO THE BASE OF THE CLIFF AND FINDS A HANDHOLD.



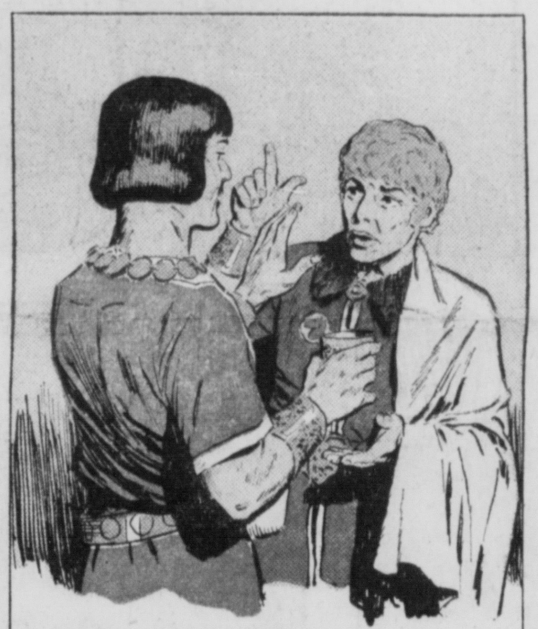
THE TRIBESMEN LOOK ON IN HORROR AS THE FEARED 'WATER DEMON' CLAIMS THEIR LEADER.

AFTER A LONG STRUGGLE IN THE DARKNESS, VAL, BRUISED AND WEARY, CROSSES THE TURBULENT RIVER AND SETS FOOT ON THE INNER LANDS.

ON THE FIELD BEFORE THE STRONGHOLD OF KING HALP ATLA, THE ARMY OF THE INNER LANDS IS ENCAMPED AWAITING THE EXPECTED INVASION OF KARAK AND HIS MERCILESS HORDE.

KING HALP ATLA RUSHES FORWARD: "WELCOME BACK, PRINCE VALIANT. WHEN MAY WE EXPECT THE INVASION OF KARAK AND HIS SAVAGE MEN?"
"IN ABOUT A WEEK," ANSWERS VAL NONCHALANTLY. "I SHOWED THEM HOW TO BRIDGE THE RIVER."

"BUT KARAK WILL NOT LEAD THEM. HE WAS A NUISANCE, SO I FED HIM TO THE 'WATER DEMON.'"
"FATHER," SAYS ARN SHARPLY, "YOU ARE POSING LIKE AN ACTOR AWAITING APPLAUSE!"



"I HAVE BROUGHT AN ARMY ACROSS THE BITTER MOUNTAINS FROM THULE TO DO BATTLE. THEY HAVE SHARPENED THEIR WEAPONS AND THIRST FOR ACTION."

"AND THEY WILL HAVE IT!" CRIES VAL. "AT DAWN YOU MAY LEAD THEM TO THE BRIDGE ACROSS THE BOUNDARY RIVER AND HAVE FUN."
